COAL-TAR INDUSTRY WANTS MORE TARIFF

Committee Says That Under Present Duties Europe Can Hold American Market.

RAW MATERIAL IS HERE

Public Must Pay If United States Is to be Independent of German Enterprise.

The special committee appointed by the American Chemical Society to examine into the feasibility of expanding the manufacture of chemicals and dyestuffs in the United States, because of conditions brought on by the European war, has completed a detailed report which will appear in full today in The Oil, Paint and Drug Reporter. The committee reported that the chemical industry of the country was making full use of all opportunities presented to it under normal conditions prior to the state of hostilities. The report then says:

If, however, it be desired, and if public necessity requires the introduction of the manufacture of explosives and further chemicals and dyestuffs into our home industry, such as coal-tar product explosives, pharmaceuticals, medicinals, and other intermediates and finished coal-tar dyes, then alterations of our tariff laws are inevitable, and the consumer in the first place and the public in general must share in the burden thus imposed.

Under existing circumstances, the report says, private capital and private enterprise have reached their limit. These reasons are given:

The explosive, dye, and similar industries abroad, just referred to, are in a state of high development and of refined organization, and are financially the best suited to carry on an offensive campaign against any nation attempting to take business away from them.

Domestic manufacturers are prohibited by law from making use of co-operative commercial devices, such as pools, trusts, manufacturing and selling agreements, and the like, whereas such devices are wholly lawful abroad, and are encouraged by the respective Governments. In other words, the American chemical industry is expected to cope with the foreign industry while both its own and the hands tied behind its back and its opponents have full and free use of their arms.

Taking up the question of the availability of raw material, the report says:

The best information your committee has so far been able to gather is that this country can produce so-called coal-tar raw material in amounts sufficient for the needs of a complete domestic coal-tar chemical industry, inclusive of explosives and dyes, provided there is a certainty of outlet as to volume and continuity. Those engaged in manufacture here do not want to expand unless the dye users are willing to make corresponding contracts. In other words, it is a closed circle. If the dye users will contract sufficiently with the dyemakers, the dyemakers will contract with the coal-tar distillers and the industry will take a start. The initiative rests wholly with the users; if they cannot afford to contract the dyemaker and the distillers cannot afford to make their contracts and additional investments.

The members of the committee were: Bernhard C. Hesse, Chairman; J. B. F. Herreshoff, H. A. Metz, I. F. Stone, D. W. Jayne, J. Merritt Matthews, and Allen Rogers.

1,500 Immigrants at Concert.

Some 1,500 immigrants, including more than 300 who had been ordered deported but were unable to get back to Europe, were entertained yesterday on Ellis Island by the Department of Street Cleaning Band and by 600 members of the United German Singers of Brooklyn. The concert was one of a series that was started soon after Frederic C. Howe took office as Commissioner of Immigration. Joseph F. Kelly sang "It's a Long Way to Tipperary," which seemed to be enjoyed as much by the German and Austrian immigrants as the others.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—The first week of November was unusually dry and warm in the great interior valleys and the South. In the lake region and New England changeable weather prevailed, but with little precipitation.

The first general rain of the month in the Mississippi and Ohio Valleys occurred Sunday.

Fair and colder weather is indicated for Atlantic Coast districts north of the Carolinas Monday and Tuesday.

FORECAST TODAY AND TUESDAY.

Western New York, Eastern Pennsylvania, and Western Pennsylvania—Fair Monday and Tuesday.

BANKRUPTCY SALES.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT.

Notice is hereby given that Henry Lesser, Trustee in Bankruptcy of the above-named bankrupt, will offer for sale the property belonging to the estate of the above-named bankrupt, hereinafter described.

Sealed bids for same will be received at the office of Henry Lesser, the Trustee, at his office, No. 320 Broadway, in the Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, and opened on the 9th day of November, 1914, at 3 P. M. Each bid must be in writing and must clearly state what it is for and must be accompanied by a certified check to the order of the Trustee or cash for 10 per cent. (10%) of the amount of the bid. The Trustee reserves the right to reject any and all bids.

The following is the property for which bids will be received:

(a) For all the merchandise contained in premises of the above-named bankrupt at 220 West 42d Street, in the Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, and all the fixtures, trademarks and outstanding accounts belonging to the said bankrupt. The said property may be inspected at the premises above mentioned between the 26th day of October, 1914, and the day of the sale, between the hours of 10 A. M. and 5 P. M.

Should the Trustee elect to reject any and all the bids, the said property will be sold at public auction sale by Charles Shongood, United States Auctioneer, on the 6th day of November, 1914, at 10:30 A. M., in the forenoon of that day.

Dated New York, October 24th, 1914.

SOCIALISTS CHEER LONDON'S VICTORY

APPLAUDED FOR 15 MINUTES

Nearly 12,000 persons gathered in Madison Square Garden yesterday afternoon to celebrate the first big Socialist victory in New York—the election of Meyer London to Congress from the Twelfth District. Their meeting was noisy and enthusiastic. A lively air by the band brought the crowd to its feet cheering, every oratorical outburst meant a thundering interruption, and when Congressman-elect London appeared as the last speaker the crowd cheered for almost fifteen minutes.

The gold-lettered red banners of a hundred or more Socialist organizations were hung around the walls of the Garden from the first balcony, and representatives from the organizations vied with one another in shouting their rallying cries back and forth across the hall. A brass band of forty pieces that played many stirring tunes gave repetitions of the "Marseillaise" and "International." The crowd joined in singing both songs, particularly the latter, which is a medley of the revolutionary songs of all nations, with the song of the convicts on their way to Siberia as its leading motif.

Every local organization and society at all socialistic in its propaganda was represented in the hall. The Church of the Social Revolution held its regular Sunday afternoon meeting outside the Garden, after which its members marched in to hear the speakers. The Rand School of Social Science occupied part of the balconies from which some of the loudest cheering came. Much Socialistic literature was distributed and sold throughout the hall.

All Pay for Seats.

One of the features of the meeting was that every one who occupied a seat paid 15 or 25 cents for it, and in addition a collection was taken up. All of the proceeds, it was said, would be devoted to the campaign expenses, past and future, of the Socialist Party. A petition calling upon President Wilson to establish food supply depots for the public in opposition to the "food speculators" was circulated in the audience and generally signed.

Most of the speakers predicted an uninterrupted succession of Socialist triumphs. But Mr. London told his auditors that they exaggerated the importance of capturing one Congressional seat. The most significant and important thing that had happened in America in recent years, he said, was that in 1912, when there were three big parties with three popular leaders in the field, the Socialists polled 1,000,000 votes in the Presidential race. In referring to President Wilson in this connection, Mr. London described him as "one of the ablest men this country has produced." Col. Roosevelt he called "one of the greatest men in America."

"The business of socialism," he said, "is to give intelligence to discontent. The masses must be made more intelligent, they must be made to think. That they are in woeful ignorance was shown in their nearly overthrowing the Democratic Party in the last election. After they had put the Democrats in power and by their votes authorized them to carry through certain reforms, many tried to turn the party out before it had finished what it was commissioned to do.

"When I take my seat in Congress I do not expect to accomplish wonders. What I expect to do is to take to Washington the message of the people, to give expression there to the philosophy of socialism. I want to show them what the east side of New York is and what the east side Jew is. I am confident that I will get fair play. I will be given my opportunity, and I do not intend to abuse it.

Socialists Poor Organizers.

"Do not let yourselves be deceived by this victory. You are good noise-makers, but you are poor organizers. Organize now for the next campaign. Organize for victory, not by violence, but by the greatest of all forces, the force of human intellect. Give the people your message clearly and make them think about it. Right now Europe is paying the penalty for ignoring the advice of the Socialists, and America will have her penalty to pay unless she heeds the advice of socialism. Give this advice so that it will be heeded."

James Larkin, an Irish labor leader, who arrived in America on Election Day, prophesied great things for the Socialists and admitted that they wanted "the earth." He, too, warned the audience not to think the big fight had been won in Mr London's election. He attacked the English Labor Party, saying that it had been captured by non-Socialists and men who did not have the real interests of labor at heart. Exhorting the people to fight for socialism and that alone, he said:

"If it's men you are fighting for, your movement is damned, but if it's a great principle you will triumph."

Socialism in Ireland was bigger and better than in America, Mr. Larkin said.

All of the speakers looked upon their victory as a repudiation of Tammany Hall. William Karlin compared the victory in the Twelfth to the capture of the 203-Meter Hill at Port Arthur by Japanese, and said it meant Tammany's entire stronghold would fall. He also said that 10,000 men on the east side had promised him to become citizens within a year and to vote the Socialist ticket. The Standard Oil Company he characterized as "the economic black hand of America."

Abraham Cahan, editor of The Jewish Daily Forward, denounced the crowned heads of Europe, and when he mentioned the name of Czar Nicholas boos and hisses were heard all over the hall. Morris Hillquit, another speaker, called attention to the fact that Mr. London was the only Congressmen in New York who needed Madison Square Garden for "an afternoon reception." Other speakers were Jacob Panken, Benjamin Feigenbaum, and Morris Winchewsky.

ARREST BOY FOR A KILLING.

15-Year-Old William Salz Accused of Shooting John Buckley.

William Salz, 15 years old, of 229 East Eighty-fourth Street, was arrested at Eighty-fourth Street and Third Avenue last night by Detective Cousens of the Third Branch Detective Bureau and accused of having shot John Buckley, 13 years old, of 322 East Eighth Street last Tuesday afternoon. The boy professed entire ignorance of the crime, but he was sent to the Children's Society, the particular charge against him being juvenile delinquency.

Young Buckley was shot when he and several of his friends who had gathered wood for an election bonfire at Eighty-fourth Street and Third Avenue became engaged in a fight with another group of boys. He died in the Presbyterian Hospital a short time after being taken there.

SLAVERS' ACCUSER SEIZED.

Found Armed She Says She Fears Vengeance of Foes.

Searching for a man wanted for homicide, Detectives Batto and Reppetto of the Bronx Detective Division sought admission last night to the apartment of Maria Guisto in the tenement house at 266 East 154th Street, the Bronx, where Mrs. Delia Nealy Hanson, whose testimony convicted six white slavers, was found several months ago.

The young woman admitted the detectives, but when she saw them she ran into another room, took a fully loaded revolver from her apron pocket, and threw it into a corner. She was arrested, charged with having the weapon in her possession. She pleaded that she had carried it to protect herself from several alleged white slavers who had been released in the Hanson case. Although she did not know them, she said, she had heard they were about the house, and feared them.

IN NEW JERSEY.

MONTCLAIR.—The Board of Education intends to build a $100,000 addition to the Watchung School. Two new schools have been built in the past year and a $500,000 high school building is under way.

MONTCLAIR.—Supt. Elias of the Montclair schools reports that in the first month of the new savings accounts for children 700 accounts were opened and $420 deposited.

WHIPPANY.—James Talbott of Morristown, while hunting turtles yesterday, found an old game bag in which were the barrels of a gun and a note dated Nov. 10, 1897, signed "Ezra L." It read: "My gun is broke and so am I, so I came to a dead place to die. Don't look for my body here, for I've gone home to cash in. Don't drink Irish whisky if you want a clear head."

HACKETTSTOWN.—The apple crop was so large this year that besides the many used for cider and applejack, and the great quantities bought by commission men and stored, much of the crop has been ground up and mixed with grains for stock food.

MORRISTOWN.—On the word of a New York clairvoyant that the body of his father, missing for three weeks, was in a pool at Whippany, Joseph A. Tuzis organized a party which searched all the ponds in the neighborhood without result.

CITY COLLEGE BOY MISSING TWO DAYS

Abraham Schwartz's Mind Is Thought to Have Been Affected by Overstudy.

BROTHER STARTS SEARCH

Abraham Schwartz, 18 years old, of 451 East 135th Street, the Bronx, a second-year student in the College of the City of New York, was reported missing yesterday by his brother Frederick. The brother said that Abraham left home Saturday evening to go to the public library at Alexander Avenue and 143d Street, and had not been heard from since.

The police were unable to learn whether he went to the library. The only explanation offered by the family for his disappearance was that he had suffered a mental breakdown from overstudy and had lost his memory temporarily. His brother scouted the idea that he left his home deliberately.

The youth was graduated from the De Witt Clinton High School with honors two years ago. He is 5 feet 6 inches in height, 140 pounds in weight, and has brown hair and eyes. He wore a gray suit, a blue chinchilla overcoat, a blue felt hat, and black shoes.

Postmastership Goes A-begging.

Special to The New York Times.

BRANCHVILLE, N. J., Nov. 8.—The Postmastership of Bevans, a hamlet in Sandyston Township, is going a-begging. Yesterday no condidate appeared to take civil service examinations to succeed George V. Johnson, a merchant, who resigned, because in a year and a half his salary was less than $100. He is paid in fees.

NOVICE'S AUTO HITS WOMAN

Driver Not Detained, Though Victim's Skull Is Fractured.

An automobile driven by John Harvey of 212 West 143d Street, who said he was a student at the Cosmopolitan Automobile Training School at Eighth Avenue and Fiftieth Street, knocked down Mrs. Lewis Mendelsohn of 327 Central Park West, yesterday as she was about to board a northbound surface car at Ninety-third Street and Central Park West. She suffered a fracture of the skull and was taken to Polyclinic Hospital, where an operation was performed. It was said late at night that she was in a critical condition.

Harvey was not detained by the police and members of Mrs. Mendelsohn's family started an investigation. At her home it was said that the family knew little about the circumstances. Mr. Mendelsohn, it was said, was ill at his home. Mrs. Mendelsohn is 58 years old.

HIT BY WOMAN AUTOIST.

Mrs. Isleib's Motor Crashes Into a Store After Injuring Stahnten.

After running down Albert Stahnten, 22 years old, of 81 Niagara Street, Newark, at Elizabeth and Clinton Avenues yesterday afternoon an automobile owned and driven by Mrs. William Isleib of 9 Eastman Street, Cranford, N. J., crashed into the front entrance to the grocery store of Giles Van Duyne & Son at 320 Clinton Avenue, breaking two large plate glasses and wrecking the frame work.

Mrs. Isleib was not injured. Stahnten was injured about the head and body and was taken to St. Barnabas's Hospital.

FLAMES SWEEP 250 ACRES.

VINELAND, N. J., Nov. 8.—Although most of the forest fires in this State have been reported either under control, or entirely subdued, there was a disastrous one this afternoon which burned more than 250 acres of woodland on the place of Walter Ellis, two miles east of here.

Farmers hurried to the place and kept the fire from spreading.

60,000 HUNTERS LICENSED.

Rabbit and Grouse Season in New Jersey Will Open Tomorrow.

Special to The New York Times.

NORTHFIELD, N. J., Nov. 8.—Sixty thousand licensed hunters in New Jersey are awaiting the opening of the season on Tuesday. Rabbits, quail, partridges, pheasants, grouse, squirrels, and all water fowl which may be shot will be found more abundant than in many years. The dryness of August, September, and October permitted game to propagate.

The Board of Fish and Game Commissioners has sent thousands of game birds to districts considered the best for restocking, and a decrease in violations of the game laws has been noted.

Restrictions this year include the prohibiting of the shooting of wild turkeys and the limit law. A gun carrying more than two shells is prohibited by law.

TO MOVE SHERMAN STATUE.

Monument Will Be Shifted to Make Way for the Subway.

The statue of Gen. William Tecumseh Sherman, which stands at the entrance to the Park in Fifth Avenue, will be moved this morning from its present position 200 feet to the northeast to make room for the subway, which is to run directly underneath it.

The statue weighs 160 tons and great care must be taken in shifting it. A new base has been prepared on which the statue will rest. The work will be done by Drew Brothers.

THERE IS ONLY ONE
ALAN DALE.
Read What He Says of Joe Weber's

"The Only Girl"

So everything's a big success? And every production in this tumor of a Metropolis has hit the Bull's eye?

I read it, even if I've never written it. Gorgeous Utopia! Glittering commercial pipe-dreams!

But, if every attraction in New York is great, then, my dear Joe Weber, let me say that "The Only Girl" at the 39th St. Theatre is GREATER. The delightful import of this jolly, frolicsome and artistic little play must be raised above the truck of the so-called "great" and the "tremendously successful."

I remember "The Only Girl" when it was "Our Wives"—without song—at Wallack's.

Even then I loved it for its quaint and witty humanity But in its present shape it has Blossomed forth. The librettist, far from damaging the book, has improved it, and Victor Herbert has given to it his choicest and easiest. It is a musical, farcical comedy, without the curse. Without the blare and blatancy of the Tenderloin—free from the ministrations of the "merry-merry" this amusing little play will appeal to those whose hair doesn't start at the eyebrows. It has distinction and gaiety—two qualities that are rarely combined—and just as you did in the "Climax" you have given it a cast of unsophisticated merit that such an ingenuous little piece demands.

"The Only Girl" is a cinch It has snap, verve, humor, jollity, intuition, demureness, and, don't let us forget, refinement. It snaps its fingers at that greatest enemy of polite achievement—the "Tired Business Man." It will bank with certainty upon that gentleman's wife who, after all, is the keenest patron of good things. Let me pay my compliments to little Miss Wilda Bennett—a real find—to Adele Rowland, whose song "You Have to Have a Part to Make a Hit" is charming—(even if you don't have to have a play now-a-days)—to little Miss Vivian Wessell and to Mr. Thurston Hall. "The Only Girl" is the only sort of musical show that kind of puts one on good terms with one's self. For one feels happy without being humiliated.

This to Salesmen.

YOU men who sell, whether your business keeps you in the city or out of it, know how much of your success depends upon your personal appearance.

Good clothes, then, are a tremendous asset to you.

And, as one of the biggest points you have to make in selling your goods is the value they offer, you must realize the strength of our argument for Hart, Schaffner & Marx clothes.

At $18, $20 and $25 we offer suits and overcoats that we honestly believe are the best possible values to be found anywhere.

Bank Reported Sacked By Mexico City Mob

VERA CRUZ, Nov. 9.—According to private telegrams received here, the National Bank of Mexico City has been sacked by a mob led by Constitutionalist soldiers.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 9.—It is now considered certain that Gen. Carranza has determined to resist the mandate of the Aguascalientes Military Convention deposing him from power and elevating Gen. Eulalio Gutierrez to the Provisional Presidency. From Cordoba the First Chief has issued an order, in the form of a proclamation, requiring all Generals who personally attended the convention to withdraw therefrom and place themselves at his order by 6 P. M. on Nov. 10, (tomorrow.) Forces under Generals who disown the First Chief are informed that they must obey the officer next in rank who remains faithful to Carranza.

The hour named in the order, 6 P. M. tomorrow, coincides with the expiration of the time given to Carranza by the convention to retire or fight.

It is realized here that the issue is now clearly defined and that nothing apparently can prevent a new appeal to arms. Persons in a position to know say many will be surprised when the strength of Carranza's military backing is seen.

Obregon Loyal to Carranza.

Gen. Obregon has left no doubt of his intention to remain loyal to Carranza. Gen. Obregon, who was one of the delegates the convention sent to notify Carranza of its action, said, speaking at a luncheon at Cordoba: "We have no intention of rallying around Francisco Villa, whom I can never trust."

Gen. Obregon added that in the convention he had held that it would be a crime to remove Carranza and leave Villa in power, but that everything possible must be done for the country's salvation.

"Let us sacrifice Carranza and eliminate Villa, and if he resists let us die fighting him," Gen. Obregon concluded.

In a last effort for peace, Gen. Jacinto B. Trevino, who for a time was Gen. Carranza's Acting War Minister, tonight wired to Gen. Gutierrez begging him to prevent the threatened renewal of civil war.

Gen. Obregon and the other Carranza Commissioners arrived here at 7 o'clock tonight, and soon afterward got into telegraph communication with Aguascalientes.

Messrs. Obregon and Hay telegraphed to the convention that Carranza was willing to withdraw his conditions with regard to Zapata, but wanted to be assured of Villa's effective retirement, and insisted that the convention must draw up a programme of social and economic reforms which the new Pre-Constitutional President should carry out. If all this were done, Carranza would resign.

In a statement issued tonight reasons are given why Villa shot the Argentine citizen Francisco Mugica. It is said that Mugica distributed on a northbound train copies of the newspaper El Liberal containing "The Reply of First Chief Venustiano Carranza to the Bandit Villa." For having distributed these newspapers, it is asserted, Mugica was removed from the train at Guadalupe de Zacatecas and shot in Villa's presence. Mr. Carothers, the representative of the United States Government, is said to have witnessed the scene, peeping under the blind of his Pullman car.

It is also stated that trains between Rincon de Romos and Zacatecas are frequently held up by Villistas, who, using violent language and with pistols cocked, ask the passengers what they think of Villa. In Zacatecas Villa's soldiers are said to compel peaceful passersby to shout "Viva Villa." The statement continues: "The brutal tyranny reigning in that region has no parallel in the world's history. Even Huerta's tyranny pales in comparison. The insolence of the Villistas respects nobody, not even members of families who have the misfortune to set foot outdoors."

Gutierrez Names His Cabinet.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 9.—Gen. Carranza today issued a proclamation declaring himself the chief head of the republic. The proclamation, issued at Cordoba, was directed to the military chieftains and the civil employes of the Central Government, who were ordered to obey Carranza as First Chief of the Constitutionalists and to disregard totally the mandates of the Aguascalientes convention. To the military chieftains he said that unless they left the conference and were back at their posts by 6 o'clock Tuesday evening their next in rank would assume their places.

Gen. Gutierrez, appointed Provisional President by the convention, has proclaimed himself the chief executive be-

LION LOOSE AS SHIP TOSSES IN A STORM

Some Sailors Volunteer to Drive Him Back Into His Cage But Others Climb Rigging.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 9.—Thrilling stories of a battle with a lion which broke from its cage during a raging gale in midatlantic were told today by the crew of the steamship West Point, which landed its cargo of more than seventy-five wild beasts, destined for Prospect Park, Brooklyn.

From the time the steamship left London until it docked at Pier 25, north of Callowhill Street today, life aboard the ship was one horror after another. Bedlam reigned and sleep was impossible. Some of the crew, ancient mariners, used to sleeping when the fiercest gales are blowing, said that it was impossible for them to get any rest on the westward voyage of the West Point. Roaring of lions, chattering of monkeys, shrieking of jackals, and the whining of coyotes kept them in a constant state of uneasiness.

The continual pitching and rolling of the ship made the animals seasick and at times aroused their anger. The constant lunging of the vessel also weakened the cages holding these denizens of the jungle. On Thursday last, before the vessel reached the Delaware Breakwater, a large lion burst through his cage, and his escape was not discovered for a short time. Because of the delay caused by bad weather the vessel was two or three days late and food for the animals had run short. The lion was hungry, and his first thought was for food. He made for a cage containing a white mule, and was trying to tear the bars apart when H. B. Goodkin, an employe of Bostock's, who was in charge of the animals, saw him, and shouted for assistance.

When the word spread among the sailors that a lion was loose and help was needed to get him back into his cage, two or three of them volunteered to go, but most of them fled to the upper decks, and some to the rigging of the vessel. After an hour's work, however, Goodkin and his volunteer helpers by dint of skilful manoeuvring and prodding with sharp pronged pitchforks, managed to shepherd the lion back into his cage.

When the vessel arrived here another exciting incident occurred. While a cage containing a large black bear, weighing 500 pounds, was being lowered into a car, the animal battered the entrance of the cage loose. It took five attendants almost half an hour to beat bruin back into his cage and repair the door. While this was going on, longshoremen, who were unloading the ship, had sought safety on top of box cars and in the rafters of the pier.

BRITISH WORKERS DROPPED.

English and Scotch Employes of German-American Co. Lose Jobs.

Special to The New York Times.

METUCHEN, N. J., Nov. 9.—Thirty-two Englishmen and Scotchmen employed by the German-American Stoneware Company, owner of the Phoenix Ceramic Works here, found their jobs "vacant" this morning. Last week Leonard Albrecht of New York, general manager of the company, came here and stated that prices paid for piecework would have to be cut.

There are more than 100 Germans and Austrians employed as laborers, while the piece work is done by the thirty-two Scotch and English. The reduction affected them only, and they promptly went on strike Saturday, after a conference of the owners, who are Germans, a notice was sent out that the Scotch and English were no longer in the employ of the company.

$10,000,000 FOR BUILDERS.

Chicago Contractors First to Benefit by Reserve Banks.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Nov. 9.—An indication of improving business conditions in Chicago is found in the fact that negotiations were opened today by contractors and real estate operators for loans aggregating $10,000,000. The money is to be used in construction on delayed buildings. This is regarded here the first big step toward prosperity, as a direct result of the "loosening of money" through the establisment of the Federal Reserve banks. Builders said today that Chicago bankers were accommodating them freely now that a definite date has been fixed for the opening of the reserve banks.

Several loans extending into millions of dollars are said to have been closed. These will be applied at once to the work delayed by the sudden contraction of loans two months ago. The contractors say they are willing to take at least $10,000,000 within thirty days. After that they will take as much more as the Spring building demand requires. The property awaiting development is in the three extremes of the city—north, west, and south. Most of it is in the suburbs, although several large factory buildings are to be erected on the west side.

"I feel confident that it will not be many weeks before money rates will ease off," said Mr. Reynolds this morning. "Conditions are such that the turn seems almost at hand."

ORDER FOR 20 SUBMARINES.

BOSTON, Nov. 9.—An order for the immediate construction of twenty submarines has been placed with the Fore River Shipbuilding Corporation of Quincy. Officials of the plant today refused information as to the identity of the power for which the submarines were intended, but one officer of the corporation said the order would amount to about $10,000,000.

The order came to Quincy through the Bethlehem Steel Corporation at South Bethlehem, Penn., of which Charles M. Schwab is President.

The submarines are not to be turned out as completed vessels, but as finished sections, to be assembled afterward.

GREEK MINISTER RECALLED.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—The Greek Minister, Mr. Schliemann, announced today that because of a disagreement with his Government's policy, which made it impossible for him to carry out certain instructions, he had received from Athens, he had been recalled, and that Mr. Vourcs, former Chargé d'Affaires, had been instructed to take over Greek interests here.

It was explained at the legation that the Minister's differences with the Government were over internal affairs only, and that all parties in Greece were united in upholding the Government's foreign policy.

KITCHENER SURE ALLIES WILL WIN

ENTHUSIASM AT GUILDHALL

CHURCHILL PRAISES NAVY

Says Convoy Work Postpones a Great Battle — Stronger Than When the War Began.

LONDON, Nov. 9.—That England is prepared to carry on the war to the bitter end, with every confidence in the result, was the tenor of the speeches at the annual banquet inaugurating the new Lord Mayor of London at the Guildhall this evening. Notable speeches were made by Prime Minister Asquith, Field Marshal Lord Kitchener, Secretary for War, and Winston Spencer Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty.

Lord Kitchener, whose massive figure, clad in service khaki, towered over the audience of a thousand men and women in the historic building, while expressing satisfaction at the response to his call for men and the progress of their military training, impressed upon the nation that the war would be a long one and he would require "more men and still more, until the enemy is crushed."

The Guildhall has been the scene of many civic and national functions in the past 500 years, but seldom has there been one which so strongly appealed to the popular imagination. The guests, who numbered a thousand and included the leading statesmen, diplomats, and financiers, entered the civic headquarters of London between two lines of khaki-clad riflemen. As each dignitary entered the reception hall he was greeted with rounds of cheers, but the real outbursts were reserved for Premier Asquith, Lord Kitchener, Secretary for War; Winston Spencer Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty; the Japanese, Russian, and French Ambassadors, the Belgian Minister, and the commander of the Canadian contingent.

As these entered the hall, which was decorated with the flags and coats of arms of the allied nations, the enthusiasm knew no bounds, the entire assembly rising to welcome them. The military men, including Lord Kitchener, wore service uniforms of khaki; the Ambassadors and other diplomats were in the brilliant uniforms of their rank.

The principal speech of the evening was that of Lord Kitchener, who expressed confidence in the ultimate success of the Allies, by the advantages which they possessed in men and material and "in that wonderful spirit which has never understood the meaning of defeat."

Lord Kitchener praised the Territorials, particularly the London Scottish and the East Indians, spoke of the admiration of the British troops for "the glorious French Army," and said:

"Under the direction of Gen. Joffre, who is not only a great military leader, but a great man, we may confidently rely on the ultimate success of the allied forces in the western theatre of the war."

Britain 'Fighting for Existence."

He praised the brilliant leadership of Grand Duke Nicholas and also "the splendid deeds of the gallant Belgian Army" and the bravery of the Japanese forces. Continuing, Lord Kitchener said:

"The British Empire is now fighting for its existence. I want every citizen to understand this cardinal fact; for only from a clear conception of the vast importance of the issue at stake can come the great national impulse without which the Government's War Ministers, or even their navies, can do but little. We have enormous advantages in our resources of men and material; and in that wonderful spirit of ours which has never understood the meaning of defeat. All these are great assets, but they must be used judiciously and effectively.

"I have no complaint to make whatever about the response to my appeals for men. The progress in the military training of those who already have enlisted is most remarkable, and the country may well be proud of them; but I shall want more men, and still more, until the enemy is crushed.

"Armies cannot be called together as with the magician's wand, and in the process of formation there may have been discomforts and inconveniences—in some cases even downright suffering. I cannot promise that these conditions will wholly cease, but I can give you every assurance that they have already greatly diminished, and everything that administrative energy can do to bring them to an end assuredly will be done. The men who have come forward must remember that they are enduring for their country's sake, just as their comrades are in the shell-torn trenches.

"The introduction of elaborate destructive machinery with which our enemies had so amply and carefully supplied themselves has been the subject of much eulogy on the part of military critics, but it must be remembered that in the matter of preparation those who fix beforehand the date of a war have a considerable advantage over their neighbors. So far as we are concerned, we are clearly open to no similar suspi-

DE WET'S SON KILLED; 364 BOERS CAPTURED

LONDON, Nov. 10.—"Gen. Christian De Wet, the rebel leader," says Reuter's Pretoria correspondent, "has been in contact with and has dispersed a small Government commando under Gen. Cronje, a member of the Legislature, near Doornberg. In the course of the fighting Gen. De Wet's son Daniel was killed.

Reuter's Cape Town correspondent, under date of Monday, gives the following official communication concerning the fighting in South Africa:

"An engagement between Gen. Lammore's forces and Transvaal rebels under Gen. Christian Beyers occurred on the Vet River southeast of Bloemhof on Nov. 8. The rebels, well armed and led by Beyers, were entirely dispersed, losing 9 men killed, 11 men wounded, 364 prisoners, 300 rifles, and 300 horses.

"The loyalists' casualties were 3 men killed and 9 wounded."

A dispatch from Cape Town says:

"Dr. W. B. Rubusana, a native physician and member of the Cape Provisional Council for Tembuland, recently offered to raise 5,000 natives for service against German Southwest Africa. Dr. Rubusana has now been informed by the Government that, while it appreciates the loyal sentiments of the natives, it does not desire to avail itself of the services as combatants of citizens of non-European descent in the present hostilities."

CONCERTS TO REVIVE WAR-HIT APPETITES

London Hotel Seeks to Dispel Gloom and Draw Knitting Women from Their Rooms.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 9.—One of the biggest hotels in London plans to give frequent concerts in an effort to dispel the gloom of the war and improve the appetites of its patrons. An official of the hotel said today that whereas some carefree Americans were able to eat $9.25 dinners the English seldom spent more than $1.75. Especially among the women had the decline in appetite been noticeable, he said. This he ascribed to worry and lack of exercise, the latter the result of remaining too much in their own rooms knitting for the soldiers. Another substantial element was a desire to be economical.

It was explained that the concerts would draw the women out of their rooms to a place where they could knit in a musical atmosphere. This in turn would invigorate the appetites of the women—"and when women eat it is a sure thing the men will not be outdone," the hotel man explained. Incidentally good music would dispel the prevailing depression.

ESCAPED ATTACK FROM AIR AND SEA

Thrilling Tale of How French Cruiser Engaged Aeroplane and Submarines.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov. 9.—A thrilling story of how a French cruiser was engaged with an aeroplane and submarines simultaneously is told by a midshipman, who says that the French cruiser Waldeck Rousseau was heading for Cattaro in the small hours of the morning and was warned that three hostile submarines had stolen out from their base to get her. The day had scarcely broken when an Austrian biplane also came sailing through the air straight toward the cruiser, hovering at not more than 1,500 feet above the ship.

Unmoved, apparently, by the hail of shot from quickfirers, the biplane let fall a bomb, which splashed into the sea only about thirty feet to starboard, abaft the bridge. A second bomb just missed the port quarter.

At the same moment a lookout signalled that a submarine was only 800 yards to the starboard side of the cruiser. The submarine discharged a torpedo almost as soon as she was sighted, but the cruiser had had time to shift her helm and the deadly missile went swirling by not more than three feet from the stern. Before the submarine could make a second shot the cruiser had blown away its periscope and another broadside must have sunk her, for she was never seen again.

Another submarine came sneaking up on the other side and a destroyer endeavored to draw the cruiser's fire while the submarine crept in and dealt a deadly blow. The Waldeck Rousseau was easily a match for the two of them, and shortly after the destroyer turned and ran for harbor with a nasty list to port, while the submarine dived to escape the storm of shell and did not show itself again.

GERMANS QUIT DEFENSES

FIGHTING NOW FOR CRACOW

BIG PRIZE IN EAST PRUSSIA

PETROGRAD, Nov. 9.—The following communication from the Russian General Staff, issued tonight, shows that the advancing Russian forces are sweeping with great speed on to the frontier of Posen and approaching Thorn, the southernmost fortress of the great defensive line of the Vistula, running northward through Prussia to Danzig:

On the East Prussian frontier fighting continues. The Russian troops have occupied Goldapp. In the direction of Mlawa, (Poland,) we have advanced and stopped the movement of railway trains of the enemy, near the station of Soldau, (East Prussia.)

Beyond the Vistula the Germans have withdrawn from Wloclawsk to Nieschans, and from Konin to Slopzy.

On the roads to Cracow we are continuing to push back the rear guards of the Austrians.

South of Przemysl, Nov. 7, we captured 1,000 prisoners and a number of cannon.

On the coast of the Caucasus, Nov. 6 and 7, cruisers of the enemy made their appearance.

What is described here as the continued and irresistible offensive of the Russian Army resulting in the evacuation of Polanr by the Germans is reported as successfully establishing itself in German territory at Pleschen, thirteen miles west of the Russo-German frontier, thus threatening the German line of communications.

Along the South Polish frontier the Russians attacked the Austrian rear guard at Pinozow, which commands an important crossing on the upper Vistula, twenty-five miles from Cracow. It is asserted that a general retreat of the Austrian forces on Cracow as a new base is now apparent.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 9, (Dispatch to The London Daily News.)—All the zones of contact now are inside German territory.

The Russians took 1,500 wagons laden with coal standing on railway sidings in East Prussia in positions the Germans had evacuated.

The Russian cavalry, which invaded Posen, has pierced the left flank of the enemy at the crossing of the Warthe at Konin. These cavalry operations with strong supports have nullified the entire defensive preparations of Germans inside the Polish frontier.

The Russians now hold without resistance the great line of entrenchments running from Czenstochowo southward on Cracow and northward on Kalisz. German reserves and local forced labor had been employed for a month digging and equipping these works, which were built buttressed like underground dwellings. Now all are abandoned.

LONDON, Tuesday, Nov. 10.—A Reuter dispatch from Kiev says:

"Three thousand German and Austrian prisoners, including ninety officers, together with fifty guns and several thousand rifles captured in the recent fighting, have arrived here."

CAPTURE 4,000 RUSSIANS.

Germans Also Take Ten Maxims on East Prussian Frontier.

BERLIN, (via Amsterdam to London,) Nov. 9.—The following was contained in a report issued by General Headquarters this forenoon:

In the eastern war theatre an attack by strong Russian forces north of Wyschtynez Lake has been repulsed with severe Russian losses. Four thousand Russians and ten machine guns were captured.

Summary of War News.

The French War Office announces that the Allies continue their progress on the battle line between Dixmude and the Lys, and also along the Aisne. The attacks of the Germans on Dixmude and in the region of the Ypres were repulsed yesterday.

The German Army Staff admits that the Allies have started an offensive movement in Belgium. Sorties near Nieuport during Sunday night failed completely, it is said, while attacks southwest of Ypres were repulsed and several hundred prisoners taken. The progress made by the Germans in their attacks on Ypres continues, it is said, in spite of obstinate resistance.

The Russian General Staff reports that fighting continues on the East Prussian frontier, with the Russian Army steadily advancing. The movement of German railway trains near Soldau has been stopped, and beyond the Vistula River the Germans have withdrawn further. The Austrians are being pushed back closer to Cracow, and south of Przemysl 1,000 prisoners and a number of cannon have been captured.

The German report states that a strong column of Russians has been defeated near the Wyschtyniz Lake, in East Prussia, and 4,000 prisoners and many machine guns have been captured.

The British cruiser Glasgow, which was engaged with the German cruisers off the coast of Chile on Sunday, Nov. 1, and the British transport Otranto are reported safe in the Straits of Magellan, bound for the Falkland Island base.

Lord Kitchener, speaking at the Guildhall banquet last night, declared his belief in the ultimate success of the Allies, and announced that 1,250,000 men were now training in England to join the forces in the field. Other speakers echoed his note of confidence.

RUSSIANS TAKE TURKS' FORT NEAR ERZERUM

In Pursuit of Kurdish Cavalry—Armenian Students Enthusiastic Volunteers in Petrograd.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 9, (Dispatch to The London Daily Chronicle.)—The Caucasian Army continues to operate successfully against Turkey. Most important is its seizure of a stronghold twenty-five miles east of Erzerum. The defeated Kurdish cavalry has been scattered in small bands in the valleys and passes south of the Russian frontier, and part of the Russian force is engaged in sweeping it up in order to prevent it from raiding communications.

The Kurds, supported by regulars and armed peasants, tried to advance to the northeast of Karakilissa, but were repulsed with heavy loss. The Kurdish cavalry, known as the Hamidieh, is stationed at Alashkelt, Hassan Kalet, and along the Persian frontier. Several bands of Persian irregulars under the leadership of Amir Heshmat, former Chief of Police at Teheran, and Ibrahim Bey are operating on the Turco-Persian frontier.

The persecution of the Armenians has begun in earnest. Armenian refugees are pouring across the Caucasian frontier, and they say that the Turkish troops have orders to shoot all Armenians who are met near the frontier. It is rumored that Armenian bands are attacking Van.

Armenian students are volunteering in hundreds for the Turkish campaign. Last night I saw a party of sixty leave for the Caucasus. Large crowds of students gathered to bid them farewell. There was great cheering and hearty singing of "God Save the Czar" and Armenian national songs. An Armenian priest made an impassioned speech, urging the Armenians to volunteer for the liberation of their oppressed brethren, and his hearers were roused to an ecstasy of enthusiasm.

Van is an ancient city, the capital of the Asiatic Turkish province of the same name, and the seat of important American missions. It has a population of about 30,000.

Russian Victory on the Araxes.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 9, (Dispatch to The London Morning Post.)—On Saturday the Turks made a determined effort to oust the Russians from a very important position taken the day before at Kohrikol, on the River Araxes, thirty-two miles from Erzerum. This region is one of mountains, one of which rises more than 8,000 feeet at Erzerum, with a fortress on its summit.

The Turks moved up two divisions under cover of large bodies of Kurd light horse from Hassan Kalet, ten miles further along the highroad to Erzerum. This force had forty-eight field guns and several pieces of heavy artillery. The Russians had occupied heights which the Turks stormed repeatedly, always being repulsed in vigorous assaults which aimed at turning the Russian right flank. The fight lasted the greater part of the day, and was decided by a bold movement of Cossack mountain batteries which gained the heights in the rear of the Turkish forces and proceeded to shell them from an entirely unexpected quarter.

The result was that the Turks broke and fled precipitately, first on their left, then along the whole line. The Russians thus remained in possession of the next stage of the highroad to Erzerum, which they will probably reach today or tomorrow. The remnants of the broken Turkish forces are dispersed among the defiles and passes of an extremely difficult mountain country.

Turkish Fleet Bombards Poti.

The Turkish fleet is apparently still pursuing its policy of carefully avoiding a meeting with the Russian fleet. This is contrary to Turkish traditions. In their wars with Russia the Turks on the sea have never shown the white feather, even against overwhelming odds.

The latest Turkish exploit is the bombardment of the open town of Poti by a cruiser believed to be the Breslau, which fired 150 shells at the town, the railway station and the lighthouse, doing damage described as insignificant.

GLASGOW AND OTRANTO SAFE NEAR CAPE HORN

British Cruiser and Transport in the Straits on Way to Falkland Base.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

VALPARAISO, Chile, Nov. 9.—The Delgada lighthouse reports that an English cruiser passed there on Wednesday and Dungeness lighthouse sighted two ships on Thursday which were supposed to be the British cruiser Glasgow and the transport Otranto. They were making for the Falkland Islands. The Glasgow's funnels were damaged.

The hospital ships Valdivia and Chile are still searching for survivors of the naval battle of Sunday a week ago, but without result.

The steamer Crown of Galicia has arrived at Valparaiso with British war materials. German cruisers are said to be awaiting her outside.

SANTIAGO, Chile, Nov. 9.—The British cruiser Glasgow, which was engaged with the German squadron in battle off the Chilean coast on Sunday, Nov. 1, and the British transport Otranto, have passed Evangelista Point Light, in the Straits of Magellan, bound for the Falkland Islands, a British possession to the east of the extreme southern point of South America.

This information is contained in advices received here by the Admiralty from the naval authorities in the Straits of Magellan, who said they had seen the Glasgow and Otranto passing through the straits toward the Atlantic.

After the cruiser Good Hope had been sunk by the Germans and the Monmouth was so badly damaged that she appeared unable to steam away, according to the British Admiralty report of the sea fight off Chile, the Glasgow accompanied her as she drifted away in the darkness. The Admiralty said the Glasgow was not extensively damaged and had very few casualties, although during the battle she had fought the Leipzig and the Dresden, while the Scharnhorst and Gneisenau were engaged with the two larger vessels. The Otranto, the Admiralty said, was not engaged in the fight.

THE EMDEN ESCAPED, BUT LOST STORE SHIPS

German Cruiser Fled from British Warship—One Prize Sunk and One Captured.

LONDON, Nov. 9.—A Sydney, N. S. W., dispatch to The Evening News says that the skipper of the steamer Parom, arriving from Singaport, reports that after the German cruiser Emden's success in sinking the Russian and French warships at Penang, the German warship and the storeships were overtaken by a British cruiser.

The speedy Emden fled, but the British man-of-war sank one storeship and captured the other.

KARLSRUHE'S ISLAND BASE.

Has Coal and Stores Off Brazil Coast and Five Cargo Vessels.

EDINBURGH, (via London,) Nov. 10.—An officer of the freight steamer Pruth, which was sunk by the German cruiser Karlsruhe off the coast of Brazil, has arrived here. He says the Karlsruhe is using an island called Bocas Reef as a coaling and supply base, and that there the Germans have a large quantity of coal and stores.

"Officers of the Karlsruhe told me," said this officer, "that they expected to be captured by the British before long, but that meanwhile it was their painful duty to do as much damage as possible to the enemy's commerce.

"They were very polite and gave us twelve hours to leave our ship. Then they took off the provisions and the ship's papers and blew up the Pruth with dynamite. We were transferred to the Crefeld, which was one of the five cargo boats accompanying the Karlsruhe and which she was using as scouts."

YPRES CENTRE OF BATTLE

Both Sides Claim Gains in Bitter Combat in That Region.

CITY WRECKED BY SHELLS

Dixmude Also the Object of a Bombardment by German Forces.

ALLIES' SHIPS JOIN FIGHTING

PARIS, Nov. 9, 10:43 P. M.—Continued progress on the battle line between Dixmude and the Lys, and also along the Aisne, was chronicled in official bulletins issued by the French War Office today, which also stated that German attacks on Dixmude and in the region of Ypres had been repulsed.

The night bulletin said:

There has been no notable modification in the situation by reason of the difficulties which an intense fog has created, in connection with operations of any extent.

In the north the day has been good. We have maintained our positions between the River Lys and Langemarck, and made appreciable progress between Langemarck and Dixmude.

The afternoon bulletin was as follows:

On our left wing the Germans have undertaken again an offensive movement on Dixmude and in the region of Ypres. Particularly to the southeast of Ypres their attacks have been everywhere repulsed.

At the end of the day, referring to the entire front between Dixmude and the Lys, we have made progress along the major part of the line. Nevertheless, our advance is slow on account of the offensive movements undertaken by the enemy, and because of the strong organization the enemy already has had the time to effect around his points of support. Since the beginning of the fighting the fog, furthermore, has made operations difficult, particularly between the Lys and the Oise.

On the centre, along the Aisne, the progress set forth in the official communications of yesterday has been maintained.

In the Argonne and in the vicinity of Verdun there have been only actions of minor importance.

In Alsace fresh attacks on the part of the Germans directed against the heights of Mount Ste. Marie have again resulted for them in a decided check.

Repel Attacks of Allies' Ships.

LONDON, Nov. 9.—A dispatch from Berlin, received tonight by the Marconi Wireless Telegraph Company, says:

"Main headquarters reports that several of the enemy's ships again attacked our right wing yesterday afternoon, but were rapidly driven off by our artillery."

BERLIN, (via Amsterdam and London,) Nov. 9.—A report issued by General Army Headquarters this forenoon says:

During the evening a sortie of the enemy from Nieuport, which was repeated during the night, completely failed.

In spite of obstinate resistance, our attacks on Ypres are progressing slowly but steadily.

RAIN OF GERMAN SHELLS MAKES YPRES A RUIN

Fine Old Buildings Destroyed—Lone Woman Fights Flames With Buckets of Water.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WITH THE BELGIAN ARMY, Nov. 8, (Dispatch to the London Daily Chronicle.)—Ypres is in flames and the greater part of this fine old Flemish town is a ruin. Early this morning the Germans managed to get the range with their heavy artillery, and from dawn onward 11-inch and 13-inch shells were poured into the city.

The town itself is deserted and no loss of life resulted from the heavy shell fire.

A naval officer, who left Ypres this morning, said the only living things in the town were an aged and crippled woman and a dog. The former was vainly attempting to quell the sweeping [illegible] buckets of water.

flames greedily licked at the houses, the majority of which are timbered, and soon the western side of the town became a mass of red hot wreckage.

High powered explosive shells and in some cases, I am informed, incendiary shells fell into Ypres at the rate of ten to twenty a minute.

The chief object of the Germans appeared to be the Halles, the most notable Gothic edifice of its kind in Belgium. Much of the structural work dates from the thirteenth century.

The tower of the Cathedral of St. Martins also is partly in ruins. This building is an example of the transition style and dates from 1221. Many paintings, chiefly from the brushes of pupils of Rubens, are reported to have been carried away in safety.

In the northern quarter of the town, where were many fine old buildings, considerable damage was done by fire and shells.

If any stimulus to recruiting in England is needed, it should be provided by recounting the deeds of the Scots Guards and the Scots Greys, who defended the British positions at Messines south of Ypres. Their bayonet charges and subsequent saving of a perilous situation is no less glorious than the deeds of the London Scottish.

In their effort to break through the Germans had massed enormous forces at this point. The brunt of their attack was borne by the Scots Guards and Greys.

For some time the issue seemed in doubt. It appeared to be impossible to resist the overwhelming numbers of the Germans. A devastating shell fire raked the British lines, and it looked as if retirement was imminent.

Under the heavy fire the Germans sent forward their hordes to sweep the British back by sheer weight of numbers. The fighting took place on open and level ground, where there was little room for tactical movements. It was a hand-to-hand encounter in which British grit proved the deciding factor.

The conflict was short and sharp. The German advance was stemmed and finally it was rolled back. The British losses were heavy but the situation was saved.

DIXMUDE IS BOMBARDED.

HAVRE, Nov. 9, (via Paris.)—The Belgian Government issues the following:

The situation at Nieuport is stationary, with slight advantage to us. On the remainder of the front almost complete quiet prevails.

The enemy still occupies on the right bank of the Yser several points of support, which have been cannonaded by our artillery. Dixmude has been bombarded by the enemy.

BELFORT READY FOR SIEGE.

Defenses Extend to Frontier—Called Twice as Strong as Port Arthur.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov. 9, (Dispatch to The London Standard.)—Special correspondents who have visited Belfort lately say that the lessons of Liége, Namur, and Antwerp have not been lost, and that Belfort is now in a position to withstand any German assault. Experts consider the place more than double as formidable as Port Arthur.

While recognizing that the time has gone by when any fortress can be declared impregnable, it can be asserted that Belfort would prove a veritable cemetery of slaughter if attacked.

Its offensive and defensive works run right up to the frontier. Every man and boy for miles around has been engaged upon the defenses, and their labor has not been in vain.

NORMAN THWAITES WOUNDED.

New York Newspaper Man a Captain in the British Army.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 9.—Capt. Norman Thwaites, for many years on The New York World staff, who has been fighting on the Aisne, has arrived in London, having been severely wounded in battle last Tuesday.

Capt. Thwaites, who served in the South African war, returned to England as soon as war was declared, and was appointed to a Lieutenancy in the Dragoon Guards. He was sent to the front a few days after his arrival here. Since then he has been through some of the heaviest fighting in the North of France, and been promoted to the rank of Captain.

He is now lying in the officers' hospital at 7 Charles Street, Mayfair, having been shot through the chin and throat by a spread bullet that first struck the trench and then hit him, but luckily missed the jugular vein.

Despite his wound, Capt. Thwaites is perfectly cheery and full of confidence that the Allies will win. He says that except in artillery the Germans are outclassed as fighters by the British and French troops. The British artillery, he thinks, is even more destructive than the German. Capt. Thwaites was in trenches three days and nights before he was wounded, for the cavalry were employed as infantry. Their horses were sent five miles to the rear and officers and men went into the trenches, armed with rifles.

His squadron had given a check to the advancing German detachment when Capt. Thwaites was hit and immediately afterward a shell struck the trench, burying him under a pile of earth, but his men dug him out with their hands.

Later the squadron was relived, and when he had made his report he was taken to the rear.

The next thing he knew he was in a turnip field, recovering from a fainting fit due to loss of blood. Fortunately he was near a road and he was removed in a motor ambulance.

Capt. Thwaites said that the ambulance and commissariat of the British forces could not be excelled. While it was impossible, he said, to convey an adequate idea of the deafening, stupefying effect of the heavy German shell fire, the spirit of the men remained superb. Thwaites's regiment suffered heavily throughout the fighting.

HOLLAND NOT PRO-GERMAN.

So Says Dutch Newspaper Man, Writing to Clemenceau's Paper.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov. 6.—L'Homme Enchaîné prints a letter from a Dutch newspaper man, for ten years a resident of Paris, who replies to M. Clemenceau's assertion that Holland is pro-German beyond the limits of neutrality. The writer regrets that M. Clemenceau did not give his reasons for thinking this, though presumably based on information from correspondents. He continues:

"I know Holland intimately. Any such statement is erroneous. The Dutch population is distinctly 'anti-Boche.' I have just received a characteristic letter from a professor in Amsterdam University, who, though his mother is German, denounces the German atrocities more violently than the most anti-German French newspaper.

"Does Belgium's experience, can you blame Holland for wanting peace? But was the Dutch mobilization directed against [illegible] Germans?

"You [illegible] supplying food to Germany. I say that the Dutch are not supplying her, but can we prevent the Germans who commercially invaded Holland, as they did Paris, from sending non-contraband materials? Does Dutch charity toward the millions of Belgians strike you as pro-German?"

M. Clemenceau comments on this:

"I have not attacked the attitude of the Dutch Nation, which the correspondent doubtless represented correctly, but I maintain that the Dutch Government is markedly less anti-German. Surely public opinion is able to influence the leaders if it is so definitely friendly to France."

CALLS KAISER A MAHDI FOR WHOM MEN DIE

Correspondent Pictures Terrible Ypres Combat Where Humans Are Mere Targets.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

IN NORTHERN FRANCE, Nov. 9, (Dispatch to The London Daily Chronicle.)—Ypres is now the storm centre, and after a ten days' battle of guns, which was beyond doubt the most ferocious and bloodiest episode in this war, the Germans are endeavoring to repair their shattered strength by bringing up every available man and gun for another bout of slaughter.

When the history of the past ten days comes to be written in detail, if ever the truth is told, it will be recognized as the most awful conflict in which humanity has ever been tried.

Heroism shines through it here and there. The resistance and nerve strength of the British troops have been almost superhuman, and the French have fought with a gallantry beyond all praise. But mainly, on both sides, it has been simply a slaughter in which all human qualities have been annihilated, or at least stupefied, by the destructive power of the artillery.

"We just wait for death," said a Belgian officer last night, "and wonder if it doesn't reach us out of all this storm of shells. It is war without soul or adventure. In the early days, when I scoured the country with a party of motor scouts, there was some sport in it. Any audacity we had or any cunning could get some kind of payment. The individual counted. But now, in the business around Ypres, what can men do, infantry, cavalry, or scouts? It is the gun that does all the business, heaving out shells and delivering death in a merciless way. It is gun against gun, with men as the targets, as helpless as the leaves torn from these Autumn trees around us by the storm of hail. Our men are falling like the leaves, and the ground is heaped with them, and there is no decisive victory on either side. One week of death is followed by another week of death. The position changes a little, that is all, and the business goes on again. It is appalling."

This same phrase was used to me last night by a surgeon who had just come from the station where the latest batch of wounded, thousands of them, were lying on straw.

"It is appalling," he said. "The destruction of this shell fire is making shambles of human bodies. How can we cope with it. What can we do with such a butchery?"

The German losses must be enormous. How great it is impossible to say. I sometimes fear that we have a tendency to overestimate the proportion of casualties among an enemy superior to us in sheer weight of guns. Be that as it may, there is no doubt that during these last ten days they have sacrificed themselves with the kind of valor such as heaped the fields of Omdurman with Sudanese. The Kaiser is the new Mahdi for whom men die in masses, going with fatalistic resignation to inevitable death.

After a lull for burning and burial and for refilling the great gaps in the regiments and divisions, the Germans are moving against the Allies with new masses and again inevitable death awaits them. In spite of all their guns, the Allies will hold them again. I believe that, but I know that once more there will come back another tide of blood and agony, which will make the doctors say in their quiet, unemotional way: "It is appalling."

FRENCH VICTORY IN CONGO.

BORDEAUX, Tuesday, Nov. 10, (via Paris.)—It is officially announced that in the region of the Sanga River, in the Congo, French troops, commanded by Gen. Aymerich, drove the Germans from the larger part of the territory lost in the 1911 convention. The military post of Nzimon was retaken after two days' heavy fighting on Oct. 29.

The Belgian Congo put at the disposition of the French forces the steamer Luxemberg and 150 soldiers. On Oct. 22 a column commanded by Col. Hutin captured Nola and made prisoners of several officers and many sharpshooters. Four quick-firing cannon and munitions were also taken.

The operation, it is stated, assures to the French the possession of the town of Basanga.

SEES FATAL DUEL IN AIR.

French Artilleryman's Account of Sharp Encounter of Aviators.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov. 9.—The Intransigeant prints an account of an air duel from the lips of a wounded artilleryman. He says:

"My battery was crossing an open plain when the humming of an aeroplane motor, like the noise of a huge fly, was heard above. Instantly every one stiffened and was silent. Some one whispered:

"'I recognize the Boche motor. It is certainly a German biplane.'

"All crouch near the ground for the purpose of remaining unnoticed.

"Suddenly another aeroplane appears.

"'That's a French mono,' whispers my well-informed comrade. We can see the tricolor emblem.

"They are going to fight. Both mount. Suddenly the rattle of a quick-firer bursts from the German. The monoplane dives sharply sideways.

"'My God, he's hit,' cries an officer near me.

"No, 'tis only a manoeuvre. The Frenchman, dodging the fusillade, mounts to deliver a broadside. His big adversary seeks vainly to escape. The more agile monoplane outmanoeuvres, diving under him and delivers the broadside.

"The enemy veers upward as if trying to escape, but dense smoke spouts from the steel carcass. He dips downward and then glides in a long volplane toward a neighboring clover field.

"We run toward him cheering, but the biplane clears the clover field and seems about to rise again. Then it pitches head-first into the swamp beyond. Flames shoot from the wreck. We find the occupants, a Captain and a sapper, both burned and mangled.

"Amid cheers the victorious monoplane, the pilot of which is a well-known airman, now a Sergeant, disappears."

REFUGEES SHUN ANTWERP.

German Seizure of Food May Soon Bring Shortage to City.

ANTWERP, Nov. 9, (via The Hague and London.)—The people of Antwerp who fled from the city at the time of the German occupation are still unwilling to return. The German demand for a war indemnity of $10,000,000 is keeping many away.

German troops have been almost invisible in Antwerp since Saturday. The Town Hall has no military guard before it. Within the building the German administrators and officials of the Belgian Civil Government work peacefully under the same roof.

The Antwerp Police Department is still under the command of its Belgian officers, but every policeman is obliged to salute all German officers, who scrupulously return the salutation.

Points of Present Interest on the Western Battle Front

1. A wireless dispatch from Berlin says the enemy's ships attacked the German right wing, but were beaten off. Presumably this attack was made between Nieuport and the Dutch frontier. Report has credited the Germans with placing big guns on the Belgian coast, pointing seaward. German Army headquarters reports that a land sortie from Nieuport was repulsed.
2. Fresh attacks on Dixmude and Ypres by the Germans have been unsuccessful, according to the French official report, which says the Allies are advancing slowly between Dixmude and the Lys. Berlin, on the contrary, states that the German attacks on Ypres are progressing steadily.
3. The Allies are holding their gains on the Aisne River, according to Paris.
4. The French official report tells of a new attack by the Germans on the heights of Mount Ste. Marie, and adds that the assaults were repulsed.

EMPEROR FRANCIS COERCED?

Clemenceau Quotes His Words to Put Blame for War on Kaiser.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov. 9.—In L'Homme Enchaîné, as M. Clemenceau is still compelled to call his newspaper, owing to the censor's suppression of L'Homme Libre, the ex-Premier says:

"The Austrian Emperor entered the war unwillingly. Conversing with Gen. Conrad vom Hoetzendorf, the Emperor asked: 'Have you ever seen war?'

"'No,' replied the General.

This story, M. Clemenceau adds, confirms the reports that Austria's action against Servia was due to Germany's intention to set a spark in the European powder magazine.

WOUNDED IN BATTLE AT 13.

French Boy Hit While Acting as a Messenger.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov. 9.—Although France possesses no soldiers as young as the 12-year-old Servian recently promoted to be a Corporal on the battlefield, Henri Derombier, only a year older, has the distinction of being the youngest wounded in the French military service.

During the recent bombardment of Arras, where he lives with his parents, Derombier was employed as a messenger by a battery. In running across ground exposed to the German fire he received a wound in the thigh. He is now in a Paris hospital, where he is progressing satisfactorily.

TROOPS ARE HURRYING EAST.

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 9, (via London.)—The correspondent of the Tijd at Antwerp says:

"The movement of German troops from the western theatre of the war is now progressing on a big scale. A large number appear to have been withdrawn from the Yser.

"Long military trains, filled with men and munitions, are moving into Germany by way of Brussels and Louvain."

ATTACHES TO VIEW FIGHTING.

Will Be Allowed by France to Visit Theatre of War.

BORDEAUX, Nov. 9, (via Paris.)—The Military Attachés of neutral countries have been authorized by the French Government to proceed to the theatre of war operations. They may visit particularly the battlefields on the River Marne.

The Attachés will leave Tuesday or Wednesday from Fontainebleau, and they will be gone some fifteen to twenty days.

HERRICK TO VISIT PRISONERS.

Ambassador Leaves Paris to Look After Germans and Austrians.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov. 9.—Ambassador Herrick left Paris this morning with his secretary and a United States officer to make a tour of the Austro-German prisoners' camps and hospitals.

ANXIOUS TO FIGHT IN FRANCE.

TOKIO, Nov. 9.—Since the fall of the German position at Tsing-tau, the question of Japan's sending an army to Europe has begun to attract increasing attention.

The idea finds considerable support in military circles, where it is believed that such a movement would be welcomed by France.

PEKING, Nov. 9.—The German Legation says that the garrison at Tsing-tau numbered between 4,500 and 4,800 men.

At the Japanese Legation the belief is expressed that the town was not badly damaged by the bombardment.

Chinese officials, who have greatly feared that China would be involved in international complications as a result of the presence of hostile forces on her soil, appear relieved by the conclusion of the fighting at Tsing-tau and express the hope that China may now continue the process of reconstruction undisturbed by external questions.

RUSSIANS CAPTURE FORT NEAR ERZERUM

Receiving no hostile reply, the cruiser put in close to the breakwater and opened fire with its Maxims on the troops there, wounding six men.

The troops had artillery, with which and their rifles they replied to the Turkish fire. The first hits made by the Russian field artillery caused the cruiser to draw off and run northward.

RUSSIANS ATTACK BOSPORUS.

Warships Said to Have Destroyed Several Vessels at Eregli.

PARIS, Nov. 9.—The protected cruisers Kagul and Pamfat Merkooria of the Russian Black Sea fleet bombarded the forts of the Bosporus and the coal depots off Eregli on Saturday, according to an announcement made at Constantinople and forwarded by the Athens correspondent of the Temps.

The Turkish fleet, it is added, went out to meet the Russian warships, but soon returned. Several vessels at the port of Eregli, which is 128 miles northeast of Constantinople, were destroyed in the course of the bombardment.

LONDON, Nov. 9.—A dispatch from Berlin says that the Russians have bombarded Kohlu and Suglu on the coast of Asia Minor.

TURKISH MINISTERS OUT.

Ambassador Morgenthau Reports Resignation of Peace Advocates.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—Ambassador Morgenthau at Constantinople today reported the resignations of the Turkish Ministers of Agriculture, of the Interior, and of Posts and Telegraphs—the Cabinet officers who represented the peace party in the Ottoman Government. They resigned on Nov. 2, leaving the war party in control.

Mr. Morgenthau's previous messages showed that the three men made every effort to prevent Turkey from entering the war, and were the first to inform the diplomatic representatives of the Triple Entente that the bombardment of Russian ports by the Turkish fleet was done without knowledge or sanction of the Ottoman Government, but through the influence of German officers in the Turkish Navy.

The Ambassador reported that he was now caring for Servian as well as British and French interests.

CONSTANTINOPLE, (via Sofia and London,) Nov. 9.—There is a great degree of anxiety in Governmental circles regarding the attitude of certain sections of the people of Constantinople. An evidence of this is found in the activity of the courts-martial.

The local police maintain a close surveillance over the population, and any one expressing anti-Government views is immediately arrested and court-martialed. Several public executions have taken place in the last few days.

COL. G. C. WILSON KILLED.

LONDON, Nov. 9.—News has reached London of the death in action of Col. Gordon Chesney Wilson.

Col. Wilson belonged to the Royal Horse Guards and was born in 1865. He served in South Africa and did staff duty during the defense of Mafeking. His wife, Lady Sarah, who was born Isabella Churchill, sixth daughter of the seventh Duke of Marlborough, (grandfather of the present Duke,) is socially prominent in England. She was in South Africa during the Boer war and was taken prisoner outside of Mafeking.

Capt. the Hon. Arthur Edward Bruce O'Neill of the Second Life Guards, heir to Baron O'Neill was killed in action in France last Friday. Capt. O'Neill was the Unionist Member of Parliament for Mid-Antrim and was the first member of the lower house of Parliament to fall during the present war. He was born in 1876 and married Lady Annabel Crewe-Milnes, daughter of the Marquis of Crewe. Capt. O'Neill served in the Boer war and received a medal for distinguished service.

Capt. Norman Leslie Killed.

News was received in this city yesterday of the death of Capt. Norman Leslie, a grandson of the late Leonard Jerome and a cousin of William Travers Jerome of New York. Capt. Leslie was in the Rifle Brigade of the British Expeditionary Army, and was killed in action at the battle of the Aisne on Oct. 19. He was only 28 years old, and was the son of Col. John Leslie of the British Army and the grandson of Sir John Leslie of Glaslough, Ireland, who was made a baronet in 1879.

Capt. Leslie was well known in this city, and was a brother-in-law of the former Miss Marjorie Ide, daughter of Henry C. Ide, at one time Governor General of the Philippines. His brother, Shane Leslie, married Miss Ide on June 11, [illegible] some of her brother[illegible] Cockran. Her father [illegible] Minister to Spain at [illegible]

HEAR BRITISH FLEET IS BOUND FOR CANAL

Seven War Ships Reported On Way to the Pacific via Panama Route.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—A report reached Washington from New York today that a fleet of seven British warships was bound westward in the Atlantic and might seek passage through the Panama Canal.

The passage of warships through the canal at this time would depend upon their size. The last advices from Gov. Goethals reported thirty feet of water in the channel through the recent slide in Culebra Cut. Heavy ships could not make a passage in that depth.

The Panama Canal is open to vessels of war of all nations; the only condition is that they shall not remain in the canal longer than is necessary to make the passage, nor in either of the terminal ports beyond the time necessary to take on coal or supplies.

The cost of moving a fleet of big ships through the waterway will be considerable. The established toll is 50 cents for each displacement ton. Allowing the British vessels to be the average size of the European dreadnaughts, the bill would be about $87,500. No warship of any of the belligerents has yet passed through the waterway.

PANAMA, Nov. 9.—Panama Canal officials and members of the British Legation here say they have no information concerning the report reaching New York that seven British dreadnoughts were in the Atlantic bound west, possibly with the intention of proceeding through the Panama Canal to Pacific waters.

Col. Goethals, Governor of the Canal Zone, says he has heard nothing from Washington relative to the use of the canal by warships.

BRITISH RED SEA REVERSE?

LONDON, Tuesday, Nov. 10.—A Berlin dispatch received tonight by wireless by the Marconi Company gives the following from the main army headquarters at Constantinople:

"Turkish gendarmes belonging to the tribes fighting on the side of the Turks have destroyed the English troops landed at Akabah (on the Red Sea.) Four British armored cruisers withdrew, only one remaining."

EUROPA HELD AT GIBRALTAR.

Italian Liner from New York Said to Have Contraband Cargo.

GIBRALTAR, Spain, Nov. 9.—The Italian steamer Europa of La Veloce Line, which sailed with passengers from New York on Oct. 28 for Naples and Genoa, was detained here today by British warships and is discharging alleged contraband of war.

BELGIAN RAILWAY MEN STRIKE

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 9, (via London.)—A dispatch to the Telegraaf from Rosendaal says that the railway traffic between Roserdaal and Antwerp is at a complete standstill.

The Belgian railway men have stopped work in conformity with orders from the Belgian Government. The German authorities hope soon to put German railway men in their places.

FRENCH AVIATORS WIN OFFICIAL PRAISE

PARIS, Nov. 9.—Published reports that French aeroplanes are never seen above the French lines, while many machines of the enemy are constantly reconnoitring over the French Army has brought forth an official explanation of the operations of the French aviation service.

This sets forth that French aviators are operating not only on the German lines, but considerably behind them. The names of aviators are never mentioned officially, but their exploits have been none the less numerous and brilliant.

The statement says that this new arm of the service has fulfilled the promises made for it, but that it will never take the place of any weapon now in use.

Air battles between contingents of flying machines might have satisfied the fancy of prophetic minds, it is said, but they have been lacking. In a few cases two aeroplanes have been in conflict, and two instances have been reported in which three machines were engaged, but these were mere incidents to the real mission of the aeroplane as it has developed in service—that of an auxiliary to other arms of the service, particularly the artillery.

This service is obscure to the civilian, and is rendered more so by the rigid censorship. From wounded soldiers and prisoners, however, is gathered evidence of the value of this service, and the published orders of the day occasionally give instances which show heroism on the part of the French airmen.

The inquiry is frequently heard, "Where are the great airmen?" Nothing has been heard from Pauihan, the hero of the English tour from London to Manchester. Gilbert, Brindejonc des Moulinais, Garros, and Vedrines, popular aviators from whom wonders were expected, have, so far as the public are concerned, played a small rôle in the war, but they have not been the less active for all that.

Extracts from the diaries of German prisoners attest the efficiency of French machines. A non-commissioned German officer wrote:

From the diary of a German aviator: "The Seventh Company of the Third Regiment of the Guard had 8 killed and 22 wounded by bomb from a French aeroplane."

From a soldier's diary: "An officer showed us a torn coat taken from one of sixty soldiers wounded by bomb from French aeroplane."

Information from a prisoner: "Near Neuville an aeroplane bomb dropped on a supply train, killed 4 men, wounded 6, and killed a considerable number of horses."

It was recently announced semi-officially that as the result of the manoeuvres of an aeroplane the staff of one of the German armies was obliged to change its position.

In recent orders of the day these aviators were mentioned:

Radot, Lieutenant, aviator observer; distinguished himself by number and precision details information; killed by enemy, battle of the Marne.

Thoret, Sergeant, aviator, and Thoret, sapper, aid aviator; distinguished services; dropped bombs on enemy's lines daily; Sapper Thoret wounded by bullet in thigh refused interrupt his service to have wound dressed.

Munch and de Serre did not hesitate take the air in weather that made their mission doubly perilous; obliged to fly low and constantly exposed to fire enemy at short range.

Laokman, Parent, Bougier, Gilbert, and Allouch also mentioned for having braved tempest and fog in order to secure precious information.

AUSTRIA'S HUGE TRADE LOSS.

September Imports Off $29,800,000 Compared with September, 1913.

VENICE, Nov. 9.—How severely the trade of Austria has been affected by the war is revealed in an official report of the Austrian Ministry of Commerce, a copy of which has just reached here from Vienna.

According to this document Austria's imports in the month of September amounted to 111,000,000 crowns, ($22,200,000,) as compared to 260,000,000 crowns ($52,000,000) in September of 1913. The decrease in exports was much greater. They amounted in September of this year to only 61,000,000 crowns, ($12,200,000,) barely one-quarter of the total reached in September, 1913.

The greatest decreases on the export list were in wood and wooden wares, sugar, eggs, clothing, cotton and woolen goods, and glassware. In imports the decreases were largest in coal, raw cotton, wool, yarns, copper, and machinery.

During the first nine months of the year, making the comparison with 1913, imports decreased 120,000,000 crowns ($24,000,000) and exports 330,000,000 crowns ($66,000,000.)

In the domestic trade between Austria and Hungary the imports from Hungary in September were only two-thirds and the exports to Hungary barely one-half those of September, 1913.

FEAR OF CONFLICT IN RELIEF WORK

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 9.—There is apprehension here that the failure of those in America who are interested in Belgian relief properly to co-ordinate their work with the American Commission in London will lead to confusion and lack of efficiency which may seriously interfere with the relief measures already well advanced. From indications noted here there is danger of other organizations endeavoring to direct the relief work from the other side, making more than one agency for the transmission of supplies to Belgium. It is considered here that this would be a grave mistake.

The American Commission has arranged a channel for supplies after great effort, involving the obtaining of the consent of all the Governments concerned. While unofficial, the commission has official recognition and receives contributions from the British Government for the purchase of supplies. If any other organization in America like the Rockefeller Foundation or the Red Cross should now endeavor to run its own system of supplying food to Belgians complications certainly will ensue, as it will be difficult for them to obtain recognition from the Governments which have already recognized the commission.

It is understood that the matter is being discussed with the Government at Washington with a view to obtaining thorough co-operation between the commission here and the relief workers in America.

LONDON, Nov. 10.—The American Commission for the relief of Belgians has been advised that with the 50,000 sacks of grain on hand the committee in Belgium will be able to relieve in three or four days th towns of Namur, Liége, and Lemberg and the districts around them, and that by the 15th of November the commission will have been able to supply the needs of all persons in Belgium, except those in the most remote and inaccessible places.

LARGE SHELLS ORDERED HERE.

Pittsburgh Concern Gets Big Contract from Belligerent Power.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 9.—One of the largest orders received in this country from a belligerent power for war munitions since the beginning of the war was booked today by the Firth-Sterling Steel Company, near this city. The order calls for 20,000 three inch, 10,000 six inch, and 5,000 eight inch shells for use in field and siege guns. An order calling for a number of larger projectiles was also received by the company, but the calibre could not be ascertained.

Officials of the steel company affirm the receipt of the order, and the fact that the shells are to go to one of the European warring nations.

Five million rounds of small arm ammunition will be supplied to one of the warring European nations by the Economy Cartridge Fuse Company of this city within the next three months. The order for these cartridges was received Saturday.

EXPLAIN LUDINGTON'S DEATH

Friends in London Feel Certain He Was Accidentally Shot.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 9.—Friends of Arthur Crosby Ludington, who shot and killed himself in his rooms here on Wednesday, are certain the shooting was accidental, which was the verdict of the Coroner's Jury. They believe he was examining his revolver when it was discharged.

Mr. Ludington had no worries and was in a sound financial position. He was moved by the cause of the Allies and tried to enlist in the British Army. Unable to do this because he was an American, he joined the Red Cross. Mr. Ludington enjoyed fine health. He was strong, athletic, and almost a giant in physique.

Evidence given by his friends at the inquest showed that on Tuesday, the day before his death, Mr. Ludington was in excellent spirits and looked forward to going into the Red Cross service in France as soon as he learned to drive an automobile. He never said anything about suicide. Mr. Ludington had invited Lord Eustace Percy of the Foreign Office to dine with him at the Automobile Club on Wednesday evening.

Lord Eustace arrived at the club about the time Mr. Ludington's valet found his master dead in a bedroom with a revolver, which he had purchased two hours before, by his side. The Coroner in summing up said it seemed almost incredible that Mr. Ludington should intentionally take his life. Mr. Ludington's parents are dead. His brother lives in Philadelphia.

FOR BRITISH WAR RELIEF.

Relative of Spring-Rice Among Incorporators of New Society.

An application was made to Supreme Court Justice Pendleton yesterday for the incorporation of the British War Relief Association. This organization will raise a fund to provide an automobile ambulance corps for service in the European war. The money received will be used also to send out as many volunteer nurses as possible and to relieve severe cases of distress among British subjects in this city. The headquarters of the association is at the British Imperial Club at 108 East Thirtieth Street. Among those named as directors are Theodosia Mary Anne Spring-Rice of 48 West Ninety-sixth Street, a relative of the British Ambassador; Percy William Darbyshire and Blanche Rosalind Darbyshire of 17 East Eighty-third Street; Florence Emily Hargreaves and Randall Hargreaves of 430 William Street, East Orange, N. J., and Ernest Murray Wynne of 495 Avon Avenue, Newark, N. J.

SEES WORLD'S HOPE IN GERMAN TRIUMPH

War Was Not Sought or Wanted, Says Dr. Hall, Who Returned Recently.

PUTS BLAME ON RUSSIA

And Says Victory of Allies Would Be "Betrayal of Democracy, Civilization, and Freedom."

The Rev. Dr. Thomas C. Hall, Professor of Christian Ethics in the Union Theological Seminary, in a formal interview, made public by the German Information Service in the Hotel Astor last night, discussed conditions which led to the European war. Dr. Hall, who recently returned from Germany, said that not only the average German, but even the German Army officers, did not want war.

"I know Germans in all classes of society," Dr. Hall said, "and I do not know, even among the younger German officers, one who wanted war. Germany was growing stronger and richer through her trade, and every German knew that her trade needed peace.

"Bernhardi's book, even though by some it has been taken as an indication of a warlike attitude on Germany's part, no more represents the feeling of the average German than Hobson represents sober American opinion. If we were, which God forbid, to be dragged into a war with Japan by her attempting to dominate China, would it be fair to quote Mr. Hobson as showing we all sought war with Japan?

"One-third of the German voters—and Germany has manhood suffrage—are Social Democrats and utterly opposed to war. The whole industrial community has dreaded war, and the Emperor has cherished as his chief ambition the hope that he would go down into history as the 'Emperor of peace.'

"There is no doubt that Russia is the real source of the trouble. She is pushing her Balkan policy, and once sure of the support of England she went to war to regain her prestige lost through the Japanese war, to avenge herself for what she considered a diplomatic defeat after the Balkan war, and to divert attention from the growing discontent within her own borders.

"It was only a matter of time with her, and, assured of the assistance of the British Navy, she considered her task of going through Austria to Constantinople an easy one.

"Germany's victory, far from being a world menace, is the best hope of peace. Germany is the only great power that has not in the last forty-four years carried on a war of aggression."

Dr. Hall asserts that business has not been ruined in Germany as a result of the war and that food remains cheap. Germany, he says, can raise twice as much money as she already has to finance the war.

"The eastern situation," Dr. Hall continued, "as it effects the war I do not know as I should like to, but I feel dreadfully the crime of dragging Japan into the quarrel. The fate of Tsing-tau will not and cannot terminate the outcome of the European war, and Germany will never forget that Japan, which owes much to her, took advantage of the struggle to commit an unprovoked act of highway robbery.

"It brings a war with Japan just so much nearer, and that would mean, alas, the destruction of all the values the West has brought to Japan! It is a shame and a crime that England did not keep both Africa and Japan out of this horrible, brutal war.

"So far as England's entrance into the war is concerned, a small crowd of war advocates, with Sir Edward Grey and Churchill as leaders, have at last succeeded in poisoning the mind of England against Germany, and fear of her as a growing sea power, taken with commercial jealousy, has made her eager to seize the excuse of Belgium's neutrality for the attack on German commerce.

"To me it seems absurd to claim that Russia stands for liberty and civilization, and Germany for slavery and barbarism. I know Russia and I know Germany, and Americans forget that Russia is the power that wins if the Allies win. A victory for Russia means another world war for the control of the Mediterranean and for Persia and India.

"Cut off as the United States is from direct contact with Germany, we know only what England teaches us and are missing the real emphasis of this war, which is essentially a war to advance and maintain the territorial ambitions of the Russian aristocracy fighting under the banner of pan-Slavism.

BERLIN GETTING PANICKY.

Knows Now of Reverses in the East, but Expects Victory in the West.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

A TOWN IN FRANCE, Saturday, Nov. 7. (Dispatch to The London Daily News.)—Traveling in the east of France on Friday, I had as a fellow-passenger an American business man who left Germany on Wednesday. He told me that, so far as outward appearances were concerned, the German capital had changed very little since the outbreak of the war, but that trade, except in certain defined industries, was practically at a standstill. He had given up hope of pursuing his occupation any longer, and intended making his way to New York to await the end of hostilities.

He said that anti-British feeling was growing in Berlin. Only the previous Saturday night he was at a concert in a beer hall where the turns provoked demonstrations against England, and things were none too pleasant for him when, in a moment of thoughtlessness, he spoke to an American friend in English.

Berlin, he added, now knows that things are not going well for the German-Austrian armies in the east, and the people were getting panicky as to what might happen from that direction. They only knew, however, that the operations against Calais had been hindered by the flooding of Belgium, and were perfectly confident that the movement would be successful and that the plans for invading England would in time be carried through. He himself did not know how tightly the German advance to the coast was being held by the Allies until he read the French newspapers in Switzerland.

GERMANS FAVOR ONE BRITON.

Banker Born in Colony Only One Not Interned in Hamburg.

Special to The New York Times.

LONDON, Nov. 9.—Consul General R. P. Skinner today received a telegram from Hamburg saying that all the English bankers there had been interned except one who was born in one of the British colonies.

No details were given, but it is generally believed that Germans consider their subjects are better treated in English colonies than in England, and hence this discrimination in their favor.

THE WAR SITUATION.

(An Associate Editor of The Army and Navy Journal.)

The vigorous attacks which the Germans are now making between Lille and Ypres show the development of a new effort by them to break down the opposition of the allied forces on this flank.

Their best opportunity for success in this move was when their army from Antwerp first arrived at the front. Since then the German reinforcements have hardly more than made good their losses, while both the French and the British have been steadily strengthening their armies on this flank. There would seem, then, little prospect of success for the Germans in their attempt to drive the Allies out of Belgium.

The success of the Allies in repulsing the German attacks all along the line indicates the wisdom of the policy adopted by Gen. Joffre and his advisers. Warfare is a battle of wits nearly as much as it is a struggle of force. The whole object of strategy is to out-guess the enemy and use one's own forces in the way that will gain the greatest results. Much depends upon the proper estimate of what the opponent will do.

In this case, Gen. Joffre banked on the predilection of the Germans for aggressive action. Their drill books have for years emphasized the point that field fortifications would fall before determined attacks of large numbers of men. Consequently the French and British have remained on the defensive, where their sheltered positions would enable them to inflict disproportionate losses on the attacking columns.

The result of the fighting for the last month along the battle line in France has been a constant wearing down of the German military strength without compensating losses to the Allies. The net result is an appreciable gain for the allied cause. They are obtaining the desired military objects, and at the same time are husbanding the lives of their men. By this policy they have been able to do better than break even with the Germans during the weeks in which the Russian Army has been developing its full force.

Now the crisis is largely passed for the Allies, and all signs seem to indicate that they are preparing for an aggressive campaign. It cannot yet be told where they will strike, but the three months of preparations have placed the Allies in a condition of preparedness, similar to that which the Russians have shown in their recent fighting in Poland. When the advance of the allied forces is started, it bids fair to be pressed with vigor.

However, it should be borne in mind that this will be only one step more in the conduct of the war. The Germans will gather strength in withdrawal and will confront the Allies, when they reach the Rhine, with an army even stronger than that now massed along the front in France. If the Allies should be successful in accomplishing such an advance, they would be but little further ahead in their campaign against Germany than the Germans have been for the last two months in their campaign against France.

It is only when one looks beyond the fighting on the present battle lines that it is possible to realize how little effect the three months of war have had upon the fighting strength of the opposing nations. That of Germany shows as yet no signs of decrease; for many months to come she can send forward old men, boys, and convalescents to make up her losses at the front.

Austria, though, has suffered large losses, which may have overbalanced the stream of reserves that she is sending to her armies at the front.

In the case of France, Russia, and Great Britain the three months of war, instead of depleting their forces, have resulted in a large gain in military strength. Nor is this phase yet ended for them; for several months they will continue to add to the strength of their armies at the front both in numbers and in artillery to oppose that of the Germans. The report of cavalrymen fighting in the trenches shows that both sides are saving their mounts for future use. Mounted troops are of little value for the close fighting like that which is now taking place all along the line, but if either side should be able to force the other back the cavalry divisions will again become of importance for rapid raids against the opponents' rear.

The Russians continue their success against the combined German and Austrian armies. By the capture of Wirballen the Germans are driven back into East Prussia all along the line except at Filipowo, thirty miles northeast of Lyck, where they hold a small corner of Russian territory. Along the southern border of East Prussia the Germans have also been forced back. By their recapture of Mlawa, where the railroad from Danzig to Warsaw crosses the border, the Russians have cleared northwestern Poland of German troops.

In western Poland the Germans have for a long time been preparing fortified positions along the low ridge of dry country between Kalisc and Czenstochowa. This is the line toward which they have been retiring in order to obtain the advantage of strong defensive positions in making a stand against the Russian pursuit. The Russians have kept well informed of the German preparations and are now endeavoring to oust them from their intrenched positions by pushing forward the strong body of cavalry, which is making a raid on the railways in the rear of the German line.

The Russian armies are now confronting the Germans all along the line mentioned. If they can muster sufficient strength to turn the German left flank at Kalisc, they will have a chance to inflict even greater disaster than would result from the present move against the Austrian Army in Galicia.

KAISER FINDS LANCES USELESS TO CAVALRY

Praises Horsemen, but Takes Blame for Not Training Them as Infantry.

BERLIN, Nov. 9, (Via The Hague and London.)—German cavalry has been called upon in the present war to perform duties of a character differing widely from those emphasized in manoeuvres a few years ago.

Only rarely has there been an opportunity to launch the thrilling cavalry charges then favored. Instead, the high-booted horsemen frequently are used both in the East and West to hold trenches and fill out the lines of the infantry.

Emperor William, in an address to the officers of a cavalry division which he reviewed in a Belgian town, said:

"I learn with pleasure that the cavalry fought brilliantly. The horsemen in this war have been intrusted with tasks such as I never believed possible. It is perhaps my fault that the training in time of peace never included the duties which the cavalry are here performing. The cavalry fought with bayonets and intrenching tools, and Gen. von Mawritz tells me that the infantry are proud to charge with their brothers of the cavalry.

"I hope, however, that the cavalry may yet have an opportunity to use their lances if we succed, with the help of the dear God who already has permitted so many successes, in surrounding the enemy."

DENIES CRUELTY TO JEWS.

Bernstorff Says Germans Treat Those in the War Zone Kindly.

In response to an inquiry of Herman Bernstein, editor of the new Jewish daily, The Day, as to the allegations of German barbarities in the Jewish towns of Russian Poland, the German Ambassador has written the following letter:

"GERMAN EMBASSY,
"Washington, Nov. 6.

"Dear Mr. Bernstein: I have your communication stating that you have found in Russian newspapers accounts of atrocities alleged to have been committed by the German and Austrian forces, bearing especially upon the Jewish population. You have asked me whether I have any statement to make regarding the matter.

"I am glad to avail myself of the opportunity to express myself on the question, which is naturally of the most vital interest especially to the many Jews in America.

"War is not play, and there is no doubt whatever, but that all the occupied countries must suffer from its burden and its horrors. The authorities in the German Army, however, have done everything in their power to protect from the ravages of war the innocent civilian population in those districts occupied by their troops. They are doing this especially in Russian Poland, where they find a population which is composed of those national minorities oppressed in Russia. The German forces are coming to Russian Poland as the defenders of the German frontiers. There they find the population which has suffered for a long time the worst treatment under the Russian régime. The sentiment of humane justice is combined here with the most elementary political prudence, when the Germans make these oppressed people feel that the advancing 'enemy' is in reality a liberator.

"To accomplish this result the Austro-German armies of occupation issued as far back as August a manifesto to the Jews in Russian Poland, which was distributed in the Hebrew as well as in the Yiddish language. This manifesto promises to the Jews not only their liberation from the Russian yoke, but also full religious and civil liberty and equality in every phase of economic and intellectual life. The Germans did not stop with the making of mere promises. Germany and Austria tried to ease the burden of war for the Jewish population as far as possible, in spite of the fact that there could not be any doubt they were going to be forced into Russia. Poor villages were made exempt from war levies. Jewish houses were saved from destruction whenever possible. Jewish prisoners were treated with the utmost consideration, &c.

"There are numerous reports which testify to this noble line of action on the part of the Germans. Germany has given to her Jews all civil rights, the few remaining barriers will fall with this war. To the Jews in Russian Poland Germany offers frankly and openly all the rights which were denied them under the Russian régime, while even today Russia is not taking the slightest step in this direction.

"How, under these circumstances, can it be possible that the German troops have been guilty of atrocities against the Jews? Should not the world-renowned discipline of the German Army be able to restrain the German soldier, especially when, aside from humane considerations, an important political policy is involved? All authentic news prove the contrary.

"The intention of the Russian Circle which is issuing such Tartaran news is evident. The Jews of Russia are displaying in this war marvelous patriotism for their native country, which has been their oppressor. The Russian Government is now promising to the Jews, not improved conditions, but is simply trying to show that the hostile Germans are treating the Jews still worse. By this means it aims to kill the slightest feeling of friendliness toward Germany among the Russian Jews, and above all to show the whole world that she is not the only country in Europe that resorts to her own methods. It is essential once for all to expose this method of fighting.

RUSSIANS SWEEPING OVER THE FRONTIER

voluntarily taken back before the overwhelming Russian forces. Our forces detached themselves from the enemy in order and without being pursued.

Our army got into new formations on the line Kutno-Rawa-Radom-mouth of the San. In Galicia all the positions reached before were kept everywhere, despite desperate counter attacks of the Russians, who were repulsed with heavy losses.

In Servia we took strong Servian positions in the Save-Drina corner; otherwise the situation is unchanged. Bosnia is cleared of the enemy.

The bombardment of Cattaro continues without result.

It is characteristic of the unscrupulous way the Russians proceed, that they have put a price of $80,000 for the capture or murder of our commanding Generals. There actually was a murderous attack against one of our commanding Generals, which, fortunately, however, did not succeed.

DRIVE AUSTRIANS BACK.

Servians Force Them to Retire to Former Positions at Shabats.

LONDON, Nov. 10.—Reuter's Nish, Servia, correspondent reports that there was severe fighting Nov. 6 on all the Servian fronts, the Austrians losing 1,000 killed and being compelled to retire to their former positions before Shabats.

RETREAT IN 70,000 AUTOS.

German Army's Flight from Warsaw Made with All Possible Speed.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 9, (Dispatch to The London Daily Chronicle.)—The German and Austrian armies in Poland continue their retreat, and it becomes a serious question as to when and where their retirement will cease. The Germans made the utmost possible haste to reach the frontier. They have not engaged in a single serious battle since they left the precincts of Warsaw.

During the retreat they have made extensive use of motor cars, of which they are said to have 70,000 on the eastern front alone. About 10,000 of these were at the disposal of the rearguard, which after each attempt to delay the Russian pursuit was thus enabled to overtake the main body without difficulty.

The Russian pursuit was effected by rapid forced marches, and this probably explains the reluctance of the Germans to make a stand before reaching the frontier. The German idea seems to have been to get its army out of the dangerous, unsatisfactory lands of Poland with the least possible loss.

SPREAD OVER EAST PRUSSIA.

Russians Only 20 Miles from Insterburg—Kaiser's Estate Ruined.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 9, (Dispatch to The London Daily Chronicle.)—Twenty miles from Insterburg and less than seventy miles from Posen—that is the position in which the Russian forces in East Prussia stand.

This is the new phase of the war which has followed the general German retreat to the Austrian border. The last units of Gen. von Hindenburg's army have been driven from the Rypin district, where they took refuge in the forest near Thorn. Once more Stallupoenen is in Gen. Rennenkampff's hands, and Cossacks are bivouacking in the royal stables at Trakehnen, where the Kaiser has his famous breeding establishment.

No private person in Prussia suffers more than the Kaiser from the Russian advance. His great hunting estate at Rominten, with its collection of European deer in the park, has twice been a battlefield. It has been found necessary to cut down all the trees and the troops helped themselves liberally to the game. Since the taking of Bakalargewo and Schirwindt fighting on the East Prussian front has been less severe. The earlier successes of the Russians resulted in the losses of the Germans being so heavy that the latter were actually not in a position to continue effective resistance. For the moment the Königsberg garrison, which has been heavily drawn upon for the attack on Bakalargewo, was unable to afford more men, and the only substantial German reinforcement received was a division of cavalry from the Kalisz district, which had been recently withdrawn from Belgium.

The armies now operating against the Russians are said to be commanded as follows:

The Austrian Army on the San, by Gen. Danki; the German main army in Poland, by the Crown Prince, and the German army on the left flank and East Prussia, by Gen. von Hindenburg. The last named on three occasions attempted to communicate with the Russian commanders by means of a white flag, but each time the overtures were refused, and the enemy were informed that such a mission in future would not be respected.

The roads on the eastern front are deep in snow. Part of the Russian transport already consists of sledges. In fact, the Czar's army is adapting itself to a Winter campaign in the smallest detail, and the men are not suffering from the cold.

cion. This development of armaments has modified the application of old principles of strategy and tactics and reduced the present warfare to something approximating siege operations.

"Our losses in the trenches have been severe, but such casualties are far from deterring the British nation from seeing the matter through. They will act rather as an incentive to British manhood to prepare themselves to take the places of those who have fallen."

Army "Not So Contemptible."

In paying a tribute to the leadership of Sir John French, commander of the British expeditionary force, and his Generals, and to the high efficiency and courage of the army, the War Minister said:

"I think that it has now been conceded that the British Army has proved itself to be not so contemptible an engine of war as some were disposed to consider it.

"Although our thoughts are constantly directed toward the troops at the front and the great tasks they have in hand, it is well to remember that the enemy will have to reckon with the forces of the great Dominion, the vanguard of which we already have welcomed in this country, in the very fine body of men forming the contingents from Canada and Newfoundland, while from Australia, New Zealand, and other parts are coming in quick succession soldiers to fight for the imperial cause. And besides all these there are training in this country over 1,250,000 men, eagerly waiting for a call to bear their part in the great struggle.

"As each soldier takes his place in the field he will stand forward to do his duty and in doing that duty will maintain the credit of the British Army, which, I submit, has never stood higher than it does today."

Replying to the toast to the navy, Winston Spencer Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, said:

"Eighty miles away the greatest battle in the world is going on. Our countrymen with our Allies are striving to break the cruel tide of German devastation; and here we sit, in this old hall, as we have done before. That is due to the navy. While we do not shrink from the full rigors of the war, we, thanks to the navy, happily are free from most of them."

Churchill on Naval Blockade.

There was a natural impatience on the part of the navy, said the First Lord, to strike a blow, but the people must be patient; the conditions of naval warfare were curious and novel. Great Britain was endeavoring to maintain all the seas and secure all the highways across the oceans against measures never before adopted. The navy was protecting the transport of forces to the theatre of war. This great task compelled it to off a target incomparably greater than that the enemy offered to the British sailors.

As to the losses suffered, he said:

"The punishment we receive is clear and definite; the punishment we inflict is very often not seen, and when seen very often cannot be measured. But time will tell."

"Business as usual, pending alterations in the map of Europe," was England's motto; and, on the whole, she was achieving that object. The economic pressure brought about by the naval blockade, he declared, would ultimately spell the doom of Germany as certainly as Winter struck the leaves from the trees.

"In spite of the losses of ships, not of the highest importance, and of men, irreparable," said Mr. Churchill, "the navy is stronger at every point of service than it was on the day war broke out. It is stronger most particularly in those branches of naval service which modern experience has shown to exercise the most powerful influence."

Premier Asquith said that never had any Government more needed the wholehearted confidence of the community than during the hundred days since the outbreak of the war, and never had confidence been more ungrudgingly expressed. This was the seventh year he had been privileged to speak at the Guild Hall banquet. During that time the world had experienced many strange vicissitudes. It was appropriate that he should go back to 1908 and recall the European situation.

First, there was the formal annexation of Bosnia. On that occasion advantage was taken of the unpreparedness of Russia to ride roughshod over a smaller power with the connivance of another great power.

Second, there was the sudden emergence in the Ottoman Empire of the party of the Young Turks. Never were hopes, so sanguinely entertained of that party, so doomed to bitter disappointment. After six years, said the Premier, he had to admit that the Young Turks had reproduced the vices without the vigor or versatility of the old régime.

Premier Denounces Young Turks.

The Turkish Government had been tempted, under German threats, German ships and German gold, to commit a series of lawless acts. England had been compelled to admit the logic of facts and recognize Turkey as an open enemy. It was the Turkish Government, and not the people, who had drawn the sword, and they would perish by the sword.

England had no quarrel with the Mussulman subjects of Turkey, said the Prime Minister, and nothing was further from England's thoughts than to initiate or encourage a crusade against their faith. England, in fact, was prepared, if necessary, to defend their holy places against all attacks. The Turkish Empire, however, he declared, had dug its grave and had committed suicide.

Financial Situation Good.

The Premier dealt exhaustively with the financial situation. The measures taken by the Government, he said, were very satisfactory. Exchange with most countries was working well, and the gold in the Bank of England stood at the unprecedented figure of £69,500,000, ($347,500,000.) Food prices had been kept at normal figures, and unemployment was rather below the average.)

Mr. Asquith paid a tribute to the Governor of the Bank of England, Walter Cunliffe, who, he said, had shown the utmost courage and resource. In recognition of the Governor's services the King had conferred a peerage upon him.

"This is going to be a long war," said the Prime Minister, "but there is nothing in a long struggle to depress us, or in what has happened. Our enemy has tried three objectives—Paris, Warsaw, and Calais—and has been baffled in all. That is not enough. We shall not sheath the sword, which we have not lightly drawn, until Belgium has recovered more than she has sacrificed; until France is adequately secured against menace; until the rights of the smaller nationalities have been placed upon an unassailable foundation, and until the military domination of Prussia is finally destroyed.

"This is a great task, worthy of a great nation. It needs for its accomplishment that every man among us, old and young, shall give what he has and do what he can."

Balfour Toasts the Allies.

The formal toast to the King and royal family having been proposed, ex-Premier Arthur J. Balfour proposed "The Allies." He emphasized the fact that the toast was without precedent, when the whole world was either in arms or in anxious expectation.

Japan, continued Mr. Balfour, had made one of the most dramatic answers by the capture of Tsing-tau to the most insolent message ever sent by one sovereign to another—that which seventeen years ago compelled Japan to give up Port Arthur, which she had taken from the Chinese.

The ex-Premier spoke in glowing terms of the gallantry of the Russian Army, the powers of organization displayed by Grand Duke Nicholas, and the memorieless speed with which Russia had carried out her movement. One Russian success after another might be looked for; and, as for the west, the memory of the days when the French and British fought side by side against the enemy of civilization would never be forgotten.

Mr. Balfour also spoke of Servia, which was prepared to give up everything short of national existence to keep peace, and of Belgium, whose history was even more tragic. Belgium had been overrun by the Germans for no cause except expediency of war. Cynicism could go no further in politics, and he denounced "the reckless and brutal militarism inflicted upon a civil population."

Belgium, he declared, would be restored to all, and more, of her ancient prosperity by the Allies, who were bound together by the pursuit of one great object, and there was no danger of disagreement, for no mean or petty motive actuated any of them.

"We are five nations," said the ex-Premier in conclusion, "and we fight not for ourselves alone, but for civilization and for all small States who seek to follow their own ideals, without interference from any unauthorized and insolent aggressor."

Allied for Liberty, Says Cambon.

The French Ambassador, Paul Cambon, said:

"We are allied for the defense of liberty, of empire, and of the protection of oppressed nationalities. We have never had any other end in view than the maintenance of peace, and in spite of all the snares which have been laid for us we have never ceased to work for it. It is, therefore, a libel to assert that at any moment we cherished warlike mental reservations.

"When history seeks out the responsible authors of so much bloodshed, of so much ruin, and the misery of those mourning, of those methodical massacres, and of that mourning which is of every family from one end of Europe to the other; of that dramatic destruction of monuments, the sublime expression of Christian thought, we can remain imperturbable—the responsibility will not lie with us.

"We did not attack; we acted in self-defense. We do not seek to slake the lusts of conquest or domination; we simply wish to have European civilization. We know that this war has been long prepared, that the most powerful instruments of destruction have been created, that there has been inculcated into a whole people the cult of force and disdain of right, and a persistent endeavor to banish all feeling of humanity from its heart, so that a once orderly nation has been turned into a house of barbarians.

"These professors of brutality thought they had foreseen everything. They had not foreseen that they would come into conflict with the conscience of the civilized world in this murderous war—the most terrible the world has ever seen.

"We remain true to our ideal of humanity and liberty. In this ideal we have a source of moral energy which will enable us to master the material forces massed against us. We do not, like others, lay claim to have Providence at our disposal, but we believe in eternal justice and await its decrees with unshakable confidence."

SOLDIERS THE WHOLE SHOW.

Canadians and Other Colonials Eclipse the Lord Mayor's Glories.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 9.—"The finest recruiting propaganda that could be devised," was London's verdict on the Lord Mayor's show as it wound its way through the crowded streets from the Mansion House to Trafalgar Square this afternoon.

The throngs that turned out to witness the big annual spectacle were little interested in the historic splendor attending the installation of a new city head. They were vastly interested, however, in their first glimpse of the Canadian, Australian, and New Zealand contingents, in the Royal Naval Division which fought at Antwerp, in the battalion of London Scots who hope soon to join their messmates in France, and in all the other military features of the long procession.

Sir Charles Johnston, who succeeds Sir T. Vansittart Bowater as Lord Mayor, occupied a distinctly minor rôle in the ceremony in which he was supposed to be the chief actor. It was not Sir Charles nor his great gilded coach-and-six nor even his stout and splendid coachman Londoners wanted to see. They see that kind of thing every year, but it is not often that they get a chance to salute the men who are fighting for the British empire. That's why the Lord Mayor's show was greeted with real cheering for the first time in this century.

Popular enthusiasm was whipped to the highest pitch at the very outset; for the first band that passed was playing "It's a Long Way to Tipperary," and that tune is more inspiring nowadays than even "God Save the King!" But any military music delights the crowd, because it is very seldom that troops marching through London have a band at their head.

The place of honor in the parade was accorded to King Edward's Horse, the crack cavalry of the Canadian force, which not only led the long column, but also provided the personal escort for the Lord Mayor and Sheriffs. The warmest reception, however, was that extended to the marines from Antwerp and to the London Scots who strode by in magnificent fashion to thrilling melodies from the bagpipes. With the marines marched one lone Belgian who was in the trenches with them in Belgium and who joined them for good after his entire battalion had been destroyed. He came in for generous applause.

The New Zealand contingent was recognized and warmly cheered as soon as its wide felt hats came into view; and Canada's Maple Leaf array of fighting men aroused tremendous admiration.

Altogether there were more than 4,000 soldiers in line—all of them, except the blue-clad men of the naval division, in khaki, which was particularly impressive by contrast with the scarlet and gold robes of the Lord Mayor, Sheriffs, and other city dignitaries and the dazzling liveries of the bewigged lackeys in attendance.

Sir Charles Johnston and the other members of the new administration visited the Courts of Justice, where they were sworn in by the Lord Chief Justice, according to the ancient rite; but nobody on the sidewalk seemed to care anything whatever about that part of the show.

Why do cigarette smokers change?

Men are constantly trying "new" cigarettes. Those who try FATIMA must stick to it, or it couldn't be the biggest selling cigarette of quality in America.

ALL GERMAN RESERVES OUT?

Dane from Hamburg Says Germany Is Near End of Resources.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

COPENHAGEN, Nov. 9, (Dispatch to The London Daily Telegraph.)—A Dane who has just returned from Hamburg, where he had been in business for twenty years, states that nearly all commerce has stopped there and at other places in Germany.

Nowhere is it possible to get a staff. All men are at the front or on their way and Germany has reached the end of her resources, having no more reserves.

DIOSY MADE A COLONEL.

Son-in-Law of St. Regis Manager Wins Promotion in War.

R. M. Haan, manager of the St. Regis, received a cable message from Hungary yesterday that his son-in-law, Lieut. Col. Alexander Diosy of the Austro-Hungarian Army, had been promoted to the rank of Colonel. Col. Diosy is at present in command of Fort Komarom, which is between Vienna and Budapest, one of the most strongly fortified positions on the Danube. The fort has never been taken in war, though it has stood since ancient times. Its name means "Come tomorrow."

Mr. Haan's second daughter, Olga, was married to Colonel, then Capt, Diosy, seven years ago in New York. They have paid several visits here since their marriage, and Col. Diosy has many friends here. Her elder sister, Helen, also married a Hungarian, Armand Schulz, and he, too, is now in the army.

ITALY MUCH IMPRESSED.

Russian Victory Increases Belief Austria-Hungary Will Break Up.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, Nov. 9, (Dispatch to The London Morning Post.)—The Russian victory has had a remarkable effect on public opinion here, which ridicules the excuses contained in the Austrian official communications. It has increased the conviction spreading in Italy that Austria-Hungary will break up.

The Stampa thinks if further Austrian defeats follow the hour of Italy's decision will approach.

BUCHAREST, Nov. 9, (Dispatch to The London Morning Post.)—Rumanian newspapers, with the widely circulated Adeverul at their head, note with pleasure the declarations of the Italian press as to the necessity for concerted action on the part of Italy and Rumania in the present crisis.

The Adeverul enlarges upon the identity of Rumanian and Italian interests, declaring these interests demand common action against Austria-Hungary and her ally. Only in this sense, adds the Adeverul, can one speak of community of Italo-Rumanian interests.

The Return of a Prodigal to Broadway

YOU remember that smart young chap—Jones—that wore a double-breasted suit?

* *

He's come back.

* *

Waistcoat showing just above the broad, English lapels—you remember.

Straight, clean-cut trousers and all that—and no vent in the back of the coat.

It is very much in vogue.

* *

And here is the SAME SUIT—at $25 ready-to-wear.

The same tailoring and the identical cut, in the smart blues, grays and an assortment of stripes—trim as ANY tailor could make it.

* *

The real, big, warmth-without-weight winter slip-ons and Balmacaans—$25, $30 and $35.

Why Throat Specialists Prescribe Formamint

IT is because, long before you ever heard of Formamint, it was submitted to the leading specialists of the world for trial in the great hospitals and in private practice, and for examination chemically and microscopically.

Not until a verdict was rendered on its extraordinary germ-killing power, on its harmlessness to body tissues, and on its welcome superiority to the awkward gargles and disagreeable mouth washes, was Formamint brought directly to your attention. Formamint combines a powerful germ-destroying agent in the form of a delicious tablet, which melts in the mouth fluids and bathes the sore parts in a soothing and healing solution.

It is a pleasure to use Formamint. It tastes like a confection, in spite of its fatal action on germs, and is absolutely harmless to the membrane in the mouth of even a child.

A. WULFING & CO. 26K Irving Pl., New York

Professor O. Chiari, M.D., Director of the Clinic for Throat and Nose Diseases, Vienna, writes: "FORMAMINT" has been used in a large number of patients with the greatest success as a means of prophylactic mouth disinfection and without the least harmful reaction."

From an article in "The Lancet" March 28th, 1908
"The sole object of a medical lozenge is to keep part of the mouth or throat one desires to treat bathed for a time in a drug dissolved in the saliva. I know of only one medicated lozenge—FORMAMINT—which essentials requirement."

So that you may see how effective these pleasant Formamint Tablets are in mouth and throat troubles, we will gladly mail you a generous sample tube on receipt of a 2c stamp to pay postage. Write for it today.

So much material has been received at the Salvation Army headquarters, 120 West Fourteenth Street, that Commander Evangeline Booth has decided that three days a week instead of two will be devoted to making bandages for the wounded soldiers in Europe.

Another "bandage bee" was held on Sunday afternoon when 100 young women and about 50 young men volunteered their services. Mrs. William Grant Brown has almost completed an organization of women who will take the places of the Salvation Army workers probably on Wednesday of each week. These will be assisted by twenty graduate nurses from Bellevue and a number of young women serving in the same capacity at the Long Island and other hospitals.

In THE NEW YORK TIMES yesterday morning it was said that the vaudeville entertainment at the Park Theatre on Sunday night was given for the benefit of the Red Cross War Relief Fund. The show was under the direction of the Committee of Mercy, which has the indorsement of the Red Cross, but is not connected with it. Of the $3,000 cleared by the entertainment 90 per cent. goes to the committee's War Relief Fund and 10 per cent. to the Actors' Fund.

Women in every part of the country are said to be organizing committees and preparing to co-operate with the Salvation Army in its efforts to get bandages for the wounded in Europe.

Boissevain & Co. of 24 Broad Street have received this cable message from Amsterdam:

Unceasing streams of the poorest Belgian fugitives are pouring into all parts of Holland. Our population is providing food and shelter willingly and liberally, but requirements are immense. Suggest you receive subscriptions in New York for Dutch-Belgian Relief Committee here.

Co-operating with the New York-Belgian Relief Fund Committee they are prepared to receive and transmit to Holland subscriptions for this worthy cause.

Sent to The Times.

THE NEW YORK TIMES has received $10 from Mrs. Julia W. Burdick and son of Asheville, N. C., and $10 from Dr. and Mrs. J. Wohlfarth for the Belgian Relief Fund.

For the relief of the non-combatant Belgians, Hilbert and Benjamin C. Nevius sent $5 each.

PHILADELPHIA RELIEF SHIP.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 9.—All the daily newspapers in Philadelphia have combined to take charge of filling a ship with provisions and clothing to be sent to Belgium and today full-page advertisements in each of the papers appealed for help.

The announcements said that the Norwegian ship Thelma was waiting in the Delaware River for supplies and would sail just as soon as she was loaded. The announcement was signed by Cyrus H. K. Curtis of The Public Ledger and The Evening Ledger, Benjamin G. Wells of The Press, John J. Collier of The Evening Telegraph, M. F. Hanson of The Record, James Elverson, Jr., of The Inquirer, E. A. Van Valkenberg of The North American, and W. L. McLean of The Evening Bulletin.

The appeal for help calls upon Philadelphians to make every possible sacrifice to save lives abroad, and points out that $6.40 will buy a barrel of flour which will save a family from starvation and that $3 will buy fifty pounds of beans. Each of the papers has arranged to send anywhere in the city to collect supplies and forward them to the ship.

gluming Nov. 10, and has appointed the following Cabinet to act with him:

Foreign Minister—FERNANDO IGLESIAS CALDERON.
Minister of Communications—Gen. ANTONIO VILLAREAL.
Minister of War—Gen. JUVENCIO ROBLES.
Minister of the Interior—Gen. JOSE BLANCO.
Minister of Public Instruction—Senor SOTO Y GAMA.
Minister of Justice—JOSE VASCONSELOS.
Minister of Progress—PASTOR ROAIX.
Minister of the Treasury—FELICITOS VILLAREAL.

Enrique C. Llorente will be appointed Washington representative of the Constitutionalists.

Roque Estrada, private secretary to Gen. Carranza, arrived in the capital tonight from Cordoba. In an interview he said:

"We have exhausted all legitimate means to bring about a peaceful arrangement. The Aguascalientes convention must obey Gen. Carranza or the delegates to it will be treated as traitors. We have sufficient means at our disposal to make good our mandates."

Foreign Minister Fabela is expected in the capital tomorrow from Cordoba, where he has been with Gen. Carranza arranging details in connection with the expected evacuation of Vera Cruz by the American forces. According to a high official here, a statement by the Carranza Government on the evacuation has been promised for tomorrow.

Heavy fighting has been in progress today in the suburb of Xochimilco between followers of Emiliano Zapata and Gen. Carranza. Several trainloads of soldiers were sent from the capital to reinforce the Xochimilco garrison. Passenger traffic between the two points ceased for several hours today in order that the cars might be used to transport troops to the scene of the fighting and to bring wounded and refugees to the capital. Carranza's forces checked the Zapata advance.

Gen. Francisco Cardenas, who commanded the Rural Guards the night President Madero and Vice President Pino Suarez were assassinated, recently made his escape across the Guatemalan border, according to advices received here tonight.

Aguilar No Match for Funston.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—A difficult situation may arise if Gen. Carranza defies the Aguascallentes convention, and armed conflict between his forces and those under the control of the convention ensues. Gen. Candido Aguilar, in command of the State of Vera Cruz, is loyal to Carranza. With unrest inspired by Carranza through the issuance of circulars and petitions calling on the American forces to withdraw, officials realize that the situation at Vera Cruz might become strained at any moment. Army officers scoff at the idea of an attack by Aguilar's forces, as Gen. Funston has a larger body of men than Aguilar, and is under the protection of American warships, which could shell an enemy ashore without difficulty.

One of the special agents of the American Government at Aguascallentes reported that the convention recently admonished Carranza not to attempt to distribute a fund of 5,000,000 pesos throughout the army, as he had planned, giving Generals 5,000 each and privates 10 pesos each aside from their pay. The convention informed Carranza that he would be held personally responsible for the use of the funds.

The Assembly has issued a manifesto proclaiming its sovereignty, and has telegraphed all agencies throughout foreign lands and throughout Mexico that it will be in supreme control of the machinery of the Government after Nov. 10.

Enrique C. Llorente, whom Gen. Gutierrez, with the consent of the convention, has named as special representative in Washington, formerly was Mexican Consul at Galveston and El Paso and married the daughter of a prominent American in Galveston. He is still under indictment for alleged recruiting of Mexicans on American territory during the Madero régime, but his attorneys have asked the American Government to quash the indictment.

Although no official disclosure is being made on the subject, it is the understanding here that the Administration would be pleased if Carranza resigned in favor of the convention's selection for Provisional President.

The State Department has been informed that many Americans in Mexico City who hold postal money orders have been unable to cash them and are in need of funds. Recently the Post Office Department here announced the discontinuance of money order service with Mexico at the request of the Carranza Government.

WON'T REIMPOSE TAXES.

But Carranza Omits from Decree Protection of Vera Cruz Citizens.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 9.—Gen. Carranza, from Cordoba, has issued a decree guaranteeing that there shall be no reimposition of taxes and import dues paid to the American forces occupying Vera Cruz. This meets the American demands only in part, for it fails to guarantee the safety of Mexicans who served the Americans under the occupation. The decree begins:

"I, Venustiano Carranza, First Chief of the Constitutionalist Army, in charge of the executive power of the United States of Mexico, using the extraordinary powers with which I am clothed, and considering that the Chamber of Commerce and a majority of the owners and administrators of realty in the City of Vera Cruz have communicated to the executive that they renounce the protection requested in their behalf by the Government of the United States before evacuating that port, declaring categorically that they will submit to decisions which in justice the Mexican Government may adopt in regard to the collection of fiscal dues already paid to the foreign authorities, and deeming it expedient in the interest of the nation, I have seen fit to issue the following decree:

"Article I. The Mexican authorities, on occupying the port of Vera Cruz, will not exact from the inhabitants of that port the payment of any sort on Federal imports or taxes previously paid to the foreign authorities who temporarily occupied that town."

Article II. lays down as the sole condition of this exemption the presentation of receipts from "the authorities established during the occupation of Vera Cruz by the American forces."

VERA CRUZ, Nov. 9.—The preface to Gen. Carranza's decree promising that the import and other taxes collected at Vera Cruz by the Americans will not be levied again by the Mexicans, refers to the petition circulated in Vera Cruz asking the American forces to withdraw and is calculated to show that the Mexican people acted on their own responsibility and not because of pressure from Washington.

While Carranza was issuing the decree Gen. Obregon and other members of the committee appointed by the Aguascalientes convention to inform Carranza of the election of Gutierrez as Provisional President, were insisting in published statements that the convention was the sovereign body and Gutierrez the legal head of the nation.

Gen. Carranza met the members of the committee and in the conference the latter persisted in their demand that the sovereignty of the convention and the Presidency of Gutierrez be proclaimed. Gen. Carranza frankly disagreed with this plan, and with sarcasm expressed doubt of the assertions of the committee that Gen. Villa had retired from his command. He added that if those who made up the convention were afraid to tear Villa from the northern field he himself would do it.

Gen. Aguilar's forces near Vera Cruz were further strengthened during the night.

SETTLEMENT RUMOR DENIED.

Vera Cruz Heard Carranza and Villa Had United on Blanco.

VERA CRUZ, Nov. 9.—A report received here tonight, but not confirmed, says that Lucio Blanco, a former rebel leader, has been designated by Gen. Carranza as a compromise and ad interim President, and that Carranza's choice has been approved by adherents of Francisco Villa.

It is said that this development took place after Carranza had sent his ultimatum to the delegates to the Aguascalientes convention.

This rumor, however, is denied by Col. Edmundo Martinez, Gen. Aguilar's representative, who returned to Vera Cruz tonight from a conference with Gen. Carranza and his delegates to the Aguascalientes convention. Col. Martinez said Gens. Obregon and Blanco were among those who had agreed to support Carranza against Villa. He was positive that Lucio Blanco had not been named as ad interim President. He declared that Gen. Carranza would remain at Cordoba, and from there direct his campaign for supremacy.

MARINES LAND AT ACAPULCO?

Mexican Port Reported Occupied by Americans at People's Request.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 9.—It is reported here that the Port of Acapuco, on the Pacific, has been occupied by American marines.

The occupation is said to have followed a request of the inhabitants who were suffering great privations owing to the revolution.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—While verification was not obtained tonight of the report from Mexico City that American marines had been landed at Acapulco at the request of the inhabitants who were suffering on account of the revolution, the report is not doubted. It is believed, however, that any such landing was not a military measure, but was intended to further relief work among people on the verge of starvation.

CARRANZA FREES RODRIGUEZ.

State Department Had Urged Release of ex-Peace Delegate.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—The State Department this evening received an official message from Mexico City that Augustin Rodriguez, a distinguished lawyer, who was one of the Mexican delegates to the Niagara Falls mediation conference last Spring, had been released from arrest there. Mr. Rodriguez was arrested yesterday and confined at Police Headquarters. No statement of the reason for the arrest has been received here.

Mr. Rodriguez was appointed a member of the mediation conference by Huerta, but he was never regarded as a Huertista. He is more than 70 years of age and is feeble. He is greatly respected in Mexico for his ability and piety.

Active efforts were made by the State Department today to obtain the release of Mr. Rodrigues. Strong representations in his behalf were made to the Carranza Government by Secretary Bryan. The Ambassadors of Brazil, Argentine, and Chile, who were mediators in the peace conference at Niagara Falls, took part in the representations.

ALLEGED AMERICAN HELD.

Prisoner in Paris with Many Passports Accused of Fraud.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov. 9.—A man giving the name of Eddy and representing himself as an ex-soldier in the Cape Rifles, has been arrested at the instance of an English bank here, which accuses him of having attempted to obtain £600 by a fictitious cheque.

The prisoner was the bearer of several passports in various names and languages, including German, Turkish, and Chinese. Questioned by an examining Magistrate, the man finally said that he was an American citizen, Le Gay by name, and that he came over to try and sell horses to the French Army. As he seemed to be more at home in German than in any other language, the Magistrate remanded him for inquiries, and has communicated with the army espionage authorities.

In addition to the charge brought by the bank, a jockey and an inventing engineer have lodged complaints for fraud against the prisoner.

PICK SIEGEL JURORS AS HE PLANS FUTURE

Indicted Merchant Expects Acquittal and Promises to Pay His $2,000,000 in Debts.

WILL DO IT IN FIVE YEARS

His Counsel Makes an Unsuccessful Attack on Indictment—Expect to Fill Jury Box Today.

Special to The New York Times.

GENESEO, N. Y., Nov. 9.—Three farmers and a wholesale coal dealer were sworn this afternoon as members of the jury which is to consider the case of Henry Siegel, the New York department store merchant, who rests under fourteen indictments charging grand larceny and receiving bank deposits when insolvent. The selection of the jury was begun at 2 o'clock. Out of twenty-four talesmen who were examined five were challenged peremptorily by each side and ten were dismissed.

The four selected were Edward Swan, farmer, Groveland; Albert Orman, farmer, Avon; Russell Stewart, farmer, York; S. J. Macey, wholesale coal dealer and mine operator, Avon. They were locked up for the night.

Great interest was taken in today's proceedings by the people of Geneseo. The trial is held here by a change of venue obtained by Mr. Siegel's counsel. After court was adjourned this afternoon Mr. Siegel in discussing the case said:

"I expect to be acquitted—to start in business again and to pay 100 cents on the dollar in the next five years. I want to start at the scene of my defeats. Practically all my life has been devoted to the dry goods business and department stores. Consequently I expect to resume that business.

"It will be a remarkable thing for a man over sixty and $2,000,000 in debt to rehabilitate himself in the business and financial world, but influential friends have stood by me, although I have been disappointed in my wife. I view my present troubles as so much experience.

"Most young men would be too self-confident. I have profited by my experiences, and will look before I leap. Do not misunderstand me. I do not mean to attack the great American motto—'take a chance.' I have always taken chances, but never with the law. My one great regret is that I have never had a college education. I believe a young man should start life with a college education, and if I had had one, I might have avoided some of my difficulties."

Before the selection of the jury was begun this afternoon, John B. Stanchfield, chief counsel for Mr. Siegel, entered a demurrer to an amendment to the indictment under which Mr. Siegel is being tried which had been obtained by Assistant District Attorney Arthur C. Train, in charge of the prosecution. This amendment charges that Mr. Siegel obtained $680.50 from the National Bank of Commerce on June 14, 1913, by submitting a false statement of the financial condition of his various mercantile enterprises. The original indictment charged him with the theft of $25,000 from the same banking institution. Addressing Justice W. W. Clark, who presides at the trial, Mr. Stanchfield said:

"Before your honor proceeds to empanel this jury, the defendant asks leave to withdraw the plea of not guilty heretofore interposed in this indictment, and to interpose a demurrer predicated upon the ground that since the finding of the original indictment and the plea made thereto the District Attorney has submitted to us for consideration a long and voluminous and somewhat radical amendment to the indictment. Upon that amended indictment I desire to interpose this demurrer."

Mr. Train said that Mr. Stanchfield had been informed of the proposed amendment, and that he had written a letter to the District Attorney, saying that he would have no objection. Mr. Train explained that the amendment was made to obviate the finding of entirely new indictments in New York County. Justice Clark thereupon overruled the demurrer of Mr. Stanchfield and the selection of the jury was begun. Each of the talesmen was asked about his knowledge if any of the Siegel-Vogel failure. Each was asked if he had read about the case in the newspapers. All those questioned said they had not read of the crash of the Siegel-Vogel enterprises, and the subsequent indictments, in any New York City newspaper. Those who had read reports of the case had obtained their information from Rochester or Buffalo or local newspapers. Others had not heard of the failure until they were subpoenaed.

Local Lawyers Pick Jurors.

The selection of the jury was left by the prosecution almost entirely to ex-District Attorney Cook of Livingston County, who resigned his office recently to assist in the case. On behalf of the defense the examination was conducted by Senator-elect Charles B. Newton. Mr. Cook and Mr. Newton were acquainted with most of those called as talesmen.

Throughout the proceedings Mr. Siegel sat in the courtroom. He wore a brown suit and tan shoes. He chewed gum constantly. Mr. Siegel seems to be quite contented among the hospitable people of rural Geneseo. He does not shrink from appearing in public, but rather gives the impression that he likes to mingle with the crowds around the hotel and in the Court House. He has appeared at each meal in the public dining room at the hotel where he is staying, and spends the mealtime conversing with his counsel. He walks to court, and has explained that he does so because he is "too poor to ride in a taxicab."

Judging by the progress made this afternoon in the selection of the jurors it is likely that the jury will be completed before the noon recess tomorrow.

It was learned today that if Mr. Siegel's counsel should contend that there was no intent to defraud on his part because he lost more than $4,000,000 of his own money along with the loans he obtained from commercial banks and the deposits in his private bank of Henry Siegel & Co., Mr. Train will maintain that Mr. Siegel could not have lost such large amounts without being aware that the financial condition of his business was not what it was represented to be in the statements on which he obtained loans.

WHITMAN MAKING A SLATE.

Governor-Elect May Announce Some Appointments This Week.

Governor-elect Charles S. Whitman returned to this city last night from Lakewood, N. J., and went to a theatre. Today he will receive a delegation of women suffragists. Before the end of the week he may announce some appointments. It was said yesterday that among other recommendations in his first message to the Legislature he will urge repeal of legislation of a purely partisan character adopted by the Democrats in the last four years.

State Chairman Frederick C. Tanner returned from Cambridge yesterday, and spent last evening at Republican State Headquarters, where he received a great number of visitors. All applicants for places under the incoming administration were referred to the Governor-elect. Mr. Tanner announced that from now on he would be at State Headquarters every Monday, Wednesday, and Friday afternoon and evening.

AN ALIEN'S WOES IN VERSE.

Lurana Sheldon Reads Her Poem to Aid War Sufferers.

Lurana Sheldon, the poet and lecturer, who in private life is Mrs. Lurana S. Ferris, read last night her poem, "The Alien: a Lecture in Verse," at the Standish Arms, 169 Columbia Heights, Brooklyn. Her contribution to the study of the European immigrant in America was well received by those who heard it. It is a verse cycle depicting the unhappy life of an alien in America from the time he lands as a baby, until, after he has had bitter experiences with poverty, the police courts and prisons, he is buried in the Potter's Field.

The purpose of the poem is to show the possible harmful effect on an immigrant in this country of heredity, poverty, environment, law, and ignorance. Mrs. Ferris read the poem under the auspices of the Brooklyn Women's Relief Committee, of which Mrs. Camden Dike is the Chairman. The receipts taken in last night will be devoted to aiding the war sufferers.

Warden Had Planned to Transfer Man Formerly Favored with 60 Hardened Offenders.

Special to The New York Times.

OSSINING, Oct. 9.—David A. Sullivan, who wrecked the Union Bank in Brooklyn and whose automobile rides cost Warden McCormick his place, collapsed in Sing Sing Prison today when he learned that he was to be transferred with sixty hardened offenders tomorrow to Clinton Prison at Dannemora, the prison dreaded above all others by convicts in this State. There the most desperate criminals are confined. Sullivan's condition became so serious that Acting Warden Weed decided it would be dangerous to move him, at least at this time, and last night his name was taken from the transfer list.

The exposure of the special favors shown to Sullivan, which put an end to the comfortable life he had been living in prison, shattered the convict's nerve, and the knowledge that District Attorney Cropsey, through the Grand Jury, was investigating his connection with the disappearance of assets of the Union Bank affected his health still further.

Then, it is said, the attitude of the other convicts toward him since the special favors shown to him have become known has caused Sullivan anxiety. It was reported several days ago that Sullivan's life had been threatened, and that he had been permitted to stay in his cell because of this. At one time it was reported that the Acting Warden thought of sending Sullivan to Great Meadows Prison in order to forestall violence against him by Sing Sing convicts.

Sullivan is now in the hospital ward in charge of the hospital physician, and is likely to stay there for some time. The prisoners who will be removed tomorrow are being taken away because Sing Sing is overcrowded, and because, as confirmed criminals, they belong properly at Dannemora.

Interest in the investigation by the Kings County Grand Jury of conditions at Sing Sing Prison disclosed by the doings of Sullivan since he began the life of a convict there, was heightened yesterday when District Attorney James C. Cropsey announced that he had received a letter from a prisoner in Auburn who was formerly confined in Sing Sing, offering to tell of privileges given to favored inmates of Sing Sing.

Mr. Cropsey refused to divulge the name of the prisoner. Accompanying the letter was one sent to Mr. Cropsey by Superintendent of Prisons John B. Riley. While the letter from the prisoner was addressed to Mr. Cropsey, it was transmitted to him after it had passed through the hands of the officials at Auburn, as the rules of the prison prescribe, and they in turn forwarded it to the Superintendent of Prisons.

In Mr. Riley's letter to Mr. Cropsey he said that he was willing to give the Kings County prosecutor every assistance if he wanted to avail himself of the offer of the Auburn prisoner. The Superintendent of Prisons informed Mr. Cropsey that he would have the convict transferred from Auburn to Sing Sing so that he could be easily accessible to the District Attorney or his assistants.

The convict who volunteers to testify was a prisoner in Sing Sing when Sullivan was committed to the prison. He was there during the administration of Warden Clancy and for the first two months of Warden McCormick's régime. Mr. Cropsey said yesterday that he had not decided whether he would accept the convict's offer. Several important witnesses were examined before the Grand Jury yesterday, including Miss Louise D. Burkhardt, Sullivan's former secretary.

Before Miss Burkhardt was called Assistant District Attorney Louis Goldstein entered the Grand Jury room with his arms full of papers, bank records, books, and mortgages. Miss Burkhardt was questioned for half an hour, when she was excused for the day. She will be called again today. On her complete story will depend largely the success of the efforts of the District Attorney to determine what has become of money and property now listed as assets on the books of the Union Bank. According to some reports the missing assets of the Union Bank are worth nearly $1,000,000.

Special to The New York Times.

MONTCLAIR, N. J., Nov. 9.—William Elder Marcus, Jr., whose marital difficulties since his marriage to Dorothy Cooksey in 1908 have provided a never-failing topic of gossip for this town, is entitled to a divorce according to the report filed at Trenton today by Special Master Herbert W. Knight, before whom Mr. Marcus laid his appeal for freedom. Mr. Marcus charged his wife with desertion.

FOURTH MAN SLAIN IN FEUD.

Charles Gubedosi, known as "Zump," an Italian, 22 years old, who was the son of the proprietor of a moving-picture house in Grand Street, fell dead in front of 158 Mott Street, between Grand and Broome Streets, at 9 o'clock last night, after a revolver had been emptied at him by a man standing a few feet away. As soon as Gubedosi dropped, the shooter and three companions darted into the doorway at that address and disappeared.

This was the fourth of a series of murders near 158 Mott Street since August. All four were committed in crowds composed principally of the Italians living in the neighborhood. Each of the four is believed by the police to be connected with the others. Scores of Italians who witnessed one or more of the murders told the police through interpreters that they had no recollection of the appearance of the assassins, and scores of friends of the dead men insisted that the trouble at the bottom of the chain of murders was a mystery to them. Several arrests have been made, but the police have found it impossible to make a case against any of those suspected.

The man killed last night was arrested last month on suspicion of being implicated in one of the murders, but was release for lack of evidence. Two weeks after his release he was married.

Balmacaans & Overcoats

(Usual Selling Prices $15, $18, $22 and Up to $25)

Today, at $11.50

This is really the biggest sale of its kind our clothing store has announced so far this season—and that's saying something, for so far we have had some very big sales.

We promised not to publish the manufacturer's name in this announcement, for his productions are for sale today in the best clothing stores from Maine to California, and an under-price sale at the height of the season would upset retail prices.

THE ASSORTMENTS ARE ENORMOUS, AND INCLUDE $18 to $25 BALMACAANS; blues, browns, Oxfords, imported mixtures, brown and grey homespuns and tweeds. Some specialty $ shops ask $30; today's price $11.50

THE OVERCOATS ARE BEAUTIES—smartest new styles, including blacks and Oxford greys; all sizes. We also include handsome plaid back overcoats in exceedingly stylish models. Sale $ today, at 11.50

Final Clean-Up of "Eclipse" Negligee Shirts

Made to Sell Up to $1.50; Today, at 59c

This is the clean-up following our recent immense sale of the well-known "Eclipse" Shirts, when we did a phenomenal business at a price considerably higher than that named above.

Now, in this final dispersal, THERE ARE INCLUDED A GREAT MANY HIGH-PRICED SHIRTS FOR MEN. True, they have been classed as "seconds," but that really means nothing more than imperfect laundering, and won't affect the wear in the least.

Plenty of white shirts and a good assortment of colors. Among them will be found:

White Shirts in plaited, or plain bosoms;
Colored Shirts with plaited, plain or tucked bosoms;
Shirts with French (soft) or Laundered Cuffs;
Shirts with Cross Striped Narrow Tucked Bosoms;
Shirts in Plain Colors in great variety;
Shirts in the Newest Fancy Patterns.

Work—A Fable

The Caliph and his courtiers had journeyed to the site of his new summer palace in order to see how the building was progressing.

"I wish" said the Caliph "to go amongst the masons and watch them at work."

Passing beneath a high, balustraded terrace, where hundreds of sweating slaves were hewing and carving great blocks of marble, the party were suddenly alarmed by a shout of warning from above.

They sprang aside just in time to escape an enormous mass of beautifully carved marble which hurtled to the ground and split into many pieces, great and small. Looking up, the startled men saw two slaves struggling fiercely upon the terrace; then one gave way, and his opponent hurled him over the balustrade, whence with a shriek he fell among the debris and lay still.

Guards seized the murderer and brought him before the Caliph. Passionately, he explained that his wretched victim had cursed the Caliph as the man who had doomed thousands to life-long WORK, and seizing an iron bar, had thrust the great block over the balcony. The warning shout had saved the Caliph's life.

"But" said the Caliph "why should you have warned me of my danger? Are you not, too, a slave who must spend his life toiling for my pleasure?"

"Yes, I am a slave" answered the prisoner, "but I work not for your pleasure, O Caliph, but for mine."

"You shall be free," returned the Caliph, "and no longer spend your days in toil."

"Stop!" cried the Caliph "where are you going?"

"To choose another block of marble," was the answer. "That fool has ruined two months of my fairest work."

"What?" cried the Caliph, "are you, a free man, going back to your slave's task?"

"I never was a slave," replied the man, "my work was my life, my pride. Those slaves and overseers look upon their tasks with hatred. I find my life is happier in loving mine."

He bowed again and disappeared among the blocks of rough-hewn marble.

MISS COPPELL WED CHAUFFEUR IN APRIL

HUSBAND HER MANAGER

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Douglass Connors are at the Marlborough-Blenheim, Atlantic City, N. J. Tomorrow they will journey elsewhere, to what point they won't say. Mrs. Connors was Miss Elizabeth C. Coppell, eldest daughter of the late George Coppell, a Wall Street financier and an organizer of railroads, and her husband was her chauffeur.

They were married on last April 7 by the Rev. William W. Knox, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of New Brunswick, N. J., but, although the bride's family suspected that perhaps she had taken such a step, they did not know it for certain. Last night the couple admitted the fact and said they were not starting upon their honeymoon, but rather were ending it, for they had taken several such trips in the Summer.

The marriage, or rather the suspicion that there had been such a ceremony, has been the talk of Tenafly, N. J., for a week past, for the Coppell family has lived there for years and has been identified with the social life of that place and Englewood.

George Coppell built a handsome residence in Tenafly, and after his death, thirteen years ago, Miss Elizabeth Coppell occupied it. She had Connors for a manager of the estate, and until about two years ago he had no other position. Then it was noticed that he began to drive his mistress in place of her regular chauffeur, who was relegated to the office of mechanic, and Tenafly began to gossip.

The gossip increased when Miss Coppell and a sister, Mrs. Walter A. Alexander of 133 East Fifty-fourth Street, went abroad and Connors was taken along. The family couldn't help hearing what was talked of by every one else.

There was Mrs. Lawrence B. Elliman, wife of a member of the firm of Pease & Elliman, real estate dealers, who is another of Mrs. Connors's sisters; Mrs. O. De Lancey Coster of Englewood, a third sister, and Mrs. Louis Haight, wife of the cross-country rider, a fourth. Miss Helen G. Coppell, also a sister, lived sometimes with the present Mrs. Connors, and sometimes in Paris. Herbert Coppell, a brother, married a daughter of the late George S. Meyers of the tobacco firm of Ligget & Meyers.

About Oct. 1 Mrs. Haight began a visit to her sister, which lasted until a week ago yesterday. Connors left the place at once, saying "Miss Coppell" had reduced his wages, but the day after Mrs. Haight's departure he reappeared, driving a handsome new automobile, and the following morning he and Mrs. Connors drove away from her home.

ARREST BERKMAN IN A ROW.

Alexander Berkman, the anarchist, who has several times deliberately risked arrest in Tarrytown and New York without falling into the hands of the police, was made a prisoner early yesterday morning for an alleged violation of the law which he had not planned as anarchistic propaganda. He is now out on bail facing a charge of felonious assaut in the second degree, for which the maximum penalty is five years in prison or $1,000 fine, or both. He will be examined on the charge this morning in the Essex Market Court.

Four of Berkman's companions, including Helen Goldblatt, known as "Helen of Troy," were arrested with him in Ninth Street, near Third Avenue, and each of them was fined $10 for disorderly conduct by Magistrate Simms in the Essex Market Court yesterday. One of the offenders, William Shatoff, paid his fine and left the court free, but the others refused to pay their fines and were sentenced to ten days each in the Workhouse. Besides "Helen of Troy," they were her sister, Lillian Goldblatt, and Abraham Blecker. Becky Edelson, of hunger-strike notoriety, and about forty anarchists were with those arrested and they offered themselves to the police, but the bluecoats considered that five in custody were as many as they wanted.

Berkman was accused by Patrolman Sodenberg of wrenching his club from him and would not return it until the policeman drew his revolver.

ELECTION GRATIFIES BRYAN.

Administration Indorsed, He Says—Suspects Plot to Discredit Tariff.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—Secretary Bryan returned to Washington today after an absence of several weeks on a stump-speaking tour, and one of the first things he did was to prepare a statement giving his views on the outcome of the election. The statement contains the accusation that manufacturers sought to make the tariff law obnoxious by closing their plants or reducing their working forces. He regards the result of the elections as an indorsement of the Administration. This is Mr. Bryan's statement:

"The election of 1914 cannot be considered otherwise than as an indorsement of the President and his policies. I am so convinced of the merits of the remedial measures enacted under the President's leadership and of the righteousness of his foreign policy that I expected the voters to support the candidates who represented his views.

"There were a number of causes which operated against our party, namely, the efforts of the beneficiaries of protection, who, out of resentment, sought to make the tariff law obnoxious; the disturbed condition caused by the European war and the fact that the excellent laws passed by Congress had not had time to prove their worth. Then, too, more Progressives returned to the Republican Party than we expected; this alone accounted for most of the Republican gains in the House of Representatives. The victory, however, was sufficiently complete to show that the people are with the President, and he is now able to continue the splendid programme upon which he has entered.

"The gains in the Senate were especially gratifying—not a single Democrat defeated for re-election and three Senatorships taken from the Republicans.

"There is every reason to believe that the Administration will grow in popularity as the laws go into effect and as Democratic policies bear fruit. The new currency law is just beginning to operate; before the next election it will have vindicated its claim to public confidence.

"The new tariff law cannot be repealed until after the people have had a chance to try it out, and now that the election is over the protected manufacturers are already resuming work. Some of them suspended operations or cut down their force before the election, and they did it under conditions which left little doubt that they hoped to arouse opposition to the new tariff law. Seeing that the law is here to stay, they will now proceed to demonstrate the fallacy of the arguments which they used in opposing a reduction.

"The outstanding fact in the late election returns is the slump in the Progressive vote. A large percentage of the Progressive Republicans have returned to the Republican Party, and that, too, without any surrender on the part of the stand-patters and the reactionaries. The leadership of the regular Republican Party has undergone no change. Senator Penrose and ex-Speaker Cannon will represent that party in the Senate and House and the returning Progressives must be prepared to accept all that they protested against, and more, for the stand-patters, after having overcome the defection, are even further from reforms than they were two years ago.

"The Democratic Party deserves the support of all real Progressives and in the next two years it will draw to itself those Progressives who understand the radical nature of the issue which separates the Democrat from the aristocrat and the plutocrat."

STEAMER REMBRANDT AFIRE

Now Headed for Norfolk with the Blaze Under Control.

A call for help from the British steamer Rembrandt of the Lamport & Holt Line was picked up yesterday afternoon by the wireless station at Sayville, L. I. The Sayville operator flashed back the news that the distress signal, S O S, had been heard, and was told that the Rembrandt, then 200 miles off Cape Henry, was burning below decks, and that there was urgent need of help. In a few minutes the operator aboard the Rembrandt reported that Capt. Edlin was steaming at full speed for the shore. Late in the afternoon the ship's operator reported that the crew had brought the flames under control, and that the Rembrandt was then steaming for Norfolk, Va.

The Rembrandt sailed from Baltimore last Saturday for St. Nazare, France, carrying a cargo of 800 horses for the French Army and a crew of fifty men.

HEARS NEW REVOLT IS BREWING IN CHINA

YUAN SHIH-KAI'S CASH GONE

Loan in United States Needed to Maintain His Regime — Kiao-Chau Affair Resented.

That China was on the verge of another revolution, and that recent reports of approaching harmony between the rival factions of the republic had been trumped up to curry favor with the Wilson Administration, and thereby pave the way for an American loan to keep President Yuan Shih-kai in power, were assertions made yesterday by Prof. Charles A. Beard of Columbia University, who said he spoke on the authority of Gen. Hwang Hsing, leader of the first Chinese revolution, now an exile in this country. Gen. Hwang left New York on Sunday night for Philadelphia. From there he will go to Washington to see President Wilson.

A delegation of Chinese officials, sent here by President Yuan as a financial commission, has reached Washington, and it is in a sense a race between the Commissioners and the exiled General to see who can get President Wilson's ear first. Although the Commissioners were said to be here to study American financial systems, the real object of their coming, so Prof. Beard was informed, was to put through a scheme for the financing of Yuan Shih-kai's Government with American capital.

Only last Friday a statement was given out in this city by the Far Eastern Information Bureau, of which Dr. Jeremiah W. Jenks is Director, to the effect that in the face of the European war crisis the rival political leaders o China were preparing to bury their differences and unite for the general good of China. The statement was described as coming from "well-informed, reliable sources."

"An agreement is just now being reached," it said, "whereby Chinese radical leaders, hitherto strongly opposed to President Yuan Shih-kai, will join hands in upholding the President and the Government of China. Interesting developments are expected from the negotiations now pending in China, America, and Europe."

"After conferring with Gen. Hwang," said Prof. Beard, "I am convinced that there is nothing in such reports. On the contrary, Gen. Hwang assures me that no attempts whatever have been made by President Yuan to conciliate the leaders of the Liberal Party. It is quite evident that this is only one of several inspired reports, all part of a general campaign to curry favor in the United States for President Yuan to the end that he will be able to finance his despotism. It is the old story of Mexico under Huerta. The $125,000,000 raised by Yuan through the five power loan last year has run out and he must have money to pay his soldiers. He can't get it now from any European country. They need all they have got for the war. With a revolution threatening, President Yuan now looks to the United States for financial aid."

What Prof. Beard said was corroborated by one of his students, Jaryen Dang, a Chinese who was thrown into prison in Shanghai for criticising the Government under President Yuan. Young Jaryen had been editor of a daily paper in Shanghai known as the Chung Hua Min Pao, meaning Republican Press. He lived in the English colony and was therefore tried under English law for seditious libel. He got six months and a fine of 500 yen. When he was set free he fled to this country. He said yesterday that he would have been killed if his residence in the English colony had not compelled the Government to try his case there. According to Jaryen, there is no more freedom of the press in China.

According to Prof. Beard, Gen. Hwang described President Yuan as a more despotic ruler than Huerta ever thought of being in Mexico. Besides throttling the press, he said, more than half the schools had been closed and both the national and provincial Parliaments had been abolished. There has been no national Parliament in China for the last eight months, Prof. Beard said.

UPHOLDS SUPT. RICHARDS.

East Side Forum's Secretary Calls Trouble Reports Exaggerated.

Carl Bock, Secretary of the East Side Forum, yesterday wrote to Eugene Lamb Richards, State Superintendent of Banks, who addressed a meeting under the Forum's auspices Sunday night on the State banking laws.

Mr. Bock regretted that the newspapers had "chosen to exaggerate what the reporters thought were little spectacular things." It was the opinion of the Forum's committee, he said, that the meeting was the best service to the depositors of the failed east side banks that had yet been given. He declared that the slight disturbance at the meeting was caused by a minority of excited depositors, and that the majority was influenced greatly by Mr. Richards's address.

for Style, Fit and Wear

We believe—that under these three heads, Style, Fit and Wear, may be summed up every desirable quality in shoes—

—That the shoes which best combine these three qualities will most appeal to the man or woman of discriminating taste—

—That Hanan shoes do combine these desirable qualities in the highest possible degree—

—That Hanan prices are as low as can be made for shoes of the same quality.

These things we firmly believe. Exactly why we so believe we propose to tell you in subsequent advertisements.

Our Leading Athletes
Join with other famous Americans in Praising Tuxedo Tobacco

MARTIN SHERIDAN
Famous all-around athlete and Olympic Games champion, says:
"Tuxedo is a strong card with me. I advise all athletes to stick to Tuxedo. It is the one tobacco that will help them, keep them in trim, prevent them from going 'stale.' Tuxedo leads—bar none."

GASTON STROBINO
"Tuxedo is the tobacco for the athlete. It never hurts my wind, and always steadies my nerves. Tuxedo for me."

MATT McGRATH
"No athlete need fear to smoke as much as he wants, if he uses Tuxedo. It's a general help to any man. A pipeful of Tuxedo puts new life into me."

Tuxedo
The Perfect Tobacco for Pipe and Cigarette

Tuxedo grew rapidly in public favor without advertising; its natural growth reached the stupendous total of fifty or sixty million packages a year. Not until the past few months has it been possible to keep up with the demand for Tuxedo. Now increased facilities make it possible for every man to smoke this best of tobaccos.

Tuxedo is fine, ripened Burley tobacco of the highest grade—aged until thoroughly mild and mellow. Then treated by the famous "Tuxedo Process," that removes the last trace of "bite" and develops all the delicious Burley fragrance and flavor. Pure, mild, delightful Tuxedo is absolutely non-biting—try it.

18 New 1915 Loziers
Each at a Rare Bargain

WE have purchased from bankers at extremely low prices eighteen brand new 1915 Loziers, both fours and sixes, including closed cars.

These we are now offering to buyers on very exceptional terms.

Our agreement makes it impossible for us to offer these cars for less than the list price, but we have such a wide margin of profit on them that we can make a very liberal trade allowance on your own car as part payment for a new Lozier.

These cars have never been run and are new in every particular.

They are equipped to the minute and identical with hundreds of 1915 Loziers you see every day on Fifth Avenue.

If you are going to buy a new car—either open or closed—you will find yourself doubly repaid in looking over these Loziers. They are rare bargains.

CONDEMN HOGS IN YARDS

Cases of the foot and mouth disease were found in this city yesterday. Government Inspectors, after an investigation, condemned 100 hogs in yards at the foot of West Forty-first Street. The West Sixtieth Street stock yards also were quarantined because a shipment of cattle from cities known to be infected had arrived there. A herd of dairy cattle on the farm of Theodore Webber, near Hoboken, was found to be infected with the disease, the cattle were slaughtered, and the persons on the New Jersey farm were placed in quarantine. The Government authorities notified agents here that three more States—Delaware, New Jersey, and Rhode Island—had been placed under quarantine, making thirteen States in all.

The hogs which were condemned arrived here on Friday and Saturday. They were bought at East Buffalo, where cases of the disease had occurred. The M. Crane Company, at the foot of West Forty-first Street, which received the shipment, sent out a tracer yesterday to find the place from which the hogs originally were shipped.

Inspectors who examined the hogs on Sunday suspected the presence of the disease and telegraphed to the Department of Agriculture for instructions. Word was received that if the diagnosis were confirmed the entire shipment was to be destroyed. Further inspection of the hogs yesterday removed all doubt as to the existence of the disease and the order for the destruction of the animals was given.

More than a score of inspectors from the Department of Agriculture and the State Department of Health were at work inspecting and disinfecting stock yards in this city yesterday. Stringent measures were taken to prevent the spread of the disease here. The State Department of Agriculture issued an order forbidding the inter-county shipment of live stock except when the live stock has been examined and passed by inspectors.

Dr. H. D. Gill, head of the local bureau of the Department of Agriculture, said yesterday that every effort was being made to prevent the crusade against the disease from causing a shortage of the meat supply and a rise in prices in this city.

"The Government quarantine," he said, "is not an absolute prohibition of the shipment of cattle from the quarantined States. Cattle inspected and shipped, according to Government regulations, may go from one State to another. The adding of New Jersey, Delaware, and Rhode Island to the list of quarantined States will not affect the meat situation because they are dairy States and little meat is shipped from them.

The Government and State Inspectors who are disinfecting New York stockyards have orders to kill cats, rats, dogs, and pigeons found in the vicinity, as they act as carriers of the disease. Rubbish of all kinds is being removed from the cattle yards. The ground, fences, troughs, and buildings are to be sprayed with a 5 per cent. solution of carbolic acid. Dr. Gill has given orders for cattle dealers to put on rubber boots before entering the yards, and to take them off when they leave.

In order to guard against the further spread of foot-and-mouth disease in the State of New York I hereby order and direct as follows:

1. That the use of all cars, boats, vans, and drays used in the transportation of live stock within the State of New York and all crates, yards, pens, loading chutes, or other means of transporting, loading, unloading herding, or yarding live stock for the purposes of transportation or sale is hereby prohibited unless the same are first cleaned and disinfected with a 5 per cent. solution of carbolic acid or 3 per cent. solution of cresol compound, U. S. P.

2. That all such cars, boats, vans, drays, crates, wards, pens, or loading chutes, after having been cleaned and disinfected as above provided, shall, when again used for the transportation of live stock or the herding, yarding, loading, or unloading of same and immediately after same are so used be cleaned and disinfected as above provided.

Commissioner Hartigan of the Bureau of Weights and Measures sent a representative yesterday to see whether there had been any increase in the price of meat since the crusade against the foot-and-mouth disease began. The investigator reported that there were no changes in meat prices in this city.

BARS UP TO CANADA.

Government Order Shuts Off All Outputs of Cattle.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—Besides extending the cattle quarantine today to Delaware, New Jersey, and Rhode Island the Government issued an order barring shipments of cattle from Canada to the United States. While no cases of the disease have been found in Canada, the quarantine against the Dominion is to prevent the return of infected cattle cars to the United States. It will stop shipments of cattle into the United States valued at approximately $8,000,000 a year.

The effect on the meat situation in the United States of the Canadian quarantine will depend upon whether imports from Canada have been for immediate slaughter or for fattening purposes. If most of the Canadian cattle were brought in for fattening, the shutting off of imports now would have no immediate effect upon the supply and price in this country.

Upon the receipt of reports today from field agents in Indiana and Michigan officials expressed the hope that the disease in those States had been brought under control. Reports from Pennsylvania indicated that the disease had spread to Lancaster, York, and Allegheny Counties.

DENY WRONG DIAGNOSIS.

Federal Officials Say They Are Not Responsible for Epidemics Spread.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—Officials of the Department of Agriculture today denied the truth of a statement attributed to Dr. George W. Dunphy, Michigan State Veterinarian, that the department's scientists had permitted the foot and mouth disease to spread among cattle in Michigan through a mistaken diagnosis of the complaint as mycotic stomatitis. It was also denied that an agent had been sent early to Michigan and that his failure to report had given the epidemic a start. Only a field agent who had no particular scientific training was on the ground, it was said, prior to the sending of an expert after suspected serum was received on Oct. 10.

The story from Niles is that Drs. Graham and Dunphy collected specimens of serum from the infected animals about Aug. 23 and that these specimens were sent to Washington to be examined. Dr. Mohler says that the only serum received was from the department's own representative and that was on Oct. 10, six weeks after local veterinarians had treated infected cattle.

LAUTERBACH GIVES BAIL.

But Lamar, Indicted with Him, Stays in the Tombs.

David Lamar was still in the Tombs last night. He was unable to find the $30,000 security required by Judge Rudkin in the Federal District Court as bail for the three indictments which have been found against him in connection with the charge that he impersonated falsely members of Congress in telephoning to J. P. Morgan & Co. and others.

Edward Lauterbach, who was indicted with him on the third indictment, which charged conspiracy, was admitted by Judge Foster in the Federal District Court to $1,000 bail yesterday, which was furnished by Nathan Straus. Mr. Straus accompanied Mr. Lauterbach to court yesterday morning, and when the lawyer was asked if he had anything to say he pointed to Mr. Straus and replied:

"Here is Mr. Straus, ready to put up $1,000,000 bail for me, just to show how much confidence he has in me."

When Mr. Lauterbach was asked whether he wished to comment on the charge against him and Lamar's statements before the Washington investigating committee, he said:

"I'd rather not discuss that. It's Lamar's own business."

Then Mr. Straus said: "Mr. Lauterbach has a big head, but he also has too big a heart."

"Your honor," he said to Judge Foster, "Mr. Straus is ready to give bail for my client for any amount. I should like an opportunity to examine the indictment."

Permission was then given for Mr. Lauterbach to withdraw his plea or to demur by next Monday and after the bail bond had been signed the lawyer withdrew. The Government is proceeding with the conspiracy indictment on the theory that Mr. Lauterbach was to profit by anything which resulted from Lamar's telephonic impersonation of the Congressman.

URGE LAWS TO BAR TROOPS IN STRIKES

CALLS IT 'BRUTAL PRACTICE'

And Criticises Harshly "Feudal Operating System"—High Praise for Clayton Bill at the Convention.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 9.—The thirty-fourth annual convention of the American Federation of Labor opened here today to continue for two weeks. The city of Philadelphia appropriated $25,000 to assist in defraying the expenses of the convention and in entertaining the delegates. A court of honor that stretches from City Hall to the convention place greeted the visiting delegates.

There was but one contest in the seating of delegates, and that was decided in favor of those elected by the regular organization of the United Garment Workers of America. The delegates seated are Thomas A. Rickert and Bernard A. Larger, General President and General Secretary, respectively, of the Garment Workers' Union. Trouble arose in that union some time ago, with the result that certain members held a separate convention and elected a set of delegates to the convention.

The convention in seating Rickert and Larger today put itself on record as reaffirming the action of the Atlanta Convention, which held that members who secede from their regular organization forfeit their right to consideration by the American Federation.

Vice President O'Connell in upholding the report of the Credentials Committee said that if members had any grievances they should bring them to the Federation for adjustment, but should not secede from their organization. The report of the Credentials Committee showed 358 delegates in attendance, representing 2,020,000 members.

The Executive Council of the Federation presented its annual report at today's session. The document covers every question which has affected labor during the year, including the European war. The report deplores the use of troops in mine strikes.

Of the Clayton bill, the council says that it "contains the most fundamental, the most comprehensive enunciation of industrial freedom found in any legislative act in the history of the world," and that it was obtained through "the organized economic power" represented by the workers of the United States. Referring to the European war the report says:

"Organized labor has assisted the effort to mitigate the industrial disorganization and losses entailed by the European war. Before the war the thought and effort of civilization were centred upon the development and glorification of human life. One life was counted of infinite value. But since the cataclysm that brought war between the nations men are treated as only military pawns. Things are valued for their life-destroying power. Guns are worth more than men. War will cease only when society is convinced that human life is really sacred and when society establishes agencies, international as well as national, for protecting lives.

"Militarism and competitive armament must be abolished and tribunals for awarding justice and agencies for enforcing determinations must be instituted. International interests and issues exist. Political institutions should be established corresponding to political developments. These most interested should lead in demands for world federation, and the rule of reason between nationals. The working people of all lands bear the brunt of war. They do the fighting, pay the war taxes, suffer most from the disorganization of industry and commerce which results from war."

Conditions in the mining fields in West Virginia, Colorado, Michigan, and Montana are discussed. Summing up the situation the report says:

"Land-holding conditions involved in some mining districts have enabled the operators to establish what amounts to a feudal operating system for the mines. They own vast tracts of lands, hundreds and even thousands of square miles in extent, on which the mines are located.

"The mining companies own, and therefore control, all roads that traverse the land. They own the houses in which the miners live; the villages made up of these miners; the schoolhouses to which their children must go for mental training; the churches which minister to their spiritual needs; the stores from which they buy their clothing, food, and other necessities; the Post Offices where they get their mail, money orders, and conduct their crude banking transactions.

"The use of armed troops by mine operators and the power resulting from ownership or large tracts of contiguous territory and the subversion of civil government to military rule are some of the most serious of modern industrial problems. We recommend and urge that the various State Federations of Labor endeavor to secure legislation prohibiting this brutal practice, which is subversive of all industrial justice and freedom.

Statistical reports show that the total membership is 2,020,671, as compared with 1,996,004 last year. The one-cent assessment fund to defray expenses of the United Hatters and contempt cases shows that of $15,018 the sum of $14,702 has been expended, the largest item being attorney's fees to Alton B. Parker for both cases, amounting to $9,547. Charters issued this year to various unions numbered 225.

MAKES CUNLIFFE A PEER.

King Honors Bank of England Director for Services in Crisis.

LONDON, Nov. 9.—The King has conferred a peerage on Walter Cunliffe, Governor of the Bank of England, for services in the financial crisis.

Walter Cunliffe has been Governor of the Bank of England since 1913. He was made a Director in 1895 and Deputy Governor in 1911. He is also a Director of the Northeastern Railway Company and is a member of the firm of Cunliffe Bros., of White Liver Court, Cornhill, London. He was born in 1852, was educated at Harrow and Trinity College, Cambridge, and has twice been married.

England has so far made five issues of Treasury bills since the war began, and naturally the Bank of England has been her chief distributing agent. These issues total $375,000,000.

There was much excitement among the 200 girl operators in the knit goods factory of Joseph Horowitz & Son, 142-146 Stockholm Street, Brooklyn, when two men grabbed pretty nineteen-year-old Rosaline Viga of 847 Linden Street, as she and the others quit work at 5 o'clock last night. Miss Viga screamed till one of the men clapped a hand over her mouth and both began pulling her toward a taxicab waiting beside the curb.

Other girls ran to Miss Viga's aid, all screaming hysterically and three other men appeared suddenly, trying to hold off the crowd while the first two continued dragging the girl toward the cab. They had her almost in the vehicle when Sergt. Dwan and Policemen Brenner and McNamara from the Hamburg Avenue Station, just around the corner, came up on the run, having been summoned by one of the girls who kept her head in the excitement.

Dwan shoved his revolver against one of the men, calling on him to free the girl, while Brenner grabbed the other. McNamara started after the three who had been trying to hold off the crowd and who now ran. He fired several shots after them, but they ducked into a tenement and escaped. The girl fainted as the men released her and she was carried to the station house, where Dr. Diefenbach, from the German Hospital found that her right wrist was badly wrenched and her face and arms were scratched and bruised from her tussle with the men.

The prisoners said they were Giuseppe Giammanco of Gates and Myrtle Avenues, Brooklyn, and Giuseppa Cirlino of 226 Stanton Street, Manhattan. Giammanco asserted, according to the police, that he loved the girl and had tried to persuade her to marry him. When she had declined only the other day he had determined to kidnap her.

The Car for All Weather

Rain or shine, in fair days and stormy, the Chalmers "Light Six" Coupelet is instantly at your service. You can convert it from a smart roadster to an enclosed car, and vice versa, in two minutes.

This Chalmers model is an economical car because it saves you the expense of purchasing two bodies, one for summer and one for winter. Its economy extends also to its cost of operation; for like all Chalmers models, this "Light Six" Coupelet is properly balanced, not so light as to be flimsy, not so heavy as to be ponderous in operation and excessive in fuel and tire charge.

With top up, the Chalmers "Light Six" Coupelet is as luxuriously comfortable as a permanently closed coupe. The windshield is built integral with the front of the body.

With glasses raised, the doors are identically like those on the regular types of enclosed cars. The doors are flush fitting and with the glass windows set down deeply into the doors make the car both weather and draft-proof. At the same time, the Coupelet body is considerably lighter in weight than most permanent coupe types.

This Chalmers model has a style seldom found in even the highest priced cars. Its tapered motor bonnet, genuine molded oval fenders, streamline body, clear running boards, flush fitting doors, and rich, dignified trimmings, give an appearance of class that bespeaks both efficiency and comfort.

Take your first opportunity to come in and see this "Light Six" Coupelet.

Car of the American Family

Two Cars at Price of One—

Two things are responsible for the ready, steady sales of Humpmobiles at this season.

One, according to Chas. E. Riess, who represents the Humpmobile in this territory, is the increased size and five-passenger room of the new model.

The other is the detachable sedan top for the touring car, and a similar coupe top for the roadster.

Chas. E. Riess says this gives every Hup buyer the chance of getting two cars at very little more than the price of one.

The prospect of driving all Winter in cozy comfort is most alluring to the majority of buyers; and the new tops are receiving hearty approval.

The new tops are very reasonable in price; easily attached; look better by far than any other of the sort we have ever seen; are well built and beautifully finished inside.

We advise you to see them.

EBBETS TO SELL OUT; CUBS FOR WEEGHMAN

Report in Chicago That Wards Will Buy the Brooklyn Nationals.

CONFERENCE WITH FEDS

Garry Herrmann Says Peace Plans Are Progressing—Minor Leagues to Meet Today in Omaha.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Ill., Nov. 9.—If organized baseball does not put any obstacle in the way, Charles H. Weeghman, owner of the Chicago Federal League City, will soon be in possession of the Cubs. This was made known after a conference today between Weeghman, Garry Herrmann, Robert Ward of the Brooklyn Feds, and President Robertson of the Buffalo Feds. While the conference was going on at the hotel, Ban Johnson, President of the American League, and J. H. Gilmore, head of the Federal League, were close to the wires in their respective offices, each being frequently consulted.

At 6 o'clock Herrmann and Johnson left for the minor leagues meeting at Omaha. Charles H. Ebbets, President of the Brooklyn National League Club, was also in the city during the day, but Herrmann asserted that he was not in the conference. It was rumored that the Wards would buy the Brooklyn National League Club.

"Has Weeghman bought the Cubs yet?" Herrmann was asked.

"Well, no; but we are progressing," was his admission, the first definite statement made by Herrmann since the negotiations started.

"Have you full authority to act for Mr. Taft in the sale of the Cubs?" was asked.

"I have," he said. "Mr. Taft only imposes one condition, and that is that organized baseball shall sanction the deal. Mr. Weeghman has an option on the Cubs, and all I can say is that we are progressing."

Why was it necessary for Mr. Ward and Mr. Robertson to come West? Does that mean the consolidation of the two Brooklyn Clubs and another combination in Buffalo?" was the attempted poser of the questioner.

This was sidestepped by Herrmann with the remark that, as Ward and Robertson were on the Federal Peace Committee they simply acted as seconds in the verbal bout.

While the conference was in session President Gilmore called up Garry Herrmann, and, after a talk with him, he held a long conversation with Robert Ward.

"Yes, Weeghman and Herrmann are meeting this afternoon," said Gilmore. "Probably they are talking about the Cubs, but don't for a minute think that we are at peace yet. We have four propositions which organized baseball must meet. I can't tell about them yet. I may give them out later in the week."

One man, who requested that his name be withheld, made the following statement: "It is all over except the shouting. The howls will come later, and they will be confined to the Federal League when the official information is given out that Weeghman has bought the Cubs and the Wards have bought out Ebbets."

MINORS AGAINST FEDERALS.

Little Leagues Will Remain Under National Agreement.

OMAHA, Neb., Nov. 9.—There was every indication tonight that the National Association of Professional Baseball Clubs, in convention here, would declare almost unanimously for remaining under the National agreement. The Central League, composed of Ohio and Indiana clubs, already has pledged itself to that policy.

Nearly 300 delegates to the convention, which will open tomorrow, are now here. They spent the afternoon and evening discussing baseball politics.

The Central League began its annual meeting today, and besides re-electing President Louis Heilbroner of Fort Wayne, Ind., adopted a resolution pledging the league's support to organized baseball. The resolution also declared that baseball peace should come on terms dictated by the organization.

There was no lack of expression by other baseball officials which indicated a feeling similar to that expressed in the resolutions adopted by the Central League. President Norris L. O'Neill of the Western League said:

"The Federals have nothing to offer to the minor leagues which will be of benefit to the latter. Therefore the Federal League cannot expect the minor league body to take any interest in outlaw baseball. The Federal League must rectify its own mistakes and not ask minor leagues to do that first."

The Board of Arbitration found on its hands a much greater task than it had anticipated, 288 cases being presented for its consideration. The entire afternoon was spent by the board hearing these complaints, and it was evident that it would not conclude its sessions until some time tomorrow. When the convention proper meets Tuesday it will be welcomed by Gov. Morehead and Mayor Dahlman. Most of the thirty-seven clubs represented have their Presidents as spokesmen. Each club is allowed one vote in the convention.

Governor Tener arrived in the city today, and President Herrmann and Ban Johnson are expected to reach here tomorrow morning. Their presence is expected to give further expression to the policy to be pursued by the association as a whole.

New York State League Averages.

Kauffman of Elmira led the New York State League in individual batting, with Mensel, his clubmate, second. Kauffman batted .329 for 123 games, while Mensel's average was .323. McCorkey of Wilkes-Barre and Williams of Utica tied in pitching records, with Smith of Binghamton a close third. Durgin of Albany led the first basemen. Bell of Syracuse-Scranton was at the top of the list of second basemen. Conroy of Elmira headed the third basemen, and McCloskey of Elmira showed the best work of the short stops. In the outfield Corcoran of Scranton held the premier position. Elmira won the league championship with a percentage of .652, and led in club fielding. Binghamton finished ahead of Elmira in club batting.

Danny Green, Old Outfielder, Dead.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 9.—Danny Green, at one time a star outfielder on the Chicago National and American League baseball teams, died today in an institution in Camden, N. J. While playing with the Minneapolis team of the American Association several years ago, Green was struck on the head by a pitched ball and never recovered from the effects of the injury.

Giants' Annual Meeting.

The annual meeting of the Giants was held yesterday. The official name of the club is the National Exhibition Company. The officers elected were the same as last year, and were as follows: President, Harry N. Hempstead; Vice President, Cornelius J. Sullivan; Treasurer, N. Ashley Lloyd; Secretary, John E. Foster.

Holy Cross Lyceum Meeting.

Holy Cross Lyceum, 321 West Forty-third Street, will hold its general meeting for November this evening for the nomination of officers. A dance will be held in the clubhouse tomorrow evening. Members and friends are requested to be present on both occasions.

OLDFIELD LEADS AUTO RACE

Twenty Cars Start in "Desert Classic" Three-Day Run.

NEEDLES, Cal., Nov. 9.—Barney Oldfield won the first leg of the Phoenix road race today. Oldfield's elapsed time for the 303 miles from Los Angeles, where the start was made at 5:30 o'clock this morning, was 8:45:55; W. C. Durant, checking in one second ahead of him, showed elapsed time of 8:51:54. T. J. Beaudet, No. 1, was third in 9:14:55, and Olin Davis, last year's winner, fourth in 9:19:30.

Twenty starters of the 673-mile seventh annual Phoenix race charged out of Los Angeles at a sixty miles an hour clip that sent F. J. Pink, No. 18, into the ditch fifteen miles out of Los Angeles. Pink was picked up badly bruised and his car went on with Tom Eley, his mechanician, at the wheel, only to drop out at the hundred-mile mark. Two other drivers, Sprague and Buckius, in No. 16, were hurt.

To-morrow at daybreak the twelve remaining racers will start on the second leg of the race to Prescott, Ariz., 236 miles away. The final leg will be from Prescott to Phoenix, Ariz.

EL PASO-TO-PHOENIX RACE.

Hugh Miller Drives Auto 533 Miles in 14 Hours 35 Minutes.

PHOENIX, Ariz., Nov. 9.—Hugh Miller of Phoenix won today the El Paso-Phoenix automobile road race of 533 miles in 14:35, reducing last year's time more than two hours.

J. T. Hutchins, Alamo Gordo, N. M., was second. Time, 15:37. C. W. Tucker, El Paso, third. Time, 16:40. Miller's average was thirty-seven miles an hour. His car overturned yesterday near Bisbee, but both he and his mechanician escaped injury.

IRVING DEFEATS BULL.

Harvard Amateur Wins Squash Tennis Final at Heights Casino.

In one of the best squash tennis matches played in New York E. du Pont Irving of the Harvard Club defeated Charles M. Bull of the Heights Casino in the final round of the Fall tournament of the National Squash Tennis Association. The Crimson amateur played one of the best games of his career, and won by the score of 15—5, 15—13, 5—15, 15—18, 15—9.

New Jersey Squash Championship.

Three clubs will be represented in the New Jersey Squash League championship, which starts Jan. 9 on the Short Hills Field Club courts. The clubs are Short Hills Field Club, Englewood Field Club, and Montclair Athletic Club. Competition will consist of home-and-home matches, with five men on each team. This number may be increased by mutual consent of the opposing teams. The State individual championship will be played at Short Hills Field Club Feb. 20, 21, and 22. Only members of New Jersey State clubs will be eligible to compete. The officers for 1914 are: President—Frank Kidde, Montclair A. C.; Secretary—Ely Shorr, Short Hills Field Club. The schedule for the team championship follows:

Jan. 9, Englewood F. C. at Short Hills F. C.; Jan. 16, Montclair A. C. at Englewood F. C.; Jan. 23, Short Hills F. C. at Montclair A. C.; Jan. 30, Short Hills F. C. at Englewood F. C.; Feb. 6, Englewood F. C. at Montclair A. C.; Feb. 13, Montclair A. C. at Short Hills F. C.

Harvard-Cornell Soccer Tie.

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, N. Y., Nov. 9.—Cornell held Harvard, leaders of the Intercollegiate Soccer League up to this afternoon, by a score of 1 to 1 on Alumni Field here today. The Red and White team, though outweighed by the visitors, who were looked upon as the best combination in the league today, outplayed the Crimson in nearly all points of the game, scoring in the first half by good team work, Russell making the tally after his forwards had taken the ball half the length of the field. Norris, a substitute, scored for Harvard in the last half, making the game a tie. The line-up:

Cornell.	Position.	Harvard.
Crefelds	Goal	Nichols
Thomas	Right full back	Grinnell
Townsend	Left full back	J. Jennings
Gordon	Centre half back	O'Neill
Lynch	Right half back	Fenn
Kirk	Left half back	Loftan
Ludlow	Right outside	Ricketson
Dyer	Right inside	J. C. Jennings
Macedo	Centre	Norris, Baker

Freshmen Win Water Polo.

The Columbia freshmen surprised themselves by defeating the sophomores in the interclass water polo series yesterday afternoon. The first year got the jump on the sophomores in the first period by scoring on a foul, and in the second half they increased their advantage by scoring on a thrown goal. Hotchkiss, who played in the back field for the freshmen, showed himself to be of 'Varsity calibre. By defeating the sophomores the 1918 team takes a place with the seniors, as neither has been beaten, and the game between the two next week will decide the championship. The line-up:

Freshmen.	Position.	Sophomores.
Wallack	Forward	Wensley
Fairfield	Forward	Meyers
Kunhardt	Forward	Mandell
Hotchkiss	Back	Gibson
Levitt	Back	Muller
Rosan	Goal	Levinson

NOTES FOR THE ATHLETES.

When entries closed last night for the junior Metropolitan A. A. U. cross-country championship at Van Cortlandt Park next Saturday afternoon only four clubs had nominated squads for the team honors, but an unusually large individual entry was received. A meeting of the Metropolitan Championship Committee has been called for Wednesday night at A. A. U. headquarters, at 21 Warren Street, when the entries will be passed upon. It is believed several belated team entries will be received in time to be accepted. The Long Island A. C. and Mohawk A. C. clubs, which seldom fail to enter junior cross-country championship teams, have not been heard from.

Remarkable success attended the soliciting of entries for the twenty-five-mile metropolitan district walking championship, which will be held under the auspices of the Walkers' Club of America in the Twenty-second Regiment Armory next Saturday night. Sixty-two heel-and-toe performers of more or less ability have signified their intention of competing, and their entries will be passed upon probably at the same meeting of the Championship Committee at which the cross-country entries will be approved. Eddie Kess, the three and seven mile national walking champion, will be among the starters, but he will not go the entire distance. After covering between five and ten miles he will retire from the contest. Al Voellmy, one of the Pastime A. C., team of the favorites for the grueling board floor contest, injured his right ankle on Sunday and may not be able to compete.

The campaign to make the Secretary-Treasurer of the Amateur Athletic Union a paid official, with an annual salary of $5,000, has become marked by circulars which are being issued on behalf of a New York man eager to secure the place held by the late James B. Sullivan.

The Trinity Club of Brooklyn announces that its annual novice road run will be held over the club's four-mile course on Sunday, Dec. 20. Five prizes will be awarded in addition to a special cup for the team scoring the lowest number of points.

Lawson Robertson, the Irish-American A. C. coach, has begun his task of making a winning aggregation out of the Twenty-second Regiment athletes. Robertson assumed charge of the uptown regiment athletes last week, and several nights a week devotes from two to three hours coaching the men.

Mel Sheppard, once the "Peerless," is contemplating securing a transfer from the Fourteenth Regiment in Brooklyn to some Manhattan National Guard regiment. Sheppard has had no trouble with the Brooklyn militiamen, but finds it too hard to reach the armory from his home in Astoria, which necessitates a long, round-about trip.

The Millrose A. A. has been trying to secure the entry of Loomis, the splendid all around athlete of Chicago, who won three national championships at Baltimore, for its indoor meet, but as yet has not met with success. Loomis would undoubtedly prove a big attraction here.

YALE BEGINS WORK FOR PRINCETON GAME

Ellis Quite Sure of a Victory Over the Tigers in Palmer Stadium on Saturday.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 9.—Opening the week of the Princeton game with a fifteen-minute whirlwind scrimmage, Coach Hinkey of the Yale eleven began the final period of the season's practice. Every first-string player was on hand, and all except Higginbotham and Von Holt were in the signal line-up. It was announced that there is no chance of Higginbotham getting into the Princeton game. His ankle has not fully gained its strength. Von Holt is only a possibility for part of the game as a reserve or tackle. A small bone in his wrist was broken five weeks ago.

Carl Betts was today shifted to right tackle, displacing Chub Sheldon. Betts improved rapidly during the three weeks he had Capt. Talbott's berth at left tackle, and it is about an even chance between him and Sheldon for the place on the right wing.

Capt. Talbott played throughout the practice, and the rush line sent into the scrimmaging was the same as that which faced Brown with the exception of right tackle.

Behind the line the big four, Aleck Wilson, Ainsworth, Le Gore, and Knowles, took its place for the signal work, but all retired when scrimmaging began. Scovil replaced both Ainsworth and Wilson during the signal rehearsal.

The coaches have not absolutely settled upon the back field, as Knowles and Wilson are not quite in their best form. Today marked the reappearance of Wilson in the line-up after a three weeks' rest and Knowles after an enforced vacation of five days. The back field selected included MacLeish, White, Bentley, and Guernsey. Bentley gave exceptional promise at the opening of the season, but was slightly injured and only recently returned to the squad after his lay-off.

Improved playing by Brann and Stillman, the 'Varsity ends, relieved the coaches' minds somewhat. These positions have been the weakest of any on the team.

For tomorrow and Wednesday most of the regular back field will get into the scrimmaging as a final preparation for Princeton.

WELCOME FOR TIGERS.

Defeated Eleven Greeted by 1,200 Students at Princeton Station.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 9.—Twelve hundred undergraduates marched to the station at 9:30 tonight to welcome the returning football team. Despite the defeat the team sustained at Cambridge, there was no evidence of any failure of student support, and Capt. Ballin and his men were cheered to the echo. Actual work in preparation for the game with the Ells next Saturday will begin on University Field tomorrow afternoon. The coaches have a strenuous programme mapped out for Wednesday and Thursday. There is no feeling of discouragement over the showing against Harvard, and the team is expected to give Yale the hardest kind of a fight.

No Rest for Army Team.

Special to The New York Times.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Nov. 9.—The Army team came out of the Notre Dame contest in fairly good shape. Yesterday's rest was all the squad will get for a week, preparations for the Maine game beginning this afternoon with a two-hour workout, which followed a long blackboard talk on the errors of Saturday's play. The coaches have a new cause for worry. The class room "slaughter" is feared now more than the injuries to players, as several of the more prominent men of the team are said to be deficient in their studies. The drill today was along special lines, the ends, backs, and linemen being taken in hand separately by their respective coaches. There was some easy scrimmage work, for the forwards and the backs engaged in a short defensive drill. Some new plays were set in motion, and the whole workout wound up with a fast signal drill. The 'Varsity team was intact except for McEwan at centre. The line-up's latest misfortune is a severe shoulder injury, and although in togs today, Trainer Tuthill permitted only a round or two of easy jogging and passing. Mount is being tried out at the doubtful end position. Merrilat and Capt. Pritchard were among those who had only light work today. Tomorrow the squad will get a strenuous tryout with the scrubs.

Hard Week Ahead for Fordham.

Although Fordham's football team was let off without any practice yesterday as a result of the Navy game last Saturday, "Skip" Wyman has prepared a week of hard drilling in preparation for the Vermont eleven next Saturday. Fordham came out of the Navy tussel in poor shape, and, considering the weak condition the Maroon team was in when they entered the fray at Annapolis on Saturday, the Bronx rooters are undismayed by their first defeat of the season. Kane, Dunn, Malcahy, and Capt. Wyman all were forced to leave the game during the first half because of the injuries received a week ago against Gettysburg. Jack Conklin, who has been playing the fullback position on Fordham's line, received a hard kick in the kidneys, and will be unable to play for the remainder of the season. As a result of his injury, he was ordered home for a rest last evening. Conklin's position has been arranged for this afternoon. "Jim" Butler is expected to take J. Conklin's place, and judging from his work against Navy will prove almost as strong as his predecessor.

The first of the inter-dormitory football games was held at Fordham Field yesterday between the junior and freshman elevens. The tussel resulted in a 6 to 6 tie. Straight football was used on both sides, and very little attempt was made with the forward pass.

N. Y. U. Still Lacks a Punch.

Easy work, with a chance for most of the regulars to get the soreness out of their muscles, was the practice meted out to the New York University eleven yesterday. With the defeat at Union last Saturday still fresh in their minds, the squad were told by Coach Reilley just how they came to lose. He expressed himself as still dissatisfied with the showing made by the Violet men. Three times within easy scoring distance, the New York eleven failed to advance the ball for a touchdown, while the line, with the enforced absence of Cusack and an injury to Somers, appeared weak. Much of the remainder of the week will be spent in trying to increase the offensive power of the back field. Sockolower, who has been playing at full back so far this season, may be shifted into the line, his natural position, while Olswang, who has been playing quarter back for the scrubs, may get a chance to go to the 'Varsity, in which position he was placed during yesterday's practice. The back field is still the hardest problem which the Violet coaches are facing, though the line is weak, too. It is probable that a practice game will be held against Fordham this week, probably on Wednesday. There is great activity on the part of the students, who are working hard to get a record-breaking attendance at the Stevens game next Saturday, and present indications point to a very large body of New York men at Hoboken.

No Post-Season Game for Chicago.

CHICAGO, Nov. 9.—The University of Chicago football team will not participate in any post-season intersectional game if it should be the winner of the conference championship, it was announced at the university today. No objection would be made to any other conference team playing any intersectional game, such as proposed by President James of Illinois, for the benefit of the Belgian refugees, would tend to break up the unity of the conference and would make for professionalism, it was said.

Western Football for Charity.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Nov. 9.—A Thanksgiving Day game between all-star football teams of the University of Minnesota and Michigan, the proceeds to go to suffering Belgium, was being planned here today. Michigan was asked by telegraph to cooperate with Minnesota in the project. A number of former Minnesota star players are available and willing to join with the present players in making up the Minnesota team, it was said here.

OLD GRADS TO PLAY.

Carlisle to Line Up Against Harvard, Yale, and Princeton Men.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Mass., Nov. 9.—It was announced here today that on Nov. 28 a team of old Harvard, Yale, and Princeton football players would play the Carlisle Indians in a match game at the Boston American League baseball park. Hamilton Fish, Jr., of New York, Captain at Harvard in 1909, will be in charge of the All-Star eleven. Fish having led a similar team to a 3-to-0 victory over the Indians at Cambridge four years ago this Fall.

The proceeds of the match will be devoted to charity, the beneficiaries being the Children's Island Sanitarium at Marblehead and the American Red Cross. Fish already has a team working at his home at Garrison, N. Y., and Harry Gardner, a former Harvard quarter back, is getting up a team here. Both of these elevens are using the same signals, and a little later the best players will be picked to meet the Indians.

Most of the players on the All-Stars will be Harvard men, but Ted Coy of Yale is expected to play, as are Hobey Baker of Princeton and Sherwin, formerly a star at Dartmouth. Among the Harvard men who are candidates for the team are Percy and Jack Wendell, Lothrop and Paul Withington, Harry Gardner, Rex Hitchcock, Dick Lawrence, Victor Kennard, Crawford Blagden, Dono Minot, and Pat Grant. "Tal" Pendleton of Princeton and Steve Philbin of Yale are other players announced for the All-Star line-up.

CORNELL FEARS MICHIGAN.

Scouts at Game Saturday Bring Back Reports of Wolverines' Prowess.

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, N. Y., Nov. 9.—In order to give the 'Varsity men plenty of rest no regular football practice was held at the Cornell camp today, but this evening the entire squad was called together by the coaches and listened to reports of the men who had seen Pennsylvania and Michigan play last Saturday. Head Coach Sharpe saw this contest and he and the other Cornellian scouts are convinced that the big red team will have the battle of its life at Ann Arbor next Saturday.

The scrubs have a series of plays used by Michigan which they will try on the 'Varsity in the first scrimmage tomorrow. The Cornell practice this week will be of a defensive nature, as the Cornell offense is now working nicely and the coaches do not desire to tire any of the backs.

While the loss of Bailey at right tackle will be felt because of the experience he has gained this Fall and because it will be difficult to get a new part fitted into the 'Varsity machine at this date, the coaches do not regard the task as impossible. Coach Reed has three promising candidates for tackle, Jewett, Fincher, and Allen. All three are big, powerful men, and it is believed that one of them can be whipped into shape for the coming game. Allen's aggressive defensive playing last Saturday made quite a hit, and if he can keep it up in the scrimmages he stands a good chance to make the team. Allen, who weighs 190 pounds, has been unable to do much so far because of a leg injury which kept him out of the game for weeks.

The line squad was much strengthened today by the return of McCutchcon, the 190-pound guard, who was hurt in the Pittsburgh game and kept out of the line-up for six weeks. He will be able to fill in either at guard or tackle, as the coaches desire.

CRIMSON TAKES DAY OFF.

Substitute Full Back King the Only Player Hurt in Saturday's Game.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 9.—There was no work mapped out for the Harvard 'Varsity football team on Soldiers' Field this afternoon, Percy Haughton giving a holiday to his regulars and first substitutes and even taking the day off himself. A few of the players strolled down to the field, but it was only to watch a hot scrimmage that took place between the third string 'Varsity and the freshmen substitutes who did not get a chance to play against Andover on Saturday. The team as it played against Princeton is ready to begin hard work tomorrow. There was no serious injury, and the only man who left the game for any time is substitute Full-back King, who, after making ten successive rushes late in the Princeton game, received a kick on the head. Even King, however, is not seriously hurt.

This week Harvard will have the services of Wallace, the centre rush, and Morgan, a much-needed substitute tackle. Wallace will have a task to get his jobaway from Bigelow, who was so good against both the Wolverines and Princeton. Morgan would have been a substitute tackle anyway, but his presence helps the general rush-line situation a lot.

Head Coach Haughton will not allow his men to become overconfident over their success against the Tigers. He figures that the Princeton team looked weak mainly because they never got going.

Marks Wins with Cue.

Leo Marks made an auspicious start in the opening game of the amateur handicap billiards tournament which began last night at Doyle's Academy, when he defeated George La Rue, by the score of 75 to 74. La Rue plays at the scratch mark of twenty points, so that Marks had only to tally 55 points to win, while La Rue was compelled to score 75.

Dog Show for Belgian Fund.

A committee of dog owners decided, at a meeting in the Hotel Albemarle-Hoffman yesterday, to hold a dog show for the benefit of the Red Cross and Belgian relief funds on Dec. 22 and 23, at the Grand Central Palace. It will be held under the American Kennel Club rules and a delegate is to consult with the Westminster Kennel Club today to enlist its support. A "ribbon" show, with supplementary special prizes, at an entrance fee of $1, has been decided on. Theodore Offermann, the international judge of Airedales, was the Chairman. Another meeting will be held at noon tomorrow in the rooms of the American Kennel Club.

PLOT TO BRIBE TWO FOOTBALL PLAYERS

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Nov. 9.—Considerable excitement in student quarters was caused today by a rumor that the proprietor of a local billiard hall had declared he could bribe Half Back Maulbetsch and Quarter Back Hughitt of the University of Michigan football team to throw the game with Cornell next Saturday.

A crowd of students, estimated to number 3,000, gathered in front of the poolroom tonight and threw a few stones through the windows of the building. No other damage was done, but the proprietor kept out of the way of the angry throng.

"Joe" Reinger, the man against whom the demonstration was made, admitted tonight he had written a letter to an Eastern gambler offering to "fix" the two players so Cornell would be absolutely certain to win next Saturday's game. He insisted, however, his letter was a scheme to induce the Easterner to bet against Michigan, and declared the statements therein as to his ability to bribe the players were absolutely false.

COACH WEFERS PICKS TEAM.

Columbia Runners Who Will Start in A. A. U. Race Saturday.

J. S. Langthorn, a sophomore, led the pack of Columbia harriers who competed yesterday afternoon in the third Van Amringe cross-country run. The run was held over the six-mile course at Van Cortlandt Park selected for the A. A. U. cross-country run on Saturday afternoon. Langthorn covered the course in the actual time of 36:37, beating L. C. Smith, Captain of the 'Varsity cross-country team, and who finished second in the Princeton run last week, by a few yards. Smith won the Van Amringe run held last week.

W. F. Glimm, '15, and J. S. Langthorn are now tied in the series with the low score of 14 each, and the next two runs will decide who gets the trophy. Smith and W. V. Myers, '17, are close on the heels of the leaders, with 15 points each, and W. H. Diekman, '16, is next with 16 points, and R. F. Shepherd, '17, follows with 17 points. The rest of the field have large scores.

Bernie Wefers used the results of the run as a basis for picking the team which will represent the Blue and White in the junior metropolitan A. A. U. run on Saturday. He would not announce any of the times made by the runners. He chose the following men for the team: L. G. Smith, '15; J. S. Langthorn, '17; W. F. Glimm, '15; D. Zgoda, '17; W. V. Myers, '17; W. H. Diekman, '16; J. P. Knox, '17; R. F. Shepherd, '17, and C. D. Shiffman, '16, substitute.

BULL TERRIER CLUB MEETS.

At the annual meeting of the Bull Terrier Club of New York, held at the Hotel Gregorian last evening, with James R. Waterhouse presiding, Daniel P. Ritchey was elected President, Mrs. Alice Pell Vice President, James E. Meade Treasurer, and Mrs. Dix Taylor Secretary.

Mr. Ritchey, the new President, proposes to revivify the club with monthly shows and challenge cups to be won on the points-won-at-shows system, and by at least quadrupling the present membership.

Following the business meeting there was a match show of dogs, in which John Kaiser's bitch Westhill's Queenie received the reward, Peter Yost acting as judge. The reserve went to Mrs. P. J. Sullivan's Lady Grand, a diminutive five-weeks-old puppy, with a perfect bulldog face and nose and handsomely brindled body, which had previously won the ribbon for the best puppy bitch under six months old. Leo Hancox's Dr. Derby won in the puppy class for dogs under six months, and W. F. Kubeck's Crystal Peter's King for the "over six months" class. Mrs. S. Schmidt's Golden Rod's Comfort got the ribbon in the class for puppy bitches over six months old, and Westhill's Queenie won in the open class, both sexes competing.

Shepherd Dog Fanciers Assemble.

Mrs. Halstead Yates of Oakridge, Va., Vice President of the German Shepherd Dog Club of America, presided at the quarterly meeting of the club, held at the Hotel Gregorian yesterday afternoon and evening, and attended by breeders and owners of this breed of dogs from all parts of the country. After a long consideration of names mentioned to act as judges of the breed at shows throughout the country, a list of five was determined on for recommendation to the managers of the various shows and field trials. Three of these were particularly recommended to the Westminster Kennel Club to officiate at the show of that club next February were Miss Anne Tracy of Highland Falls, N. Y.; Henry Jarrett of Philadelphia, and Dr. William Neuhoff of Long Island, with a request that one of these be decided on as the adjudicator for the class at their show.

It was also decided to hold a field trial of the dogs at Vernon Castle's place at Manhassett, L. I. The date suggested was the second Saturday in December, but this will not be definitely settled until the meeting of the Executive Committee, to be held this morning.

Dillon Knocks Out Weinert.

WELSH LOSES TO WHITE.

Chicago Boy Wins Ten-Round Bout from Lightweight Champion.

Special to The New York Times.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Nov. 9.—The pugilistic lightweight championship crown worn by Freddie Welsh of England was tarnished tonight in a fiercely fought ten-round contest here, when Charlie White of Chicago, the lately developed contender of the Middle West, received the newspaper decision after ten rounds. Under the law a referee's decision was not legal, but it was the general opinion that Charlie White was entitled to the honors by a whirlwind finish.

The victory of White was a popular one. He defeated Willie Ritchie in ten rounds before the then champion agreed to tackle Welsh, and his subsequent battles in the ring had led many of his friends to predict championship honors for him. White's showing in the bout was watched with considerable interest, and he was only dangerous when he had full play of his arms to flash over his left hook. He proved himself almost as fast as Welsh with his hands, and hit with more force. It was this advantage that earned for him the honors.

There was little to choose between the pair in the opening round, but White woke up in the second and obtained the honors by a large margin. He continued to carry the fight to his man and improved his position in the third and fourth rounds. At this point, however, Welsh rallied and won the next two rounds.

In the fifth session Welsh landed fully a half dozen blows without receiving a return. He brought matters to an even turn in the sixth round, although the margin was slight.

White came back strong in the seventh round and by forcing matters had a shade over his opponent, and in the eighth, which was even, he had the Britisher breathing heavily at the end.

The battle waged furiously in the ninth and tenth rounds, but White was able to offset the Englishman's cleverness by his stiff punching, and earned the decision by a small margin.

NEW YORK BOXERS LOSE.

Fast bouts ruled in the semi-finals and finals of the amateur tournament held by the National Turn Verein in Newark, N. J., last night. Several New York boys reached the final rounds, but only one, Allie Nack of the Union Settlement A. C., captured a first prize. In the best contest of the night John Garry of the Greek-American A. C. of this city lost to Harry Gold of the National Turn Verein after two extra rounds had been ordered by the judges. Summary:

FRENCH CYCLISTS BALK.

The four French bicycle riders who arrived on the Rochambeau yesterday have fired their first guns, and have made the six-day race at the Garden, which starts one minute after midnight next Sunday, their target. The foreign contingent is up in arms over the rules that govern the race, and unless Manager MacFarland accedes to their demands the annual grind will be run without the appearance of the foreigners. Under the American rules, the six-day races are decided in a one-mile sprint between the leaders, while in Europe the races are decided by the leaders racing the last hour under the point system, the leading team at the end of each lap scoring points. The team scoring the most points during the hour receives first money.

Lucien Petit-Breton, the motor-paced champion of Europe, acted as spokesman for his countrymen, and said it was the opinion of the riders that the same conditions that govern European races were to be in vogue here, and with that idea they received the news of the absence from the French Government to ride in the New York race. Manager MacFarland will call a meeting of the American riders today, for the purpose of finding out whether they will ride the finish of the race under the European rules or not.

Soros claims the one-hour finish determines the real team winners, and, as the race is a team contest, it should be decided by the test that shows the best team, and not the best sprinters. With such crack sprinters as Goullet, Clark, Grenda, Walthour, Cananagh, and other Americans and Australians, the Frenchmen do not think they would have a chance with the one-mile finish, but with the one-hour finish they figure they would have a good chance to annex the first money.

YOUNG DONOVAN TARGET FOR GIBBONS

Six rounds sufficed to demonstrate that Young Mike Donovan is not built of middleweight championship timber. The son of the former boxing instructor of the New York A. C. made his first appearance in fast company last night at Madison Square Garden, where he faced Mike Gibbons, and the result was somewhat of a farce, as Referee Billy Roche stopped the bout in the sixth round to save the New Yorker any more punishment. Donovan was outclassed, and the big crowd approved the action of the referee.

Donovan had a severe attack of stage fright, and before the end of the first round Gibbons realized this, and played with his man, inflicting punishment in every one of the six rounds, until he had Donovan almost at his mercy. He showered uppercuts, swings, and jabs with scarcely a return, and after reducing Donovan to a state of almost helplessness, he started in like a master mechanic to finish his work in the most approved fashion. Two knockdowns in the fifth round was the beginning of the end, and when a stiff right-hand punch on the jaw dropped Donovan in the sixth, the referee stopped the one-sided bout.

Gibbons appeared to better advantage than in any of his previous contests in this city, but this was due to the fact that he was opposed to a boxer whose inferiority appeared to accentuate his own pugilistic ability. Donovan appeared to be afraid to take any chances. Even when he found himself hopelessly outclassed he tried to beat his opponent at his own game. In this he made a big mistake, as he lacked the cleverness, punching power, and ring experience of the Westerner, and as a result he was the receiver general throughout the bout. Whether Donovan would have made a better showing had he forced matters is doubtful, as every move he made showed his lack of ring generalship and knowledge of the finer points of boxing. He had one point, however, in his favor. He was game and took his punishment without flinching. Even in close quarters, where he had an opportunity to exchange blows with Gibbons on better terms than when at long range, he was content to hang on and passively accept all the punishment handed out by his opponent.

Gibbons realized his easy task in the first two rounds. He feinted and drew out Donovan, and then, after getting him at his mercy, he proceeded to send home his pile-driving blows. Once or twice Donovan made futile attempts to stem the tide of defeat, but Gibbons had no difficulty in ducking the rushes of the boxer-in, and easily steered his way inside of the swings, which were delivered with the best intentions.

While the Gibbons-Donovan contest was a disappointment to the latter's friends, the second of the scheduled ten-round bouts gave the spectators a run of their money. It served to introduce Kid Lewis, an English lightweight, and Phil Bloom of Brooklyn. The Britisher won all the way, and proved himself a worthy successor of Jem Driscoll, Spike Robson, Nate Wells, and Billy Plimmer, although he lacks the finer points of boxing enjoyed by the aforementioned. Unlike these men Lewis has acquired the American style of roughing it in the ring. He forced matters from the start, showing himself to be a clever two-handed fighter, with considerable shiftiness and good footwork. He hits determinedly, and has a good judge of distance. He was the aggressor throughout, and outclassed the Brooklynite both at infighting and at long range boxing.

To Winter at Sheepshead Bay.

Superintendent Frank Clark of the Sheepshead Bay race track has been putting the stables in condition for the wintering of the racing stables of August Belmont, Schuyler R. Parsons, Dr. Knapp, (who races under the name of the Onack Stable,) and Mr. Johnston, (who races under the name of the Quincy Stable.) The horses belonging to these owners will arrive at the track in the latter part of this month or early in December. Yearlings belonging to these stables are already housed there, and to the belonging string will be added the yearlings he is shipping from France as soon as he can get steamship accommodations. The brood mares belonging to Mr. Belmont will be shipped from New York direct to the breeding farm in Kentucky. They are expected here in a couple of weeks.

Haggin Stable Hands Pensioned.

All the stable hands connected with the breeding establishment of the late J. B. Haggin on the Neck Road at Sheepshead Bay received welcome and unexpected news last week. They were notified by the executors of the estate that in accordance with the wishes of Mr. Haggin they would be continued in his employment

A GOOD DEMOCRATIC TRUST.

The dynamite is taken out of the trust question when it is made impossible to discuss it without satirical laughter. That point is not far away since the Democrats have begun defending their trusts as strenuously as they still attack the Republican trusts. Mr. ROOSEVELT was not long President before he discovered how good the trusts were to the Republicans. The Democrats would have none of his sort of regulation of the trusts. Now we have a Democratic Administration, and it officially runs a cotton trust, or pool, or speculation, or other artificial regulation of a price, on the plea that it is different from other price regulations. President ROOSEVELT rejected his Attorney General's advice that guilt was personal, and it enraged the Democrats. Now the Democratic Attorney General officially rules that an operation in cotton by an agreement upon the largest scale known to trade is not a conspiracy obnoxious to the law for twenty reasons. All of them are good, but the best one is not referred to. This is a Democratic trust, and whatever it does is for reasons of patriotism. Men of business may go about their business until restrained of their liberty and deprived of their property by a jury.

We have never concealed our opinion that such questions are better decided by law than by politics, by the courts rather than by the Administration. Almost nothing that elections alter is fit to be regulated by law. Nothing that is fit to be regulated by law should be left to the discretion of officials. It is only in a political sense that the Attorney General's opinion on the cotton corner is amusing. As matter of law he probably is right in holding that the cotton corner is innocent, not because it is so different from other corners, but because it is so like them. Attorney General GREGORY'S good corner, and the corners his predecessors prosecuted with such few successes and such ruinous victories, all had in common the regulation or fixing of prices. If the Democratic corner would not affect prices it would not have been dreamed of, and would not now be persisted in. If fixing prices by agreement and procurement is wicked, and there is nothing to be said in defense, then the cotton corner is as objectionable at least as the coffee corner, recently run by Brazil under similar conditions, and prosecuted by the United States Government with results only hazily remembered, and of no importance since the coffee market has resumed charge of itself.

To the Democrats it was preposterous that the Republican protection of the Steel Trust and the Harvester Trust had any good motive or public reason. It is now the turn of the Republicans to play better politics, and recognize that their reasons are good when it is the turn of the Democrats to use them. The cotton corner is defensible, perhaps even admirable, because it has a good motive, and is proposed and managed by reputable men for public reasons. Yesterday the Department of Agriculture announced that the price paid to planters on Nov. 1 this year was a trifle over 6 cents, against 13 cents last year. The loss to the planters is reckoned at $455,000,000. The loss to the country through the disturbance of international trade is several times that sum. It is a public calamity rather than a planters' calamity, and it is proper to reduce it in proper ways. This corner run by bankers and men of business is incomparably better than proposals to issue currency upon cotton or to "buy a bale." Already the South itself is starting the cry, "Sell a bale." The two movements are as opposite as the poles economically, but are identical morally. Either should be allowed to succeed or to fail according to the economics of the case, the politics having nothing to do with it, nor the law.

There is no difficulty in pointing out where cotton conspiracies become actionable. According to The Chattanooga Times:

> In Texas and Arkansas warnings have been posted notifying planters that dire things will happen to them if they shall attempt to dispose of their crops at a less figure than that arbitrarily fixed by the "riders." Georgia, Mississippi, and Alabama are living in dread, it is stated, that they are to be attacked in the same way, and precautions are being taken to check and meet it.

That is an example of a conspiracy in restraint of trade which can be recognized on a dark night, and as well by Democrats as by Republicans. There are other similar conspiracies which the Administration is leaving alone, in Colorado and Arkansas, for example. That scandal is greater than the running of the good Democratic corner, which is good not because it is Democratic but because it is good morally. When the morals of trusts are the touchstone of their legality, and when the standard of morals is that of the community and not of politicians or officials, the trust question is settled. There never ought to have been anything more in it, and there cannot now be anything more put into it. The reign of terror is about over.

AN AMBASSADORIAL PROBLEM.

The grave responsibilities of our diplomatic representatives in Europe, especially in the countries directly involved in the war, have not decreased in the last three months, they are likely to increase. The services of men of intellectual alertness, diplomatic experience, practical discretion, and a fair knowledge of international law are required in our foreign embassies and ministries. From this point of view, the assurance that Ambassador GERARD will remain at the post in Berlin which he has filled so satisfactorily, instead of taking a place in the United States Senate next March, is a matter for public congratulation. At present Mr. GERARD can serve his country better as Ambassador to Germany than he could in any other post, however high and exacting.

Like Mr. GERARD in Berlin, Mr. HERRICK in Paris has administered the affairs of his office admirably in the trying times of war and accomplished with unfailing judgment the innumerable tasks which in such times fall to the lot of the Ambassador of a neutral State. Mr. HERRICK, however, is merely holding over, his successor has been appointed and confirmed, and has been in Paris for some time, though he has not yet made his formal call upon the President of the Republic or presented his papers. That Mr. HERRICK personally would be glad to be relieved from his task, which has been made doubly irksome by the apparition at the scene of his labors of a duly accredited successor, is not to be doubted, but there is a strong feeling among his fellow-countrymen that he should be retained until the trials and responsibilities of the American Ambassadorship to France have been somewhat lightened.

There is no present prospect of a short war. We are informed that President WILSON has been urged to keep Mr. HERRICK in the embassy while the war lasts, at least, but there cannot be two Ambassadors in one country at the same time, and if Mr. HERRICK remains Mr. SHARP must be recalled or appointed to another post. This may be regarded as one of the least troublesome of the problems which the war has presented to the President, but it is one in the solution of which many of the people of this country, including some of the strongest supporters of Mr. WILSON, take great interest.

NOT A PARTY ISSUE.

If it is true as rumored that the somewhat discomfited Progressive Party intends to make a new bid for popular support by advocating the upbuilding of the United States Navy and the strengthening of its army, so that the nation may not be caught unawares in a time of peril, its leaders will surely find that they cannot monopolize that issue in the political field. Not only the Republican, but the Democratic Party as well, may safely be counted upon to demand the improvement of our means of defense. The intelligent people of the country, without regard to their political preferences, are awake to the need of putting their navy where it belongs in relation to those of the European Powers, and of filling up to their full quota the regiments of the army, which will be efficient enough for all ordinary requirements when that is done. The question of the establishment of a serviceable army reserve, often debated, and discussed ably in recent War Department reports and in the communications to the department of Gen. LEONARD WOOD while he was Chief of Staff, will undoubtedly be brought up in Congress at the next session. This is a burning question, but it is one easy enough to answer if the Military Committees can be induced to comprehend the value of a shorter term of enlistment with the colors. Our coast defenses must be placed in a condition to render the landing of armed forces impossible, and the field artillery must be made useful by the purchase of more guns and the provision of an adequate supply of ammunition.

There is no doubt that the efficiency of the navy has fallen off of late. More enlisted men are required, and the mistaken Democratic policy of withholding appropriations for the building of modern warships will make much larger appropriations and harder work necessary in the immediate future. Whether we build superdreadnoughts or fleet submarines large expenditures will be required. Ex-Secretary of the Navy MEYER adds his testimony to that of others well informed about the present condition of the navy, as to the need of improvement if our coasts are to be safeguarded, the Panama Canal protected, and our oversea possessions watched. The various branches of the army are short nearly 9,000 men. The upbuilding of our military and naval defenses will not be a party issue in the campaign of 1916.

AN OBJECT LESSON.

It would be interesting if we could have a moving picture film of the working of the voters' minds in the district described by our correspondent Mr. MASON OLCOTT. There were 187 valid votes. Of these five were left entirely blank; on eight ballots there was no vote for Governor; on forty-two there was no vote for United States Senator; on five there was no vote for City Court Justice. That is to say that 23 per cent. of the voters could not choose a candidate for Senator and 28 per cent. could not choose a candidate for Justice.

Evidently this relative paralysis of the faculty of selection was due to the extra exertion required to make a mark before the name of each candidate. When the voter could "plump" for all the candidates of any one party by making a single cross in one circle, he could go through the motions with ease, and could appear to make a choice among the candidates for each place. It was, of course, in appearance only, as the above figures show. Even aided by the party name and the party emblem which are printed with each candidate's name, the falling off of votes is marked. If we wish to ascertain how many votes would be cast by the deliberate choice of each voter for each office, we should have to abolish emblems and party names and print on the ballot, under each office, simply the names of candidates, leaving the voter to choose from among them as he best could with such information and judgment as he could attain. It is safe to say that in such a district as Mr. OLCOTT describes, at least half the voters would give up in despair. That is, not more than one-half the voting is in any logical, accurate, or practical sense of the word an election at all.

Obviously this is an evil, and a great one. It is by no means a hopeless one. If the number of offices to be filled were reduced; if only important offices were filled by election; if the elections were less frequent, the voter could and would make a real choice. The demand on his time, the task of informing himself, would be well worth his while. He could more easily than now really do a great deal more with his vote. This is by far the most important matter with which the Constitutional Convention will be called on to deal.

Man is a wrong-headed animal. He may take his pleasures sadly, but he insists on taking his griefs hilariously. He goes into battle singing comic songs. He may see his comrades fall, he may have to lay waste a country if his officers tell him to, and he should mourn and analyze his emotions and his deeds introspectively and think objectively of the terrible things he is seeing; but he plays practical jokes on his surviving comrades and becomes heated over a bunkie's failure to return a swap of tobacco. If he is a non-combatant it is just the same; his motto is, "Why should the children of a King go mourning all their days?"

Scandal follows among the good but wearisome people who would have the perverse human brute logical; and they write articles and letters to the editor condemning the heartless folk who dance to "It's a Long Way to Tipperary" when brave men are singing that air as they go to death. It should be sacred. If these well-meaning people could get Tommy Atkins's view they would be surprised at his attitude and shocked by his language. He will be tickled and flattered when he hears that careless merrymakers dance on Broadway to his marching song. Why did he pick it out? The English kinsfolk of these well-meaning mourners of ours set dignified and ennobling war songs for him to sing but he would have none of them; he cast them into outer darkness and sang "Tipperary" because it had nothing to do with the case.

Is it irreverent and profane not to wear a long face, not to speak in hushed tones whenever one thinks of the tragedy abroad? Why, in our own great national tragedy we turned as much of it as we could into comedy. We sang songs which treated our suffering heroes lightly, irreverently; we sang "The Captain with His Whiskers Stole a Sly Glance at Me," and we sang of "Old Massa, with the muffstache on his face." And we danced to those tunes; and our suffering heroes would not sing "The Star-Spangled Banner," but insisted on such irrelevant songs as "Lorena."

When the wars of the French Revolution were raging, after the fall of ROBESPIERRE, there was a great burst of gayety in Paris, there were "Victim Balls," to be admitted to which one must have lost a relative under the Terror, and must wear a badge of crape around the arm. "Peace to the dead, let us dance to their memory! For in all ways one must dance." So CARLYLE views it, and is wise.

Hear him again; while the September massacres were going on, twenty-three theatres were crowded nightly; "while right arms here grew weary with slaying, right arms there were tweedle-deeing on melodious catgut." Heartless? Perhaps; but perhaps the explanation lies deeper in human nature, and those are not all-wise who believe that mourning consists in crape alone. "Let us dance to their memory"; it was not unsympathetically or callously that the merrymakers chose for their great dancing tune the one which the soldiers had chosen for their marching tune, chose it out of a hundred others. Man is, as WILDE said, "a clown with a broken heart"; he would die of his broken heart if he ceased his clowning. Light-hearted and light-headed little people of the cabarets, dance on to the tune of "Tipperary"; only the unco' guid misunderstand you, and Tommy Atkins smiles approval.

PATRIOTISM IN AMERICA.

Rear Admiral STOCKTON'S expression of his doubts about our patriotism as a people is worth heeding, although he explains that the reports of his speech were somewhat exaggerated. The mere fact that American citizens have formed the bad habit of looking to the Government to correct all evils without trying to do their own share is not necessarily significant of an inherent lack of public spirit, whether it is noted in the District of Columbia, where the people have no initiative, or in the East or South or Far West, all of which fall under the Admiral's ban. For he is tolerably sure of the survival of patriotism only in the Middle West, where it is built on "a love of community." There is assuredly a love of community in New England, in the South, in California, as pronounced as that in the States Admiral STOCKTON praises, but habitual neglect of many of the essentials of citizenship is noticeable everywhere in the United States.

If patriotism depended upon the "charm of literature and general culture" we would be compelled to get along without it until our literary art became strong enough to develop culture. If it depends on national efficiency, however, we have it within us to be as efficient as any people now on earth. We are already remarkably efficient—in spots. What our life, as we have been living it since the era of prodigious prosperity that followed the civil war, chiefly lacks is discipline. That defect has been apparent in almost every walk of life. It is the worst defect of the rising generation. It is obvious that when the aim of nearly every youth is to get rich quickly the patriotic ideal is lost sight of. We must admit that there are signs that the national ideals have been rather sordid. Self-respect begets love of community and underlies love of country.

But we do not despair of American patriotism. The makings of the patriot are in every State, not only in the Middle West. It would be better for us, undoubtedly, if as a people we had more regard for the humbler virtues which have been so apparent in the German character—thoroughness, willingness to work for the sake of the work, obedience. We have been living too easily and carelessly. But though such comments as the observations of Admiral STOCKTON have led him to make are of great value as stimulants to the citizen's self-respect, we have no doubt the Admiral feels that in a time of peril the response of the people would be prompt, that their patriotism would not fail in an emergency. It is just as well that we should be rebuked now and then for our obvious defects—the most obvious of all being the tendency to neglect the duties of citizenship, the willingness to shirk responsibilities which cannot safely be transferred to others.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Defended Before Attacked.

A writer in the review just started here with The New Republic for its not very intelligible and not particularly promising title—there, now, is an adjective which if coalesced into one word or even hyphenated would delight the Teutonic mind—a writer in The New Republic, to begin again, makes eloquent protest against manifestations of disdain for the poets who have been moved to sing of war.

> We should, he declares, deal gently with those persons "whom patriotic impulse or a noble, unintelligent aspiration to be worthy of a great moment has too early set to work," yet he, too, apparently, disdains the poetry, if not the poets, for he adds: "The war is not yet a subject except for the rhetoricians. Some day it will find its great poet."

In protesting, as in explaining, it is well to build on a fact—on a reality—and, so far as we have observed, fairly competent war poets have already come forward in considerable numbers, and their productions have been received, if not with any wild enthusiasm, at least with enough of sympathetic admiration to make their defense from criticism superfluous. To be sure, a vast amount of wearisome and worthless scribbling has been done by people who thought their personal preference for peace as compared with war more important and interesting than it was, but the "poems" that resulted have for the most part troubled the public not at all, since they were promptly returned to the writers with a few chastely carved remarks on the peculiarities of the "available."

The hireling winnowers of offered verse, however, have not performed their eliminative task with no reward except their pay. In the bushels of unavailability they have found more than an occasional gem more or less serene—a not infrequent wedding of real art and strong emotion. Did not modesty prevent, we could make quite a long list of war poems deserving of the name that have appeared in recent weeks right on this page, and judging from the comment which they have excited and the letters they have brought in, neither the poems nor the poets have been the victims of disdain.

Improbable, but Not Unbelievable.

One hardly knows what to think of the tale brought here by the Captain of the good ship Indra. Nobody can help wanting to believe it, and certainly anybody can who will, for it contains not a single impossibility, and, as is well known, everything that can happen does happen—at sea.

The only excuse for lack of faith, after all, is the story's symmetry and ordered progression through the established degrees of action. That, as always, savors of art, not of nature, for never, or hardly ever, does nature make a story that an artist can or would use just as it is provided for him. And the law of probability, while not broken, is certainly strained by the coming together at just the right moment of a French Captain who could invent at a moment's notice a detailed exposition of Germany's defeat, and of a German Captain perspicacious enough to see the trap set for him and turn hastily away from the long-sought port that lay, figuratively speaking, just under his weary bows.

That there are French Captains both ingenious, humorous, and crafty is indubitable; that there are German Captains to whom instinct would command the distrusting, for once, of information derived from a source—another Captain—proved trustworthy by immemorial experience need not be denied. But that the one and the other should meet at precisely the psychological moment to produce the story—that is what puts credulity to the test.

The Indra, however, is here with her precious cargo, and not where she would naturally be if something like what her master relates had not happened to save her from the British. What better proof of the story's truth than that could, or at any rate should, be demanded? At any rate, it beautifully balances the tale of the German Captain on Lake Nyassa who angrily told the Britons who were energetically bombarding his ship that if they weren't careful they would hit it.

Look Well After the Babies.

In spite of the admirable energy shown by Federal and State officials, the menace of the cattle plague which has so suddenly broken out seems to be growing steadily more serious day by day, and the near approach of the infection to this city has already excited keen apprehension here, owing to the perils which lurk in the milk of the cows affected by the mysterious fever.

The inevitable advance in the price of meat would be no slight calamity in these days, but to this is added a new danger to human health, a danger that is made the cause of the more anxiety because it chiefly, perhaps wholly, touches very young children, the only class for whom good milk in close to its natural state comes near to being an absolute necessity of life. Already the parents of New York babies are receiving from physicians the warning to give them no milk that has not been subjected to a considerable degree of heat, carefully applied. It must not be boiled, since that largely detracts from its nutritive value.

The scientific name of the foot-and-mouth disease—aphthous fever—is significant of the little that is really known about this malady, for "aphthous" signifies only "eruptive," and, therefore, would be equally applicable to most of the other fevers. It spreads literally like fire among animals with cloven feet, and does it in some way not yet discovered. Adult humanity is apparently almost or quite immune to it, but the resisting powers of babies are insufficient protection for them.

The situation thus created is another lesson as to the one safe and proper sustenance for—"nurselings."

A Question Merely of Price.

There is little consolation for us in the report just made by a special committee of the American Chemical Society as to the practicability of manufacturing here the synthetic dyes, medicines, and related products hitherto imported from Germany.

These things all can be made in this country, we are told, and that, of course, is no news, but added is the statement that nobody will do it without a considerable increase in tariff protection in order that the American manufacturers, after they have established the new industries at great expense, may be safe from foreign competition after the war is over. That, of course, means that for no longer depending on the European chemists we shall have to pay a big price—a price, we are suavely informed, that will be the larger because of our laws against the sorts of industrial pools and combinations in which "abroad" sees little wickedness or none at all.

The argument is plausible, but its convincing power depends upon the observer's point of view. Some will admit it readily and others will suspect that, deep down, there is something wrong about it.

THE DEMOCRATIC DEFEAT

Interpreted as a Rebuke to Government by Commission.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I have been surprised to find in comments on the recent election so little said of the reason which doubtless caused many men to vote the Republican ticket. I have always been a Democrat, but at this election I cast my vote so that it might be a rebuke to government by commission. I consider the Interstate Commerce Commission, which is a good enough institution if managed conservatively and for the protection of the public, to be in its present method of operation a most dangerous menace to the rights of property. There can be no prosperity in this country so long as its premier security is destroyed by forcing the railroads to pay high expenses and charge absurdly low rates. No business can stand this sort of regulation. It is no more right to treat railroads in this way than it would be to treat manufacturers and merchants and banks.

The Commission today exercises a power which the Constitution never contemplated. Its adviser, or rather dictator, Mr. Brandeis, is today more powerful than most Kings. He tells the Commission what they must do and must not do, and they meekly follow his directions. Between them they are destroying values by billions, meaning well, but ignorant. Obsessed with the false idea that regulation must always be downward, they are paralysing the country. I am not a railroad man, nor do I own a share of railroad stock or a single bond. Every man I deal with is being affected adversely by these railroad conditions. The war itself is not doing the damage which is being caused by this Frankenstein of the United States.

If the Democratic Party wishes the votes of thinking men, it must brace itself to change all this and give to all business its constitutional rights. If not, the trouble which capital now recognises will at last necessarily be recognised by labor, and both capital and labor will unite to rid themselves of the slavery in which they now serve a blind and misguided Government by commission.

IS AMERICA SAFE?

Would Monroe Doctrine Be Respected in Case of German Victory?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

As a Yankee partly educated in Germany I may be pardoned in urging that the American interest in the present war is more than academic. It is vital. May I give some reasons?

Reflecting the German Government's ambition to Germanize the world, as very openly declared in late years in the State papers from Berlin, plans have been inquired into through professors and others for forming a German political party in America out of our Teuton population. The idea was to further in Washington the Kaiser's announced plan of world domination.

Should he crush France and sweep England from the seas our turn would come next. Junkerdom would insist on a foothold on our hemisphere. The Monroe Doctrine must then be protected by an ever-growing fleet and army or be thrown into the discard. Our country would become a permanently strong military nation, and await the inevitable decision by the cannon and sword as to whether our language should be German, and our orders come from Berlin. For the Kaiser's pronunciamentos on world dominion have left no doubt that God is with the Hohenzollern, and that Germany, the newest of the great political nations, is ordained to rule the globe by the mailed fist and iron heel, if necessary.

The Germans have no free public press and free university professors in our sense. Their newspapers and magazines are practically censored by Junkerdom, and their professors furnish closely watched organ voices of the Kaiser's power. In consequence the good German people have imperfect notions and uninformed ideas about the political ideals, opinions, and feelings of other races, and are in a constant state of being surprised in foreign matters, as lately in the case of Belgium, England, Italy, and America.

Because of Germany's surrounding enemies unsuspecting Americans would have thought that the German official press would be seeking friendship with the United States in the last two decades. On the contrary, it has quite freely belittled us, and imputed to us unworthy motives. It has identified us unpleasantly as hogs, hypocrites, and dollar chasers.

The underlying reason for this uncomplimentary attitude is this: The Berlin autocracy has an eye for Germanizing America some day, and the proper procedure beforehand is to brand us as of an inferior breed. Whom one would destroy he first derides.

The German people are unapproached in many excellences and virtues. But since they are pleased to lose themselves in the military folds of the Hohenzollern cloak of Welt-politik and Pan-Germanism our American ideals, however faulty, must necessarily part us in appreciation and sympathy. And the Kaiser's spurred heel—let no unsophisticated Yankee beguile himself with ideas of fancied security—is ultimately intended for America, too, if he can overwhelm Western Europe. "Live and let live" is not a Prussian saying. The Berlin camarilla sees a declining necessity for the second half of it.

Why Not Invite Their Transplantation to This Country?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

While other hard-headed and practical American business men are gloating over the commercial possibilities which the European conflict has opened to us here, it might not be amiss to consider the golden opportunities in the higher fields of human thought and endeavor which Europe's temporary return to barbarism has placed within our grasp.

Why should not America avail herself of this wonderful opportunity, and extend a welcome to the world-renowned professors of those ancient seats of learning, to come here and spread their culture among our institutions? Why should not America officially extend a shelter to the art treasures of sorely-beset Belgium, thus allowing our own people the privilege of viewing at first-hand the works of the old masters? Why do not some of our public-spirited patrons of art, who give their splendid support to opera houses and national theatre movements, invite the entire troupe of the Comedie Francaise to display their art in our midst, or ask a Jules Lemaitre to come over and give us the benefit of his keen-witted and analytical observations on the drama and literature?

Every great war of history has had the effect of driving the exponents of the gentler arts to friendly shelters in foreign lands, and, while their own countries have been laid waste by fire and sword, they have lent the lasting benefits of their culture to their appreciative hosts. It is true that we Americans are deeply grieved over the misfortune that has visited all Europe, but if we find time and courage to write long articles on the commercial benefits of the war to ourselves, we would do well not to overlook the marvelous opportunity that is knocking at our door.

Sweaters and Coats for Belgians.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

THE TIMES of Nov. 4 prints a list of Red Cross wants which as it stands may act as a damper on our much-needed American charity. For instance, the statement that the Belgians do not wear sweaters and that only young girls wear coats is likely to prevent a quantity of warm clothing from being sent. All over the country people of limited means are getting together such clothing as they can spare. How many of them can send such shawls as are described? At a time when the greater part of a nation is destitute it is hardly wise to dictate so precisely what shall be given. I have before me a letter from Mr. Hall, the Belgian Consul, 25 Madison Avenue, in which he says that he will forward "warm clothing of every description," so long as it is in good condition, for men, women, and children.

A Belgian lady who is managing the local relief work tells me that her people do wear sweaters, and that all contributions of good, warm clothing would be welcome. The Red Cross statement may do great harm if it turns away the thousands of persons with small incomes who can contribute partly worn clothing, but who have neither the time nor the money to provide special kinds. To such it should be said that there is pressing need for sweaters, women's coats, everything, and that there are persons glad to receive and forward them.

The United States as Mediator.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The generosity with which you open your columns to representatives of all nations has won for THE NEW YORK TIMES the gratitude and admiration of a great number of Americans. May I ask for space in your columns to remind your readers of the importance of abstinence from expressions of passionate partisanship with regard to the European war—of an attitude of willingness to be friendly for all which is, I believe, likely to be fostered by the publication of statements from all parties?

In my opinion, one chief reason why we should do our best to remain neutral in spirit is the probability that the United States may, by acting as mediator between the warring nations, bring about peace much sooner than any other agency. Any unwillingness of either party to believe in the wish of the American people to do it justice will make that party fight long before putting its fate in our hands; any expression of passionate partisanship will surely contribute to such unwillingness. The thought that in this way a bitter word here may cost a life in Europe ought to make us most anxious to respond to the appeal made in the proclamation of President Wilson—an appeal which many seem to have forgotten all too soon.

GOVERNORS MEET TODAY.

Important Legislation to be Discussed at Seventh Annual Conference.

MADISON, Wis., Nov. 9.—Thirty-six Governors, former Governors, and Governors-elect are expected to attend the opening here tomorrow of the seventh annual Governors' conference, which for five days will suggest and consider means of improving conditions within States and of simplifying relations between States.

Conservation of natural resources, as in previous conferences, is to be the dominating subject, but this year it is to be considered by the Governors with special reference to State control.

The question of how, by uniform laws, to compel corporations to comply with child labor laws and health and sanitation provisions without discouraging business is, according to Miles C. Riley, secretary of the conference, one of the most important problems ever brought before the Governors.

BETTER TRADE BALANCE.

Exports Exceeded Imports by Only $40,000,000 in Past Month.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—The gradual adjustment of commercial conditions to take care of the balance of trade without the need of artificial agreements between the United States and Great Britain regarding the reopening of the Exchanges is indicated in figures obtained at the Treasury Department this afternoon. These figures show that from Oct. 5 to Nov. 7 American exports exceeded imports by about $40,000,000. If this ratio continues it will hardly be necessary to ship American gold abroad.

The imports for the period mentioned amounted to about $131,000,000, while exports for the same period were about $171,000,000.

IN DEFENSE OF GERMANY.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

J. Stewart Gager prints in your recent issue an answer to Dr. Phil. Hellmut L. Spaeth's news circular sent out from Berlin, and which we presume is the same circular letter which every house in the United States doing an international business gets regularly from Germany and which we have been receiving right along, the last one being No. 4. Mr. Gager states that he voices the sentiments of 99 per cent. of Americans, and we would like to know on what figures he bases this. It may be possible that this gentleman has in view only his circles of acquaintances, because we can hardly believe that New York City, or even New York State, has so many narrow-minded people that all of these except this 1 per cent. should side with the Allies.

Mr. Gager must not think, even if New York State is on the side of the Allies, that this comprises the whole country. If he will come further West, South, or Southwest, he will find that pretty nearly 75 per cent. of the population is on the side of Germany; on the Pacific Coast the percentage is still larger. We judge this from the fact that our customers, who amount to 9,854, are located in pretty nearly every city in this country, and to whom we send the reprints of the German circulars regularly—with every invoice, with every offer, with every monthly statement, and through all our salesmen—have never asked us to leave these out of the mail. In fact, 50 per cent. of our customers have requested us to send them additional sheets for further distribution, and among such are those located in all-American States like Massachusetts, Rhode Island, and Maine, where there are certainly very few Germans and Austrians.

The reason why these circulars are sent out from Germany is to counteract the lying dispatches of the Allies, and we cannot see how else Germany and Austria should be able to tell to the world their side of the story, because the cables are cut and only lately did the wireless reports come in promptly.

Mr. Gager thinks that a German success in the present war would be a calamity to the world. We cannot see how he figures this out, because Germany has been the only great country in the world which has not had a war since 1870, and this talk about militarism has become quite a chestnut. If the German people are satisfied to have a large army, are willing to pay for the maintenance of the same, why should there be any objection by other nations or individuals? Germany has made more progress than any other nation and is richer than any other European nation. It has a higher culture, has had no revolution nor scandals. No one who has served in the army, which is but one year for men who have gone through high school and but two years for others, wants to part with his experience; everybody who has served in the German Army is enthusiastic over it; they often enter narrow-chested and weak; they come out broad-chested, strong, and intelligent. The writer, although an American, would like to serve himself.

The writer has just returned from an extensive European trip, visiting every country at war, including Russia, and he came to the conclusion that none of the countries wanted the war, but that simply a great blunder has been made all around. Least of all did Germany want it, because she was much better prepared ten years ago, whereas the Allies were not. From what the writer has seen he came to the conclusion that not alone Germany will be victorious, but that the Allies will lose so heavily that it will take them fifty years to recuperate. Conversations which he had with the authorities in Germany brought out the fact that the Germans had in the beginning of the war thirty-two surprises, of which only a few have been sprung, and which we may mention as the 42-centimeter gun, the still larger gun not quite ready, the long range submarines with their almost invisible periscopes, and the new Diesel engine used on the new Zeppelins not yet out. Therefore, the Allies can expect twenty-eight more trump cards, which seem to be more important than the other four, but which are not ready yet.

"Yvonne" in Rotogravure.

Permit me to thank you for the beautiful reproduction of my water color, "Yvonne," in the Picture Section of THE SUNDAY TIMES today. Mr. Juley has secured an exceptionally fine rendering of the massing and values of the color without loss of detail, a result I should not have believed possible considering the contrasting colors.

In regard to the copper plate, having retouched the regular half-tone plates for many years myself, I consider it about perfect. I should not know where to improve on the work. In short, the result is what one naturally expects in THE TIMES.

AUTUMN.

We sauntered through the quiet, Sunday world,
Care-free and glad, my stalwart love and I.
The sun shone warm; chrysanthemums unfurled,
Blush pink and golden, where we two passed by.

Joy winged our steps; to us, the world seemed young,
E'en frost-touched fields! And then—on our way back—
A hut! Beside its sagging door there hung,
Wind-stirred, a limp and rusty scarf of black!

Strange, sudden chill! A graying of the sky—
And thoughts, swift, sure, inevitable—"Dear."
Our warm hands met; aghast, we hastened by,
And fled. For Death had seemed to crouch so near!

ART NOTES.

Panama Fair Exhibits — Sculpture by Americans on View.

Apparently the Department of Fine Arts of the Panama-Pacific Exposition will succeed in getting a foreign representation of very considerable importance, in spite of the extraordinary difficulties created by the outbreak of the war. Walter McEwen, who is Chairman of the Advisory Committee for Europe, is now in London and is arranging to get into the United States the things sent to London in the early stages of the war, and also to bring to London pictures and objects of art from other exhibiting countries which have not yet assembled their exhibits. Capt. Asher Baker, who sailed for Europe last week, will assemble material in Italy, and in a couple of weeks a United States transport will sail for the Mediterranean, loading at Genoa, Barcelona, and other ports. The courtesies of this transport will be tendered to European exhibitors.

In addition to these arrangements, Mr. Trask is now sending J. Neilson Laurvik as special representative of the Department of Fine Arts solely in the interests of that department, to co-operate with Capt. Baker in bringing over and in securing exhibits from individual artists in countries such as Austria and Hungary, where the conditions of the war have prevented any steps being taken to this end. Mr. Laurvik has the promise of the fullest co-operation from the Governments of all the foreign countries that he will visit, and in Budapest and Vienna he expects to get loans from the public and private galleries of masterpieces that could not, under conditions other than those of the present, be obtained.

Positive assurances have been received from Norway, Sweden, Holland, France, and Italy that these countries will send their exhibits as planned, and will have a representation unchanged by the war. Such is the situation up to this morning, and Mr. Trask is happier than he has been since Aug. 1, 1914.

American Sculptors' Work.

At the Gorham Galleries is an exhibition of sculpture by Americans, ranging from book ends to monuments, and including a number of works fine in feeling and technically satisfying. Herbert Adams heads the list with his "Débutante," admirably simple and large in treatment, without the emptiness that is so often an attribute of modern simplicity. Mr. Adams never combined graciousness and sensitiveness with a quiet and wholesome vigor more successfully than in this little figure, deep-chested and young, a truly classic version of girlhood. Chester Beach shows his "Wave Horses," in which the low relief is skilfully managed to convey delicate modulations of light and shade. Harriet W. Frishmuth's "Saki: A Sun Dial," is particularly fine in the arrangement of the masses, the flexibility of the kneeling figure, and the flow of the line, the disk and gnomon of the dial belonging to the composition in a way seldom achieved. This integrity of design is perhaps the rarest of all qualities in modern sculpture and should be applauded whenever it is found.

Another quality, that of vital line, is not less essential, and is found quite subtly and beautifully demonstrated in Anna Coleman Ladd's group for a pool, called "The Rock and the Flower." A man's seated figure, the arms outstretched across a rocky ledge, provides the sense of repose and force by the quiet horizontal of this long line of the arms. Below stands a girl's figure, as pliant as the stem of a flower, suggesting the upward springing line of the Gothic arch. Nothing could be more charming or less crudely obvious. Albin Polasek has some excellent bronze groups, full of humor and power, and made picturesque by a patina with purple and green incrustations somewhat too violently "antique" to display the sculptor's genuine distinction.

A. Phimister Proctor's Indian heads, Mahonri Young's "Hopi Maiden," Paul Manship's "Indian Hunter and Deer," Belle Kinney's Iroquois Indian girl, H. K. Bush-Brown's "The White Woman of the Iroquois," and Cyrus E. Dallin's "On the War Path," indicate the wide variety of interpretation possible with a truly American subject. A familiar phase of city life is seen in the mounted policeman by A. C. Simons, there are fountains by Charles Cary Rumsey, Victor Salvatore, G. V. Whitney, Brenda Putnam, Paul Conkling, Sherry E. Frey, Carl A. Heber, and Charles Keck. Miss Eberle shows a "Bacchinall," in which arc movement and sensitive feeling, but which is not quite happy in the repetitive lines of the arms and legs. Anna Vaughan Hyatt in "The Hard Road" apparently has imported a big Normandy horse for a model, and Margaret Hoard's "Eve" is good in mass and lovely in surface quality, but not quite freed from the superfluous in the interior modeling.

A number of delightful small sculptures include a "Boy and Bird" by Bessie Paeff, and there is a considerable group of sketches for sculpture to be placed in the Panama-Pacific Exhibition which promises to contain the best showing ever made of American sculpture. Among these are Robert Aitken's "The Elements," and a panel for the fountain of "The Earth" in the Court of the Universe, a detail of the Fountain of the Arabian Nights by Edith Woodman Burroughs, figures by Evelyn B. Longman for the base of the Fountain of Cares, and Adolph A. Weinman's "Descending Night," a

ARTISTS APPEAR IN A PANTOMIME

FOR FRENCH WAR RELIEF

The soirée artistique, given by the Society of Beaux-Arts Architects, for the benefit of the French artists' war relief fund, attracted a large assembly last night at the Ritz-Carlton. There was also a matinée performance, and the entertainment is to be repeated this afternoon and tonight.

Last Spring the Society of Beaux-Arts Architects gave a Venetian pageant at their Ball of the Fine Arts which was one of the most artistic entertainments ever given in New York. The performance last night, especially of the pastoral pantomime in one act, entitled "The Judgment of Paris," achieved the same artistic result, although on a smaller scale. The entire programme was one of unusual high merit, and there is little doubt but that the ballroom will be thronged to capacity for the next two performances, and the relief fund for the destitute wives and children of the French artists considerably increased.

The programme brought together a number of well-known society amateurs and artists. It began with a playlet entitled "La Nuit d'Octobre," interpreted by two members of the French Drama Society, of which Lucien Bonheur is President; Miss Beatrice Patricia and Thomas A. Louis, who recently came over from Paris. After this came a series of living friezes of the Wedgwood period, then a group of eighteenth century bergerettes, sung by Miss Greta Torpadie and George Mitchell.

Realistic Effects.

By means of an extra stage, arranged in an artistic and unusual way, the series of episodes in the pantomime leading up to the famous judgment of Paris on Mount Ida, with its tragic result in the destiny of Troy, were not crowded, and the arrangement of real cedar and bay trees, representing a grove on the famous mount in Mysia, on each side of this stage, while the temple dedicated to the worship of Aphrodite opened off in the background, was excellent. The wrath of the gods, in the vivid play of lightning, and the burning of altar fires and incense, were all very realistic for a ballroom production.

Of course, there were goddesses and wood nymphs who showed their grace and charm while dancing in bare feet and diaphanous costumes, and Paris, the hero of the argument, clad in a Greek shepherd costume, revealed whipcord muscles in his arms and legs. The Grecian costume worn by the society matrons and maidens were much admired, and after the performance the prettiest dresses mingled with the audience, their dresses outrivaling the last word in Parisian modes by their simple beauty.

Realism was heightened at the very beginning of the pantomime when Paris, the shepherd, entered the grove leading two young goats, which composed his flock. The goats were on their good behavior, and browsed on a bunch of hay in one corner of the grove, until the other characters began to appear, then they were seemingly seized with a wild desire to nibble at the flowing robes of the actors. They also took a dislike to the kettle drum, for the augmented orchestra was on their side of the stage, and would start a hasty retreat at every crash of the drum, when a thunder machine behind the bay trees would send them up stage again.

Howard Greenley as Paris.

Howard Greenley, who arranged the pantomime, also took the leading rôle of Paris. Bearing the golden apple which Hermes, the messenger of the gods, had given to him, Paris awaits the coming of the three goddesses, Athene, (Miss Elizabeth Reynolds,) Hera, (Miss Ivy Melzer,) and Aphrodite, (Miss Inga Bontum.) Wood nymphs appear and dance in abandon around him. Then comes a disconsolate rustic searching for his sweetheart, who appears shortly and offers prayers and flowers to Aphrodite. A stricken chieftain and his two warriors now enter the grove, the former praying for the restoration of his strength.

Two priestesses, the Misses Gertrude Lord and Elizabeth Gardiner, then in votive dances herald the coming of the high priestess, Mrs. Langdon Geer. Bewildered by her beauty, Paris embraces the high priestess against her will, the high priest, interpreted by Theodore Steinway, coming to her aid, and later calling upon the wrath of the gods for the shepherd's act of profanation.

Then follows the well-known story of the decree of the three goddesses, who command Paris to decide who among them is the most beautiful. Paris, of course, gives the golden apple to Aphrodite, and thereupon Psyche (Miss Florence Bevery) and the three graces, the Misses Gretchen Thayer, Laura Brady, and Beatrix Buel, appear in a rollicking dance to celebrate the victory of Paris.

Others in the cast were the Misses Lorraine Manville, Florence Beyer, and Beatrice Wood and Langdon Geer, Benjamin W. Morris, John Cross, and F. A. Godley.

Kenneth M. Murchison was the musical director and the electrical effects were done by Bassett Jones. Louis R. Metcalfe was in charge of the costumes and stage decorations. The scenery was made by J. Monroe Hewlett and the properties by James W. O'Connor. Arthur Ware was the assistant stage manager.

Lloyd Warren is Chairman of the General Committee. The artistic cover design, in color, of the programme was made by Albert Herter. Henry F. Hornbostel is President of the Society of Beaux-Arts Architects.

Dinner Hostesses.

Many dinners were given last night at the hotel preceding the entertainment, the hostesses including Mrs. C. Oliver Iselin, Mrs. Archer Huntington, Mrs. William Greenough, Mrs. Archibald M. Brown, Mrs. Frederick H. Allen, Mrs. G. Louis Boissevain, Mrs. William A. Delano, who are among the patronesses, and Mrs. C. K. G. Billings, Mrs. Bertram G. Work, and Mrs. Lloyd Bryce.

Among the other patronesses are Mrs. Vincent Astor, Mrs. Francis M. Bacon, Mrs. J. Stewart Barney, Mrs. R. Livingston Beeckman, Mrs. Gordon Bell, Mrs. Arthur Scott Burden, Mrs. Albert Gallatin, Mrs. Thomas Hastings, Mrs. Otto Kahn, Mrs. W. F. D. Lanier, Mrs. Willard D. Straight, Mrs. Frederick W. Vanderbilt, Mrs. Whitney Warren, Mrs. J. Norman de R. Whitehouse, and Mrs. Arthur Iselin.

OFF FOR EUROPE TODAY.

Transatlantic liners sailing today and some of those booked to leave on them are:

POTSDAM, (Rotterdam.)—Miss Helen Bell, Mrs. E. von Cohausen, C. W. Holtz, J. Grant Squires, T. G. Thomson, Miss Emilie Collin, Miss Amélie Lisson.

Some of the passengers who arrived yesterday, on the Rochambeau from Havre were:

Miss T. Abend, Mrs. Belle Ward, Miles W. Breese, O. Blanchard, Mrs. C. C. Bailey, Mrs. C. Caton, L. J. Cramer, Miss L. J. Cramer, E. Ditch, Miss C. Feek, Mrs. H. K. Fly, J. E. Jenner, Miss M. Martin, Mr. and Mrs. Jean Rozbis, Mr. and Mrs. M. Cecil Sumpter, J. W. Seymour, Mrs. F. Setterfield, J. Lauren, Miss M. Wilkin.

MRS. C. G. WYETH A BRIDE.

Married to Stephen G. Williams in St. James's Episcopal Church.

The wedding of Stephen Guion Williams, a son of the late John S. and Mary Maclay Williams, and Mrs. Charlotte Grosvenor Wyeth, a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Goodridge, was solemnized yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock in St James's Episcopal Church, Seventy-first Street and Madison Avenue. The ceremony was performed by Bishop Frederick Courtney, rector of the church.

Large vases filled with russet red and yellow chrysanthemums decorated the altar. The guests were seated by Dr. Charles Collins and Blair Williams, a brother of the bridegroom. Mrs. Wyeth was unattended. Her brother, Dr. Grosvenor Goodridge, gave her in marriage, and Dr. Linsly Williams was his brother's best man.

The bride was gowned in midnight blue satin and chiffon, topped by a black picture hat, trimmed with paradise feathers.

There was no wedding procession, as the bride and bridegroom entered from the vestry room to the chancel, and after the ceremony made their exist through the vestry.

After the ceremony the relatives and a few intimate friends of the bride and bridegroom went to the bride's home, 9 East Seventy-fifth Street, to offer their congratulations.

Mr. and Mrs. Williams will live at the bride's present residence after a bridal trip of several weeks.

Among the guests at the wedding were the bride's four daughters, the Misses Charlotte Grosvenor Wyeth, Frances H., Caroline L., and Elizabeth J. Wyeth; Mrs. Blair S. Williams, and Mrs. Linsly Williams.

The couple's engagement was announced last month. Mr. Williams is the President of the St. Anthony Club, one of the Board of Managers of the Presbyterian Hospital, and a member of the University and Union, as well as other clubs, and also of the Bar Association.

ANNA P. WATT'S WEDDING.

Miss Anna Pinkney Watt, a grandniece of the late Miss Mary Goodwin Pinkney, who was reputed to be America's wealthiest spinster when she died on Dec 8, 1908, will be married to Beverely Keator of this city on Nov. 18 in St. Thomas's Church.

The reception is to be held in the old Watt mansion, the former home of the late Miss Pinkney, the grounds around which take in the entire block between 139th and 140th Streets and Lenox and Seventh Avenues. The house will be thrown open for a social function for the first time in many years. It dates back to Colonial days, and is filled with antique furnishings spindle-legged mahogany, and books many of which were collected in England 200 years ago.

The old-fashioned lamps and candles will be used to illuminate the festivities, and the color scheme, pink and white, will carry out the turf colors of the bride's father, the late Thomas Lister Watt, banker and turfman.

Mr. Keator is a grandson of the late Mrs. Theodore Moss, who reared him after the death of his mother. Miss Pinkney left a fortune of over $7,000,000, and in her will she bequeathed more than $2,000,000 worth of property to Mr. Watt, the bride's father. She died at the Hotel Buckingham at the age of 98.

Miss Grace Watt is to be her sister's maid of honor, and the Misses Eva Brown, Marie Louise Steinway, Dorothy Kenyon, and Gertrude Watson, are to be the bridesmaids.

Randall Keator is to be his brother's best man, and James Morris Watt, Morris Kinney, and Emanuel Lopez, Jr., are to be the ushers.

ON WAY TO WED IN BOMBAY.

Miss Daintry Yates, Writer, to Marry Major W. H. Dickinson.

The engagement and approaching marriage of Miss Daintry Yates of 133 West Fifty-sixth Street to Major W. H. Dickinson, I. M. S., is announced. Miss Yates sailed on Oct. 21 for England, and from there on Nov. 7 on the Persia, en route for Bombay, where her marriage to Major Dickinson will take place on Nov. 28, if she reaches there in time. As the Persia's course lies through the Suez Canal, there is no direct sailing, and gifts of Livingston Platt, whose work was seen here last Spring in the sets he designed for Miss Anglin's three Shakespearian productions.

There is less of the pioneer but very much of the artist in the work of Joseph Urban, who has been preparing "The Garden of Paradise" for the Lieblers and who is best represented at the exhibition by some of his designs for "The Tales of Hoffmann," "Louise," and other operas as given in Boston. Attention may also be called to some most attractive silhouettes employed by the Little Theatre in Chicago.

Miss Yates, who has lived in New York for the last eight years, is an English girl, and is a short-story writer. She is the daughter of the late Dr. Yates of Kingston, Canada, and met her fiancé more than a year ago at Cairo, Egypt, when she was traveling and he was on leave of absence. They became engaged at that time, and he, on another leave of absence, was on his way to New York to marry Miss Yates here when war was declared and he was recalled.

Davids-Tallman Wedding Plans.

The wedding of Miss Hazel Tallman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank B. Tallman, and Walter Irving Davids, son of Cortlandt I. Davids, and a great-grandson of Thaddeus Davids, will take place on Thanksgiving evening, Nov. 25, at the home of the bride's parents, 199 Edgecombe Ave.

Miss Hazel Tallman is to be her sister's maid of honor. Little Miss Marian Giles will act as flower girl, and the Misses Maybel Reid and Ruth Cleland are to be the bridesmaids.

Frank B. Tallman, Jr., will act as best man, and William Archibald and Chester C. Beekman are to be the ushers.

The ceremony will be performed by the Rev. Dr. Paul S. Lembach, pastor of the Hamilton Grange Reformed Church.

MAGUIRE—HAUGHWOUT.

Andrew J. Maguire of 708 West End Avenue announces the engagement of his daughter, Miss Alice Eleanore Maguire, to George W. Haughwout, the son of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Haughwout of West Brighton, S. I. No day has been mentioned for the wedding.

BROWN—FOSTER.

Mrs. Emma Dyer Brown of Brooklyn has announced the engagement of her daughter, Miss Marion Brown, to Dr. Milton Hugh Foster, surgeon of the United States Public Health Service. No date has been set for the wedding.

Wedding Notes.

The wedding of Miss Constance C. Buel, the younger daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Clough Buel, and Vivian Burnett, the son of Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett, will take place on Saturday, Nov. 21, at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Buel, 130 East Sixty-seventh Street. Only the immediate families will be present. Mrs. Burnett will take his bride to live at 148 East Forty-ninth Street.

The wedding of Miss Sybil E. Young, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward E. Young, to Lyman N. Hine, a son of Mr. and Mrs. Francis L. Hine, will take place at 4 o'clock this afternoon in St. Thomas's Church and will be followed by a reception at the St. Regis.

The marriage of Miss Gladys Laurie Cable, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Cable, and Lawrence Jenckes Harding, son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Brauch Harding of Chestnut Hill, Mass., will take place on tomorrow evening at 8:30 at the Cable residence, 30 West Eighty-ninth Street. The Rev. Arthur H. Judge will officiate, and none except relatives will be present.

GENEE AT THE PALACE.

In between the contribution of a girl who has two voices and the monologue of an entertainer who has even more than that many jokes, you will find in the programme at the Palace Theatre this week the dainty and delightfully spirited dancing of Adeline Genée. In all her measures, there is the grace, the youth, and the abundant vitality. She is joy on tip-toe. And from time to time, when she wishes it so, there is a certain piquant charm, as if it might be said of her that she dances whimsically.

Two other dancers appear in the intervals between her own numbers, which are three: The last is the gay, little hunting galop. Genée says that these are really and truly her farewell appearances. It seems too bad.

Swift & Company's sales of Beef in New York City for the week ending Saturday, Nov. 7th, averaged as follows: Domestic Beef, 11.65 cents; Imported Beef, 10.36 cents per pound.—Advt.

ART OF THEATRE SHOWN IN MODELS

Stage Society Exhibits Settings and Costumes for War Relief.

CONCRETE DOME EFFECT

To increase the working funds of the Committee of Mercy and to improve the mind of the theatregoer in these parts, an exhibition of certain aspects of the Art of the Theatre was opened yesterday, under the auspices of the Stage Society of New York, in an exhibition room on the ground floor at 714 Fifth Avenue. This showing of drawings and models is calculated to reflect that lately accelerated movement to draw into the service of the theatre the highest ability and discrimination in decorative art.

It is all part of that freshly kindled enthusiasm in the great Continental capitals which has shown itself but slightly and sporadically in this city. The work of the directors in Germany and Russia, the schemes of Prof. Reinhardt, the Appia designs, and the visions of Gordon Craig are here present only as an influence, for the Stage Society's exhibition, in so far as the walls and booths showed yesterday, is confined to work done in this country. A visit to the drawings and models suggests forcefully with what simple elements in the theatre the appeal to the imagination may be made through the eye. Such a visit is chiefly rewarded by the demonstraton of the concrete dome, the delightfully suggestive models of Sam Hume of Cambridge and Livingston Platt of Boston, and some of the work done by Joseph Urban for the Boston Opera Company.

Those who can spare time for only one visit are advised to go in the neighborhood of 4 o'clock in the afternoon some time during the next fortnight, for it is then that the dome is lighted. This dome, which, in various forms, is in use in several European theatres, is a development, expansion, and extension of an old idea. It is a furthering of the principle of the cyclorama, itself, in turn, a development of the old-style back drop. As used in the tiny model theatre at the exhibition, the dome is a quarter sphere of concrete, representing the sky and serving as a reflector of a light which, as shed on the stage, is that diffused, pervading, and atmospheric light so much coveted and so difficult to achieve.

The light as usually employed with this dome abroad, is a white light, reflected from silk ribbons of various hues. In the model at the exhibition it is filtered light, the rays from the lamp passing through colored plates. The colors and dyes used have been prepared by Monroe Rhodes Fevear, a Boston chemist, whose work for colored bulbs is first to be seen at the Toy Theatre in Boston. As the different shades were played on the dome yesterday, a strikingly beautiful suggestion of a scene bathed in light was conveyed. There is the sense of distance and of a horizon infinitely remote and serene. The most ardent realist could hardly quarrel with an exterior that so invitingly effects the suggestion of all outdoors.

The imaginative use of simple lines and mass is nicely illustrated by two of Mr. Hume's models for a poetic drama setting, which employ the same materials, with the slightest of alterations for an exterior and an interior. Another study of Mr. Hume's suggests interestingly the possibilities of a kindred treatment for the uses of a modern polite comedy. A few models of great beauty, the direct and ingenious gifts of Livingston Platt, whose work was seen here last Spring in the sets he designed for Miss Anglin's three Shakespearian productions.

There is less of the pioneer but very much of the artist in the work of Joseph Urban, who has been preparing "The Garden of Paradise" for the Lieblers and who is best represented at the exhibition by some of his designs for "The Tales of Hoffmann," "Louise," and other operas as given in Boston. Attention may also be called to some most attractive silhouettes employed by the Little Theatre in Chicago.

MISS FITCH BECOMES NUN.

Miss Gladys M. Fitch, youngest daughter of the late John Lee Fitch, the artist, and Mrs. Mary Nicholson Fitch of this city, formerly of Yonkers, N. Y., has become a nun, and received the holy habit of the order at the St. Regis Convent, 140th Street and Riverside Drive, on Nov. 6.

The immediate family and a number of Miss Fitch's relatives and intimate friends attended the ceremony. A sermon was delivered by the Rev. John H. O'Rourke, S. J., followed by the blessing of the habit and mass.

Among the clergy present in the sanctuary were the Revs. Joseph Wald, Michael Kennys, John Donavon, and the chaplain of the convent.

Marie Morrisey's Recital.

A large audience and a friendly reception to the singer were agreeable concomitants of the song recital of Marie Morrissey, given last evening in Aeolian Hall. She sang a long and varied programme containing several novelties. A group of old songs, a group of German Lieder, several French songs, and a number of American composers made up her programme. Among the songs heard for the first time were Bruno Huhn's song cycle, "Love's Triumph," and "Only of Thee and Me," by Bauer. Mr. Huhn accompanied his composition.

MUSIC NOTES.

The performance of "The Tales of Hoffmann" at the Century Opera House last night had important differences in cast from the opening one. Florence Macbeth sang the part of Antonia as well as her original rôle of the doll. Graham Marr replaced Louis Kreidler in the three evil genius parts, and Gustaf Bergman was heard as Hoffmann.

John McCormack will give another recital in Carnegie Hall on Sunday afternoon, Nov. 22.

Isabel Hauser and the Sasavsky Quartet will give a concert in Aeolian Hall on Wednesday evening, Dec. 2.

The American Guild of Organists will give the first free recital in its eighth series tonight at the Church of the Divine Paternity, Central Park West and Seventy-sixth Street. J. Warren Andrews will give the programme.

Ferrucio Busoni, the pianist, has been delayed in his arrival here, but his manager says he will arrive in December and fill all the dates booked from that time on.

Maximilian Pilzer will give a violin recital in Aeolian Hall on Sunday evening, Dec. 6. Mr. Pilzer is now acting as concert master of the Philharmonic Orchestra.

MOTOR CAR TOURISTS DINE.

The Motor Car Touring Society gave its annual dinner last night at the Union Club. Albert Eugene Gallatin is President of the club, Percy R. Pyne, 2d, is Vice President, and Orme Wilson, Jr., Secretary.

The majority of the members were present. Some of them are Vincent Astor, William B. Osgood Field, R. Thornton Wilson, Oliver Iselin, Buell Hollister, William W. Hoffman, McKim Hollins, Robert Goelet, Francis L. V. Hoppin, Harold S. Vanderbilt, Malcolm D. Sloane, and Marshall R. Kernochan.

The annual dinner dance, which the society gives usually in January, is not to be given this season on account of the European war. Mr. Gallatin, the President, however, is to give a dinner to the club members on Dec. 17 at Sherry's.

LEON ROTHIER ARRIVES.

French Basso Dug Trenches Until He Contracted Rheumatism.

Leon Rothier, the French basso of the Metropolitan Opera Company, who served with the army digging trenches until he was sent to the hospital at Rennes, arrived yesterday on the French Line steamship Rochambeau. He helped to dig the trenches round Verdun, and like many other soldiers, contracted rheumatism through sleeping in the open in his wet clothes.

"When the army mobilized," said Mr. Rothier, "I joined the Forty-eighth Territorial Infantry at Chalons-sur-Marne and worked around Verdun until Oct. 1, but did not go to the front. By that time I was so crippled with rheumatism that I was sent to the hospital, where I remained until Oct. 21, and next day I was released from service. At that time there were 15,000 in 100 hospitals of Rennes. Fortunately I did not lose my voice during my illness and was able to sing sometimes to cheer up my wounded comrades in the hospital."

The singer, who is a native of Rheims, said that the ancient cathedral might be restored, he thought, from the photographs left by his father, who was an art photographer there and had made 3,000 views, including all parts of the sacred edifice.

THE WEEK IN THE THEATRES.

The following plays began fresh weeks of their runs in the theatres last night: "The Only Girl," at the Thirty-ninth Street Theatre; "Susi," at the Casino; "Mary Goes First," with Marie Tempest, at the Comedy Theatre; "Hit-the-Trail Holliday," with Elsie Ferguson, at the Lyceum Theatre; "Papa's Darling," at the New Amsterdam Theatre; "That Sort," with Nazimova, at the Harris Theatre; "The Battle Cry," at the Lyric Theatre; "The Highway of Life," at Wallack's Theatre; "The Experience," at the Booth Theatre; "The Lilac Domino," at the Forty-fourth Street Theatre; "A Perfect Lady," at the Hudson Theatre; "A Kick In," at the Longacre Theatre; "A Diplomat," at the Empire Theatre; "A Pair of Silk Stockings," at the Little Theatre; "Chin-Chin," at the Globe Theatre; "Life," at the Manhattan Opera House; "Watch Your Step," with Vernon Whiteside, at the Maxine Elliott Theatre; "The Phantom Rival," at the Belasco Theatre; "My Lady's Dress," at the Playhouse; "Dancing Around," at the Winter Garden; "The Havoc," with William Farnum, at the Shubert Theatre; "Daddy Long-Legs," at the Gaiety Theatre; "The Law of the Land," at the Forty-eighth Street Theatre; "On Trial," at the Candler; "It Pays to Advertise," at Daly's; "Over Night," at the Cort; "Innocent," at the Eltinge; "Twin Beds," at the Fulton; "Wars of the World," at the Hippodrome; "The Girl from Utah," at the Knickerbocker; Lew Fields in "The High Cost of Loving," at the Republic.

Mme. Petrova, who was seen at the Booth Theatre last season in "Panthea," brought that play to the New York Theatre last night for a week's stay at popular prices. The company supporting the star is practically the same as was in her support at the Booth, and the play is staged in the same careful manner.

Mrs. Patrick Campbell moved down from the Park Theatre last night to the Liberty, where she will continue her run in "Pygmalion."

"The Things that Count" is at the Bronx Opera House for a stay of one week.

J. Leubrie Hill and his company of colored players began a week's stay at the Grand last night in "My Friend from Kentucky," a musical comedy.

At the Standard Theatre, Guy Bates Post is seen in "Omar, the Tentmaker."

"Girls of the Great White Way," a two-act burlesque, is the Columbia this week. "Beauty, Youth and Folly" is the title of the burlesque at the Murray Hill.

At the Eden Musee new figures in wax, new illusions by Dunninger, and new motion pictures by Colors make up the programme for the week.

The Palace Theatre bill this week is headed by Genee, the Danish dancer, and her company. Others on the bill are Joan Sawyer and her partners in ballroom dances; Dorothy Toye, girl with two voices; Whiting and Burt, in songs; Hugh Herbert and company in "The Sons of Abraham"; Bert Fitzgibbon, with a new lot of "daffy dills"; Joe Boganny's Lunatic Kazoo; the Darrell and Conway, in "Behind the Scenes," and Little Nap, a monkey comedian.

Paul Swan, the dancer, returned to Hammerstein's Victoria yesterday as the headliner on the bill, and others on the programme are the very entertaining midgets, James and Bonnie Thornton; Harry Cooper in a new act; McConnell, Simpson and company in "At Home"; the Farber Sisters in songs; Jack Lorimer; Bissett and Scott; Mlle. D'Albert; Edward Geer; Roy La Pearl, and Pathe and Keystone pictures.

At the Broadway Theatre this week are Daisy Harcourt, the English comedienne; the musical comedy, The Little Lambs; Edith Mortimer, in songs; the songs of the nations; Victor's Musical Melange, with eighteen people; Louise Carver and Tom Murray; the Four Xela Sisters in a singing and dancing act; Luciano Lucca, the singer; the Dutch Reder Troupe of acrobats, and Hallan and Hunter.

Blanche Ring is seen this week at Keith's Alhambra Theatre in a farce comedy leading up to many songs called "Oh, Papa," arranged by vaudeville by Channing Pollock and Rennold Wolf, from the play by Leo Ditrichstein. Others on the bill are Bobby North, Flo Irwin in Edgar Allan Woolf's comedy, "The Lady of the Press;" Lucy Gillette, known only in "The Daily Press," because of her unique setting of a Dutch household, which is entirely in delf; Hope Vernon, in a combination of vocal and instrumental talent; Brooks and Bowen, colored comedians, telling funny stories and singing a number of their own compositions; "America's fastest trapeze artists," The Aerial Buds; Dooley and Rugel, in a blend of song and comedy, and the Cansinos, two Spanish dancers in a dancing exhibition.

Houdini is the featured act at the Royal Theatre this week. Another feature on the programme is Harry Fox and Jenny Dolly. Others here this week include Sophye Barnard in a repertoire of new songs. Jane Connelly and players offering "A Strong Cup of Tea," a skit with clever lines and situations; Herbert De Speris and her company of fifteen models, in living reproductions of famous works of art; Lou Anger, "the neutral soldier;" Haviland and Thornton, in a sketch "At Trouville;" Manny and Roberts, "two messenger boys from Broadway," and Edgar Berger, flexible equilibrist.

Fourteen acts comprise the show at Keith's Colonial Theatre this week in celebration of a Fall festival, and comedy, music and dance are the principal elements of the various features. Adelaide and Hughes are featuring their latest dance creation entitled "The Cat and the Canary." Others are Belle Blanche, "the prima donna impersonator"; Marshall Montgomery, Joe Jackson, known as "The European Vagabond"; Alf Lipinski's Forty Doc Comedians, the Courtney Sisters in songs; "The Last Tango," a musical drama, with Fletcher Norton and Carrie Reynolds; Gertrude Vanderbilt, with James Clemons; the Berrens, Rice, Sully and Scott, and the Alpine Troupe.

The Broadway Rose Gardens is showing a new picture in "The Wishing Ring." It is the best film drama which has come to that theatre.

Charles Richman in "The Man from Home," Booth Tarkington and Harry Leon Wilson's comedy, is being shown on the screen at the Strand Theatre this week. Mr. Richman portrays the role of Daniel Voorhees Pike, the Hoosier lawyer, and is assisted by Theodore Roberts, Fred Montagu, Monroe Salisbury, and Dorothy Quincy.

A picturization of the Rev. Cyrus Townsend Brady's dramatic story of the far-reaching influence of a child, "The Little Angel of Canyon Creek," adapted for the screen from the novel of the same name by Col. Jasper Ewing Brady, and the interesting drama of life, "Two Women," written by James Oliver Curwood, are the feature pictures of the current programme at the Vitagraph Theatre.

JULIUS HARBURGER DIES SUDDENLY

POLITICAL SPEAKER AT 18

Julius Harburger, former Sheriff, Assemblyman, Congressman, and Excise Commissioner, died suddenly last night at his home at 46 St. Mark's Place. Mr. Harburger had been in poor health for several months, but his condition was not considered critical, and he had been going about very much as usual. Last night he had gone out to see some friends, and when he returned home at 10:30 seemed to be suffering considerably. Dr. J. Oshlag was summoned, but Mr. Harburger died before his arrival. His three sons, Benjamin F., Joseph L., and Leopold W. were with him at the end. The cause of death was congestion of the lungs.

Mr. Harburger was born in this city and was in his sixty-fourth year. When 18 years old he joined the Young Men's Citizens' Association of the Seventeenth Ward, which was very active in the politics of the city in 1872. The association came out strongly for Horace Greeley as President of the United States, and at a mass meeting at Cooper Union the ex-Sheriff made his first speech.

In 1876, when the Seventeenth Ward Republican Association was organized, Mr. Harburger was elected President, and he directed the association in its work for Hayes, who was then running for President. He organized a Garfield and Arthur campaign club when Garfield ran for President, and in the course of the campaign addressed many large audiences. On one occasion, at Christie and Grand Streets, he was struck on the head by a rock thrown by a rowdy, but nevertheless finished his speech.

Mr. Harburger was elected as representative of the Tenth Assembly District in the Legislature for the first time in 1899. Previous to that, in 1895, Mayor Strong appointed him Excise Commissioner, and said at that time that he was a model official, on account of his faithfulness, energy, and ready grasp of the affairs of the department. While Excise Commissioner Mr. Harburger was strong against the Raines law.

Mr. Harburger was elected Sheriff of New York County in 1911, and announced on Jan. 2, immediately after taking office, that he would appoint a number of women deputies, the chief of whom would be Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont.

It was found, however, that the law would not allow women to become Deputy Sheriffs. During his term of office he was active in all that concerned the welfare of New York City. As Sheriff it was his custom to attend boxing bouts, and often saw to it himself that when they were not conducted according to his ideas of sport and fair play. On Oct. 21, 1912, he climbed on to the prize ring stage in Madison Square Garden and stopped the fight when Gunboat Smith knocked out Stuart Down.

During the same year he took an active issue with the Industrial Workers of the World, particularly over the question of proper respect to the Stars and Stripes. While Sheriff he appointed an unusual number of deputies, including men from all ranks of life, from pugilists to the most prominent men in the city.

His term as Sheriff ended Dec. 31, 1913, and shortly before he left office a dinner was given him at Little Hungary by more than 400 of his admirers. He addressed the diners on this occasion in his usual oratorical style, and explained that this was his valedictory.

He closed his speech by saying:

"The bomb throwers, Nihilists, anarchists, red flag followers, Black Handers, horse poisoners, sabotagists, anti-American agitators, New York, I know that this is an American form of Government, and that the Stars and Stripes is the only flag recognized, and that any treasonable utterances, unfurling of red flags, defiance of law and order, would be immediately suppressed by me."

Mr. Harburger was a member of the Democratic Club, a member of Zion Lodge, No. 38, I. O. F. S. of I.; Edward Everett Lodge, I. O. O. F.; Mount Moriah Lodge, No. 27, F. and A. M.; Edward Everett Lodge, I. O. O. B.; Adelphi Chapter, O. E. S., and of many charitable, humane, and educational institutions. He is survived by his widow and three sons.

ARMY RIVALS THE CHURCH.

Woodruff Says Fewer Officers Than Clergymen Are Criminals Now.

There is a lower percentage of criminally inclined men among army officers today than among even clergymen, Lieut. Col. Charles E. Woodruff asserted, in the course of a eulogy of the army before the Society of Medical Jurisprudence in the Academy of Medicine last night. The Colonel spoke on the subject of modern identification by the Bertillon and finger-printing methods, which, he said, with other contributory causes, had improved the personnel of the army, by keeping out undesirables.

Since 1906, when the finger-print system was adopted for army use, the percentage of deserters recaptured had been doubled, he said. In 1907, 4,500 men deserted and only 1,400 were caught, while in 1913 3,400 quit the ranks and 2,200 were captured. Better food and better quarters had had a good deal to do with reducing desertions in the army, said the Colonel, together with the reduction of the enlistment term from five to three years.

Inspector Joseph A. Faurot, in charge of the Detective Bureau at Police Headquarters, told of difficult cases the Bertillon and finger-print system had solved, and answered many questions.

WE MAY HOLD ART GEMS.

Priceless Objects Likely to be Sent Here for Safekeeping.

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 9.—Some of the noted art treasures of Europe may be brought to Pittsburgh for safekeeping until the close of the war. Dr. W. J. Holland, curator of the Carnegie Museum, said today that within the last two months he had been requested by several collectors, whose priceless objects include some of the most important works of master painters and sculptors in the world, to become the custodian until the war is over.

The curator replied to one request that if the works can be brought here they will be guarded until they can be returned. The collection, it was said, is in one of the European capitals.

A growing harshness of the skin on your hands or face is a warning sign from Nature. Heed it before unsightly redness, roughness and wrinkles set in to destroy the beauty of skin that is your birthright.

Use VELOGEN—that is the shortest way to give you the message of help. VELOGEN applied night and morning is quickly absorbed by the pores of the skin, and its softening, healing action restores the complexion to its wonted smoothness, and the hands to their former beauty.

NEEDS OF ACTORS' FUND.

Unless at least $250,000 is raised within the next two months, the Actors' Fund of America, the organization which assists all members of the theatrical profession and provides a home on Staten Island for aged and infirm actors, will have to go out of business.

Daniel Frohman, President of the organization, said yesterday that the fund was in the greatest peril and that a meeting of the Finance Committee had been called for tomorrow to decide what steps could be taken to keep the fund together.

Marc Klaw is Chairman of the Finance Committee, and the other members, who will meet with Mr. Frohman to-morrow, are William Harris, Joseph Brooks, Henry W. Savage, Milton Aborn, Charles Burnham, Harrison Grey Fiske, Sam A. Scribner, and Winthrop Ames.

The Actors' Fund was started thirty-four years ago by Lester Wallack, A. M. Palmer, and all of the prominent managers of that time. Although founded for the benefit of the actors themselves, it has largely been kept alive by the efforts of certain managers and a few of the more prominent stars.

When the Actors' Home on Staten Island was suggested, Al Hayman gave $10,000 toward the project and Joseph Jefferson and a number of other prominent actors and managers contributed $1,000 apiece. At that time it was thought that the running expenses of the fund, including the home, which was purchased outright, would be $15,000 a year. Since then, however, the expenses have reached nearly $60,000 yearly. Every member of the theatrical profession is asked to contribute $2 a year to the fund, but many of the actors have fallen behind in these payments, it was said yesterday.

APOPLEXY KILLS CAMFIELD.

Wealthy Contractor Stricken at Broad St. and Exchange Place.

Daniel A. Camfield, a wealthy contractor and business man of Greeley, Col., died in this city yesterday as the result of a stroke of apoplexy. He fell unconscious on the pavement at Broad Street and Exchange Place early in the afternoon and was hurried to the Hudson Street Hospital. He died in the ambulance, and was not identified until about an hour later, when John Farson, Jr., of the banking and brokerage firm of John Farson Sons & Co., 115 Broadway, reached the hospital. One of Mr. Farson's cards had been found in the dead man's pocket.

Mr. Camfield was about 50 years old and for twenty years had been in the contracting business in the West, where he had handled a number of large irrigation contracts. He was the owner of a newspaper in Greeley, had large interests in the Greeley Trust Company and the Greeley Water Company and was an important landowner in Colorado. He came to New York on business last Saturday and was stopping at the Manhattan Hotel. Yesterday morning Mr. Camfield visited Mr. Farson in the latter's office and said that he had never felt better in his life. He left after accepting an invitation to dine at Mr. Farson's home last evening.

A brother of the dead man, who lives in Providence, R. I., was notified and came to New York last night to have the body sent West. Mr. Camfield is survived by his widow and one son.

Adam Seabury.

Adam Seabury, formerly a member of the stock brokerage firm of Charles Frazer & Co., at 93 Nassau Street, and one the largest real estate owners in Hempstead, L. FINANCIAL MARKETS

Active Trading in Bonds and Notes—The Philadelphia Bond Sale.

A good many transactions in bonds were put through yesterday and there was continued heavy buying of short term notes. In some instances these latter have receded from the best prices recently quoted, but this movement was by no means uniform. New York City short term notes sold yesterday at the highest prices so far established, the three-year notes selling on a basis lower than 4.75. The latest issue of New York City long term bonds held their recent improvement, selling on a basis a little under 4.50. The recent position of the municipal bond market generally added to the interest with which yesterday's sale of $825,000 4 per cent. bonds by the city of Philadelphia was watched. Advices received during the day indicated that this small issue, which was offered for public subscription at par in amounts of $100 and multiples thereof was being oversubscribed. Local influences, of course, play a considerable part in the results attending such sales, and the amount in this instance was too small to make the sale a fair measure of the bond market, but even after all such allowances the sale's success was an encouraging development.

The present accumulation of funds in the hands of financial institutions which ordinarily might encourage large investments in long-time bonds is not now exerting that influence to any considerable extent. The progress which the bond market has made in the absence of any such support is, therefore, more genuinely indicative of the out-and-out investment demand for bonds. It was thought in some quarters yesterday that when the formal establishment of the Federal Reserve Banks a week hence has definitely settled the question how far interior banks will use their New York balances in making the payments which they shall have to make to the Federal Reserve Banks certain of the member banks might increase their holdings of bonds, but this view does not prevail generally. There are, of course, other forms of investment which are more appropriate for the employment of bank funds. Moreover, the present inclination of banking institutions is to adhere to short term commitments. Gold to the amount of $10,756,000 was shipped to Canada yesterday in pursuance of the plans laid at the time of the organization of the New York City note syndicate.

There are indications that a few Stock Exchange houses are preparing to retire from business. Certain transactions to this end are being put through without awaiting the resumption of public trading. These proposed retirements are not solely the result of the present suspension of Stock Exchange operations, although that is an important contributing cause.

The Government's monthly crop report puts a higher estimate on the yield of corn. The crop is both larger and better than it was last year. The same is true of the potato yield, another important crop in domestic consumption. The farm price of corn on Nov. 1 was one cent a bushel under the high price of that date last year, but this is an exception to the general experience this year. Rye and oats and, of course, wheat are commanding much higher prices than they did twelve months ago. The advance in wheat in particular is very important from the producer's point of view for the reason that it is being realized on a far larger crop than any previously harvested.

FOREIGN BRANCH BANK OPEN

National City Today Begins Business in Buenos Aires.

The National City Bank's branch at Buenos Aires, the establishment of which was approved recently by the Federal Reserve Board, will open for business today. This announcement was made by the National City Bank yesterday.

Formal authority has been granted by the Government of Argentina to the National City Bank of New York for the establishment of a branch at Buenos Aires, and the first branch of an American bank in a foreign country will be formally opened for business on Tuesday, Nov. 10.

The bank is located at 321 Calle Rivadavia in the Bolsa Building. It will be under the management of John H. Allen, former manager of the Bank of Haiti, who, with a party of ten assistants, arrived in Buenos Aires on the 24 of the month.

Robert O. Bailey, formerly Assistant Secretary of the Treasury of the United States, and J. C. Martine have been in Buenos Aires since Aug. 1 attending to all of the preliminary details in connection with the establishment of the bank.

M. D. Carrell, formerly of the Philippine Tariff Commission, and engaged for a number of years in the work of developing commercial relations with Porto Rico, is in charge of the commercial investigations to be undertaken by the branch in behalf of the business interests of this country.

A. V. Edwards of the credit department of the National City Bank is expected to arrive in Buenos Aires within the next week to have charge of the formation of a credit bureau to be organized in connection with the branch for the purpose of furnishing credit information to exporters and importers.

Under the terms of the Federal Reserve act a specified amount of a bank's capital must be set aside for the use of each branch that may be established. The amount of capital allotted by the National City Bank to the use of the Buenos Aires branch is $1,000,000.

R. O. Bailey, the representative of the National City Bank in Buenos Aires, writes in the bank's periodical, The Americas, which is devoted to South American trade, that Argentine Government finances are in favorable shape. He states that probably in no other quarter of the globe is their less unity of undertakings among private banking institutions.

In considering general aspects of the railroad situation Mr. Kruttschnitt appealed to shareholders for their assistance in warding off attacks from the property.

"Unfair treatment of railroads is due in great part to the belief of politicians that only financial magnates suffer therefrom," said he. "The surest remedy for the evil is for railroad investors to give unmistakable evidence of their numbers and of their resentment of unfair legislation or regulation. You now number over 30,000, and with the stockholders of other railroads and with investors in their securities you form a body of a million or more voters, whose protests, backed up by ballots, can lawfully exert sufficient force to compel fair treatment by your servants in Congress, in Legislatures, and on commissions.

"The common interests of railroad shareholders and of investors in every community, no matter how small, should cause them to actively participate in every election and to perform faithfully all other duties of citzenship in order to secure proper representatives and protection for their interests. While your company has cheerfully made such expenditures as were required by Federal or State Commissions or by legislation, many unreasonable laws have been enacted which serve no public good and which add unnecessarily to the cost of operation. There is, moreover, a continuous agitation for the passage of more laws to further burden the railways regardless of necessity or reason.

"During the fiscal year ended June 30, 1914, the cost of complying with such legislation and with the unreasonable requirements of Federal and State Commissions has added $1,099,405 to the operating expenses of your company."

In regard to taxes the report stated that with an increase of 24.46 per cent. in mileage of all tracks operated, taxes had increased $4,809,871, or 204.44 per cent. The damage to property on the lines in Mexico continued because of political disturbances. The loss through traffic interruption from the beginning of the Madero revolution to June 30, 1914, was estimated in the report at 8,000,000 pesos, the equivalent of nearly $4,000,000 in currency of the United States.

The detailed reports of proprietary companies of the system showed that the Central Pacific had paid $22,500,000 in dividend to the parent organization during the year. Discussing the suit being prosecuted by the Government to separate the Central and Southern Pacific, Mr. Kruttschnitt said that the relations of the roads had been in accordance with the acts of Congress for forty years, and they would be defended vigorously against present Federal demands.

KRUTTSCHNITT HITS AT RAILROAD LAWS

DECREASE IN GROSS INCOME

Chairman Appeals to Shareholders Actively to Oppose Legislative Attacks on Their Property.

The Southern Pacific Company had a gross income in the year ended June 30 of $138,520,258 from both rail and outside operations, a decrease of $4,254,446 from the total for 1913. Owing largely to an increase of $1,456,339 in taxes, operating costs of $100,824,891 represented a gain of $2,258,196, and net revenue amounting to $51,709,067 was $4,759,485 less than for the preceding fiscal period. The company's surplus for dividends after meeting interest charges was $26,452,216, a decline of $6,415,591 and the equivalent of 7.50 per cent. on the stock outstanding, as compared with 9.85 per cent. the year before.

Chairman Julius Kruttschnitt said in the pamphlet report yesterday that abnormal weather conditions on both the Atlantic and Pacific ends of the system had been a leading cause of additional expense. The loss of income because of washouts and other forms of destruction was heavy, and more than $800,000 had to be expended in the repair of extraordinary breakage.

In considering general aspects of the railroad situation Mr. Kruttschnitt appealed to shareholders for their assistance in warding off attacks from the property.

"Unfair treatment of railroads is due in great part to the belief of politicians that only financial magnates suffer therefrom," said he. "The surest remedy for the evil is for railroad investors to give unmistakable evidence of their numbers and of their resentment of unfair legislation or regulation. You now number over 30,000, and with the stockholders of other railroads and with investors in their securities you form a body of a million or more voters, whose protests, backed up by ballots, can lawfully exert sufficient force to compel fair treatment by your servants in Congress, in Legislatures, and on commissions.

"The common interests of railroad shareholders and of investors in every community, no matter how small, should cause them to actively participate in every election and to perform faithfully all other duties of citzenship in order to secure proper representatives and protection for their interests. While your company has cheerfully made such expenditures as were required by Federal or State Commissions or by legislation, many unreasonable laws have been enacted which serve no public good and which add unnecessarily to the cost of operation. There is, moreover, a continuous agitation for the passage of more laws to further burden the railways regardless of necessity or reason.

"During the fiscal year ended June 30, 1914, the cost of complying with such legislation and with the unreasonable requirements of Federal and State Commissions has added $1,099,405 to the operating expenses of your company."

COTTON CLEARING HOUSE.

Association Members to Put Up $15,000 Each for Central Fund.

The Board of Managers of the Cotton Exchange approved yesterday tentative plans for the formation of a Clearing House, and final action on the matter will be taken tomorrow at a meeting of Exchange members. The proposal was that a Clearing House Association be established and incorporated with 200 shares of stock of $10 par value. Any member of the Exchange may join by buying one share and depositing with the association a certified check for $15,000, the purpose of this procedure being the accumulation of a central fund to secure the prompt payment of claims arising from the failure of a Clearing House member to make good his obligations if such a contingency should arise.

A fee of 10 cents is to be charged for each contract cleared. Each member will be called upon to maintain with the association a margin of $3 per bale upon cotton put through clearance channels for his account up to 50,000 bales, with higher margin if his net interest in a day's clearance operations exceeds 50,000 bales. Additional margins may be asked by the Directors of the association.

It is not planned to have the Clearing House in operation when the Exchange reopens, for many details need to be worked out. The date for renewing business is expected to be next Monday, although the Governors have refrained from offering any predictions bearing an official stamp.

FINANCIAL NOTES.

The Bondholders' Protective Committee, headed by Charles H. Sabin, announced yesterday that over 60 per cent. of the first lien twenty-year 5 per cent. bonds of the International Steam Pump Company had been deposited with the Guaranty Trust Company. After Dec. 15 bonds will be received on deposit only on such terms as shall be approved by the committee.

Nicholas Roberts, manager of the bond department of the Chicago office of S. W. Straus & Co., Inc., has been transferred to this city as Eastern manager, with offices at 1 Wall Street.

A digest of the war tax law has been prepared by the Broadway Trust Company for circulation among its customers.

The Detroit Edison Company is offering to stockholders at par $2,654,500 ten-year 6 per cent. convertible bonds in amounts equal to 20 per cent. of their holdings. The issue is to be underwritten by a syndicate headed by Spencer Trask & Co. and F. S. Smithers & Co.

The committee in charge of the annual banquet of the Investment Bankers' Association of America, to be held in Philadelphia, announced yesterday that Representative George S. Graham of Pennsylvania, A. B. Leach, the banker, and Thomas F. Woodlock of New York, and Scott Bullitt of Louisville, Ky., will be the principal speakers.

WAR HITS COTTON OIL CO.

The American Cotton Oil Company earned a net profit of $1,487,623 in the year ended Aug. 31, a decline of $283,496 from the preceding year's total. The report issued yesterday said that the war seriously affected the market for the company's products, chiefly by making it difficult to deliver goods sold abroad.

Interest and dividends on the preferred stock required $1,086,916, leaving a surplus of $400,707, an amount $283,496 smaller than the surplus for 1913. The total surplus on Aug. 31 was $10,581,496.

STEEL PLANTS NOT CLOSED.

Some Curtailment at Gary, but All Departments Are Open.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Nov. 9.—E. J. Buffington, President of the Illinois Steel Company, regarding a report from New York to the effect that the steel plants at Gary, Ind., will be shut down, said:

"Some curtailment in the working forces at Gary has been resorted to, and has resulted in closing some of the departments at the plants, but in no instance have the plants been closed entirely. The small amount of work on hand warranted our laying off some men, but the report that the services of 7,000 had been dispensed with and that the plants are to be shut down is exaggerated."

METAL EXCHANGE REOPENS.

The New York Metal Exchange, the first of the local Exchanges to reopen since the general cessation of operations, held its initial session yesterday. There were about a dozen brokers on the floor when the usual "call" was made at noon in tin, lead, and spelter. A few five-ton lots of tin were sold at prices quoted in private dealings toward the end of last week, but interest in business was apathetic.

Copper was not dealt in. It was said that the difficulties which have arisen over shipments of the metal to neutral countries had influenced prices adversely, and it was thought best to leave the market alone until the foreign situation grew clearer.

Receiver for Steamship Co.

Judge Learned Hand yesterday, in the Federal District Court, appointed Calvin Austin of Dunstable, Mass., ancillary receiver in this district of the Eastern Steamship Company, against which a creditor's suit was brought last week in Maine by the Berwind-White Coal Mining Company. Mr. Austin had already been appointed receiver in Maine and Massachusetts, and he was authorized by Judge Hand to continue the business out of the receipts of the operation of the steamship properties, and so on. Mr. Austin is President of the Corporation.

P. E. Hurley Gets Traction Job.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, N. J., Nov. 9.—Peter E. Hurley, who resigned in 1911 as general manager of the Old Trenton Street Railway Company, was today appointed to the same office in the Trenton and Mercer County Traction Corporation, succeeding William H. Hitchcock, resigned.

HOTEL BUSINESS HERE IS PICKING UP

MANY SIGNS OF PROSPERITY

Managers Report an Unusual Number of Women Who Have Come to New York to Shop.

Most of the lobbies of the hotels yesterday morning bustled as they had not bustled hitherto on any Monday this Fall. It is no secret that many hotels have been doing a worse business since Sept. 1 than at any similar period in their history, and the great rush of people to New York yesterday morning was taken in hotel circles to indicate that with the country's problems more or less settled by the general election of last Tuesday and the nearness of the establishment of the regional banks confidence was at last generally returning in the country outside of New York.

Many hotels reported that up to noon business was double what it was the Monday morning before, and a Monday morning's business is regarded by many hotel men as an indication as to what is coming during the week. Proprietors and managers of some of the big hotels had told a NEW YORK TIMES reporter last week that business was "dead." Rumors were going about of hotels reducing staffs. Hotel clerks who have talked with visitors from all over the country say they have been hearing the greater part of the Fall that there was plenty of money all through the West owing to bumper crops.

In the number that came to New York yesterday were lots of women from the West and the Middle West who have been in the habit of coming here at this season of the year to do their Fall and Christmas shopping, an many more are expected. Men who on their Spring trips to New York left their families at home and arrived with only suit cases or grips are now here with their families and their trunks, and the hotel clerks figure out that local hotels and merchants are going to get some of that money which is said to be bulging out the pockets of many people in the West.

So far as the restaurant trade is concerned, almost any hotel man who will speak frankly will tell you that he has never seen such a season for economical feeding in restaurants. People who have learned to make a dinner out of three dishes are now expected to order some of the things they used to consider essential to a regular meal.

According to John H. Kirby of Houston, Texas, who is one of the biggest lumber men in the Southwest, and who is up on cotton conditions in the South, the situation with respect to that commodity has considerably bettered. "Cotton is now moving," said Mr. Kirby yesterday at the Waldorf. "Some is going to Europe, and a lot is finding its way to American spindles. A certainty as to the limitation of next year's supply has had a reassuring effect. This is the season when the landlords and tenants make their contracts, and now they specify as to what is to be planted, and the feeling is general that the planting will be restricted, no matter whether the war ends soon or not. As for the matter of easier monetary conditions, many New York bankers have expressed me lately their belief that within sixty days there will be so much money about that goed commercial paper will be a drug on the market."

A. M. Palmer, the veteran hotel clerk, who has been in the business for more than fifty years and who for the old Fifth Avenue Hotel used to know almost everybody of consequence, predicts that in ten days business generally will have revived with a whoop. Mr. Palmer, who is chief clerk at the McAlpin, sums up the situation this way:

"It is not the great amount of money the regional banks will add to the circulation, but the feeling of confidence among the people that these banks will inspire.

"The fact that 21,000 of the 30,000 coke ovens in Pennsylvania that have been shut down are opening today I regard as the greatest indication of good times coming. Steel is the keynote of our industry. I understand the Bethlehem Steel Works has big orders ahead, and you are going to find that all the big plants will soon be running. I have seen a good many hard times in my life, and I have seen how rapidly good times came when there seemed no possibility of such a thing. Inside of ten days you will see the awakening."

Eighth Call Met and Syndicate Will Get $15,000,000 on Monday.

Members of the city loan syndicate paid in yesterday the amount of the eighth call. The payments in Clearing House checks were $1,359,961, that amount of exchange having been bought in advance by the syndicate managers, J. P. Morgan & Co. and Kuhn, Loeb & Co., below the gold export point. Gold and gold certificates to the amount of $1,472,433 were turned in and exchange to the amount of $3,933,333. This makes more than $51,000,000 that has been provided on account of the city's maturing debts abroad of $80,000,000. There is to be a call for the payment next Monday of about $15,000 000 more.

Gold to the amount of $10,276,000 was shipped out of the Sub-Treasury to Ottawa yesterday, mainly on account of the city loan syndicate.

COTTON GINNING NEARS RECORD MARK

2,207,114 BALES GINNED

Four States Exceed Production for Last Eight Years—Government Officials Encouraged.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—Notwithstanding the depression in the cotton market brought on by the European war, cotton ginning in the Southern States almost equaled the record made in 1911, when the cotton crop reached high water mark. According to a statement issued today by the Census Bureau, the ginning from Oct. 18 to Nov. 1 amounted to 2,207,114 bales, bringing the aggregate for the season up to 9,828,695 bales, or 855,177 bales more than for the same period of last year.

In four of the cotton States—Arkansas, Florida, Louisiana, and Oklahoma—the figures to Nov. 1 exceeded those for the last eight years. In view of the low price Government officials are greatly encouraged by the figures. The fact that the ginnings for this year fall only 142,210 bales below the 1911 record is accepted here as a most favorable sign that the Southern farmers are preparing to have their crop record when the demand for the raw material increases.

Included in the ginnings were 22,976 round bales, compared with 61,577 last year, 54,539 in 1912, and 68,318 in 1911.

Ginnings prior to Nov. 1 by States, with comparisons for the past three years and the percentage of the entire crop ginned in those States prior to that date in the same years, follow:

INVITE COTTON DISCUSSION.

Secretaries of Treasury and Agriculture to Give Hearing on Futures Act.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—The Secretary of the Treasury and the Secretary of Agriculture have issued a joint call for hearings to be given persons interested in the regulations to be promulgated to make effective the Cotton Futures act. The hearings will be held in a room in the National Museum Building in Washington on the morning of Nov. 12.

In the call for hearings the two Secretaries include tentative drafts of the regulations each will promulgate, so that these drafts may focus the discussion. Cotton growers and all interested manufacturers, bankers, brokers, and the like are invited to attend or to file briefs. The regulations, for the most part, set forth in concise form the requirements of the statute. Under a provision of the act the regulations, when officially promulgated, will have legal force.

Though the act imposed a tax of 2 cents a pound on undelivered future contracts, that was manifestly intended to be prohibitive, and which, experts say, will be prohibitive to the extent that the tax will never yield a cent of revenue, the regulations suggested today embody provisions as to the stamping of the taxable contracts and direct Collectors of Internal Revenue to requisition the necessary amount of stamps. The Treasury's share in the administration of the law is consigned to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue.

The tentative Treasury regulations declare that all regulations of Exchanges that conflict with the promulgated regulations are void, reminds dealers that contracts made in violation of the law and the regulations are not enforceable in court, and announces that duly appointed agents of the Secretary of the Treasury shall have access to all pertinent records of Exchanges, Boards of Trade, and other institutions buying and selling cotton.

A delegation of New York Cotton Exchange members, led by President E. K. Cone, will attend the cotton futures' hearings at Washington. The provisions of the law have already been recognized by a change in the by-laws of the Exchange, and such adjustment as may be necessary to meet the rulings of the Secretary of Agriculture are not expected to interfere with the general plan of operations made ready here.

It is hoped to put into effect some of the provisions of the law as soon as the Exchange reopens. The Government standards for grading cotton have been studied by the members of the board, and they stand ready to substitute them for the requirements previously in force.

LATEST CUSTOMS RULINGS.

It was decided yesterday by the Board of General Appraisers that blood-counting apparatus importer by the Bausch & Lomb Optical Company, Rochester, must stand duty at the rate of 60 per cent. ad valorem under the old tariff as "articles wholly or in chief value of glass." The apparatus was composed of both glass and rubber. Some of the pieces were plain glass, others graduated or etched, and others ground for the purpose of fitting covers or stop cocks or to take the roughness off the edges. The importers made claims for other rates, but Judge Sullivan overruled the protests, with the exception of those relating to stirrers made of solid plain glass, which are allowed to enter at 45 per cent.

J. Sachs was sustained in contentions relating to importations of cotton cloth. The Collector took an additional rate of 4 cents per square yard for mercerization and 2 cents per square yard for extra threads introduced to form a figure under the act of 1909. The claim was that the cloth was neither mercerized nor figured within the meaning of the tariff law. An official analysis disclosed that the goods were not mercerized, while an examination of the samples showed that the threads introduced to form figures are ordinary loom threads.

The board sustained J. N. Kennedy in claims for lower duty on woven fabrics of cotton and silk, cotton being the chief value. Duty was assessed under the old law at the rate of 8 cents per square yard and 30 per cent. ad valorem. The importer asserted that the fabrics have been mercerized and should be given entry at the rates specified for goods so treated. The board agreed.

Fuerst Brothers & Co. protested the Collector's assessment on merchandise described in the invoices as nickel sulphate. It was classified at 15 per cent. ad valorem under the act of 1913 as a chemical compound or salt. The claim was for duty at 10 per cent. as nickel oxide or alloy. Judge Brown, denying the claim, says that nickel sulphate is not an alloy of nickel, nor is it, strictly speaking, nickel or nickel oxide, but a chemical salt or compound of nickel.

The board reduced the Collector's assessments made on brooches of hard rubber and hat pins. They were returned at 60 per cent. ad valorem under the act of 1897 as jewelry. It is held that the brooches are entitled to enter at 35 per cent. as manufactures of hard rubber, and the hat pins at 45 per cent. as manufactures of metal. Cohn & Rosenberger and others were the importers of the goods.

Ray Consolidated Copper Co. Report.

The Ray Consolidated Copper Company reports net earnings of $463,550 for the September quarter, as compared with $987,881 in the same period last year. A surplus of $420,922 was left after interest charges were met, against $930,494. No dividends were paid. The company produced 12,474,153 pounds of copper in contrast with 18,748,343 pounds in the third quarter of 1913.

Will Feature Cotton Dresses.

One of the best known of the high-class dress houses in this city is planning to feature attractive cotton garments for Spring wear when the new season opens. These garments will be made of cloth woven in this country from cotton grown and spun here, the idea being to help the South in this way rather than by buying a bale. Some very attractive domestic cotton fabrics are being shown here for Spring use, the designs and the weaving being fully up to that of imported goods and the price at least 33 1-3 per cent. lower.

Will See Business Men.

A. I. Harrington, who has recently been appointed Commercial Attaché of the Department of Commerce, to be stationed at Lima, Peru, will arrive here tomorrow for a week's stay prior to sailing for his new post Nov. 18. Mr. Harrington has just completed a brief tour of commercial centres of this country in preparation for his work in Lima. Business men desiring to meet the Attaché may arrange for appointments through the local office of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, Room 409, Custom House, where he will make his headquarters during his stay here.

Appraiser Brown to Travel.

Judge Brown of the Board of General Appraisers starts today for the West and Pacific Coast, where he will hear arguments in importers' cases affecting classification and reappraisement. Charles D. Lawrence of the Assistant Attorney General's office will accompany him to defend the Government's interests. A large number of protests of both kinds have accumulated, and Judge Brown's trip is made to obviate the necessity of merchants coming to this city to try the issues. The cities to be visited include Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis, Seattle, Portland, San Francisco, and Los Angeles.

Activity in Paris.

A letter received here from the Paris correspondent of an importing house states that there is very active demand in that market for all sorts of merchandise, especially for flowers and feathers for millinery purposes and leather gloves. American buyers are searching the Parisian houses for goods and ideas, and are paying cash for what is available. Prices are increasing in all lines but, the advances are very irregular, varying from day to day. Some of the foreign commissioners are hampered by the fact that while they have orders to execute they have not the cash to pay for the merchandise.

Sub-Manufacturers Are Needed.

While the union in the cloak and suit trade is urging doing away with the sub-manufacturers, well posted manufacturers in the industry believe that while the operations for a season are crowded into the brief space of time given them now, the sub-manufacturing branch will continue to flourish. It is said that in former years the trade began to show sample lines for the Fall season as early as Feb. 1, and the business that followed during the Spring months consisted of genuine sales and not merely goods sold on memorandum. As conditions are now, the real styles for the Fall season do not begin to appear before the middle of August and well selling numbers must be made up in a hurry, necessitating the services of the sub-manufacturer.

Not Policy to Push New Styles.

Many coat and suit manufacturers think that because it is not good policy just now to push the newest styles business is hampered. There have been some very rapid changes in styles during the last few months and the buyers, with the advent of each change, have bought some goods with the result that they are loaded up with merchandise that would soon have to be sacrificed if additional designs were extensively shown. The best plan, manufacturers think, is to hold on to what they have and proceed cautiously during the remainder of the season. Just at present, the buyers who bought long coats on the recommendation of the manufacturers they deal with would not hesitate to return the merchandise if it became evident that their customers wanted short coats trimmed at the bottom with fur.

Printcloths Quieter.

There was not a great deal of activity in the local printcloth market yesterday. The day's inquiries were good enough, but the stiffness of prices was a thing not relished by the buyers. Consequently, the actual amount of goods sold was not great. There were several good bids of 5 cents for nearby and future shipment of 39-inch 72-76s, but most of the mills were firm in their demands for 5¼ cents. While 68-72s in the same width could be had for near-by delivery at 4¼ cents, they could not be touched for contract delivery under 4⅝ cents. There were a few small sales of 38½-inch 64-56s for 1914 delivery at 3 11-16 cents, while 64-60s in that width moved up to 3 13-16 cents. A fair call for sheetings was reported, but drills and fine-yarn goods were quiet. Closing printcloth prices were:

NEW RESERVE LAWS WILL FREE MILLIONS

Clearing House to Act Friday, in Conformity with State and Federal Statutes.

TO RELEASE $166,515,918

Redemption of Certificates and Emergency Currency Will Absorb Part of That Sum.

The Clearing House Association will meet at 1 o'clock tomorrow to take up the question of the reduction of its reserve requirements in conformity with those of the Federal Reserve act and the new State banking law. The matter has been under consideration for several weeks by a special committee and by the Clearing House Committee.

The Clearing House rules require national banks to maintain reserves of 25 per cent., in accordance with the national banking law. The Federal Reserve act reduces this requirement to 18 per cent. The new State banking law was enacted after the Federal Reserve act, but went into effect several months before it. It followed the Federal law by fixing the requirement for State banks at 18 per cent., but the Clearing House made no change, postponing action until the Federal Reserve act should take effect in this respect. This will be next Monday, when the act should take effect in this respect.

The Clearing House also requires that the trust companies which are members shall maintain reserves of 15 per cent. in cash and 10 per cent. additional on deposit with banks that keep 25 per cent. reserves. This requirement was always in excess of the legal requirement, and a number of the larger trust companies never have joined the Clearing House.

There has been no doubt that the Clearing House would reduce the requirements of State and national banks to the legal requirements of 18 per cent., but its decision as to the trust companies has been doubtful. The new State law requires the trust companies to maintain reserves of only 10 per cent. in cash and 5 per cent. in reserve depositaries. The trust companies have been insistent on a reduction to the legal requirement, and the committee now has decided to make recommendation accordingly.

Action to be Taken Friday.

The association will not act on the matter tomorrow, as its by-laws require that notice of an amendment to the constitution be given at one meeting and voted on at a subsequent meeting. This second meeting will be held on Friday.

The expected reductions will mean the release of about $78,000,000 of the reserve funds of State institutions, in addition to the $88,515,918 from the national banks, according to estimates made by Controller of the Currency Williams, on the basis of their condition at the call of Sept. 12, taking into consideration the disappearance of the deficit in reserves since that time.

The $78,000,000 of the State institutions is calculated somewhat roughly on their condition at the end of last week as reported to the State Banking Department. At that date the trust companies had net deposits of $538,332,600. The legal cash reserve now to be adopted was $53,833,260. The cash actually held was $67,673,100, an excess of $13,839,840. In reserve depositaries they had $63,837,000, as against a requirement, either on deposit or in cash, of $26,916,630, so that from this source $36,921,370 will be released, making a total for the trust companies of $50,761,210.

The State banks happened to have less in reserve depositaries than the 6 per cent. permitted to be so held, their cash holdings running correspondingly higher than the 12 per cent. required to be held in their vaults. Their net deposits were $274,478,400, on which the legal requirement, in cash and on deposit, was $54,640,450. They actually had $76,343,500 in cash and $5,537,050 in depositaries, so that the adoption of the legal requirements by the Clearing House will release the difference, or $27,340,100. Adding this amount to the $50,761,210 of the trust companies gives a total release of $78,001,310.

In these calculations, based on aggregate figures, the fact that in the other boroughs the legal requirements are less than in Manhattan is necessarily been ignored, so that the total released will be still more than shown.

Amounts Released Potentially.

These amounts are released only potentially, as any or all of the institutions may see fit to hold reserves larger than are required by the law and the Clearing House rules. Larger cash holdings may be necessary for carrying on the business of the institutions to the satisfaction of the Directors. This applies also to the national banks.

There is another reason why the amounts thus released will not be wholly available for loaning purposes, with a possibility of promoting speculation, and that is that the banks have Clearing House loan certificates to pay, and are desirous of retiring the emergency currency still outstanding. On the loan certificates they are paying 6 per cent. interest, and on the currency 4½ per cent.

The payment of the loan certificates has been going on moderately for some time, but the Clearing House makes public no figures of either the amount issued or the amount retired, so that no definite figures are available. The process will be greatly expedited, however, when the new reserve requirements become effective next week.

The retirement of emergency currency has been progressing rapidly in the last week. Yesterday $3,654,000 was retired, making the total to date $38,121,370 out of about $138,000,000 issued to New York banks.

The officers of the Federal Reserve Bank moved yesterday morning to their new quarters at 62 Cedar Street, in preparation for handling the $100,000,000 that is to be paid in next Monday on account of the reserves of the 480 member banks. Payments of the first call on account of capital stock subscriptions were completed yesterday when $1,300 was received from an up-State bank.

The Federal Reserve Bank has not yet applied for admission to the Clearing House Association, but conferences are in progress between representatives of the two institutions. The bank has apparently no legal authority for actually becoming a member of the association, but it probably will arrange to take advantage of the facilities of the Clearing House for the exchange of checks. This is the position occupied by the Sub-Treasury, which is not an actual member of the association and has no voice in its management, but has the use of its facilities.

PLANS POSTAL RATE CUT.

Burleson Also to Start Money Order Service with South America.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—In an effort to facilitate trade, the American Government, through Postmaster General Burleson, is working hard for the improvement of postal communications with countries to the South. These efforts are being turned in two directions, the establishment of a postal money order service, which does not now exist between the United States and any country in South America, and the reduction of the ordinary postage rates to the domestic basis. The plan involves for the United States, if accepted by all Latin-American Governments, a diminution of about $500,000 a year in revenue, though this cannot all be counted as a loss of profit.

The war in Europe has already had some interesting effects upon the postal money order business of the United States. As this business is normally conducted, money orders are issued in the United States payable in foreign countries greatly in excess of the amount of the orders drawn on offices in the United States. The result is that every three months the United States settles the balance by draft. This settlement has been extremely difficult, owing to the fluctuations of foreign exchange rates and other obstacles of a military character.

Austria-Hungary, for instance, has suspended her convention as to money orders altogether, leaving the United States owing her a substantial sum. Belgium has also suspended its convention, leaving the United States owing her about $23,000, which the quick movements of the Belgian Government have so far made it impossible to pay. Egypt, which is nominally a dependency of Turkey but is really British, has also suspended its convention, and so in the past month, for reasons of its own, has Mexico.

Shortly after the outbreak of the war the United States owed Switzerland, on account of postal orders, about $204,000, which ordinarily would have been paid by a draft on Paris. But Paris exchange was unobtainable. The Swiss Government then suggested a draft on Genoa, but that could not be done. Finally drafts on Zurich were suggested and the obligation was liquidated.

In spite of the complete blockade of Germany the department has found no difficulty in settling balances with that country by the purchase of German exchange, though the rates both of English and French exchange have been practically prohibitive.

Balances with Russia are now paid to the National City Bank of New York, where presumably they are used for paying for supplies for the Russian army. Not long ago Greece directed that her balance be paid to an express company. It is supposed that orders for army shoes recently placed by the Greek Government in New England were paid for from this fund.

OSCAR WAS BLUFFED.

Director's Fine Raiment Made Him Renew Contract, Says Hammerstein.

Asserting that he was bluffed by a smart suit of clothes into renewing a contract, Oscar Hammerstein defended yesterday before Judge Thomas in the Federal District Court a suit for $5,700 for breach of contract brought against him by Simon J. H. de la Fuente, former Director of French opera at the Manhattan Opera House. He was, he said, so much impressed by the silk hat, frock coat, and lavender trousers of his stage manager that he really believed that he had received an offer from the Metropolitan Opera House.

Mr. de la Fuente did not appear himself, as his counsel, Edward E. Wise, explained he was in France. His deposition, however, was submitted, in which it was stated that Mr. Hammerstein engaged him in Paris for a twenty-week season of 1909-10 at $400 a week. This, he said, was renewed in the Manhattan Opera House on Feb. 2, 1910, for the next season at $275, but on the following June 3 he received in Paris a letter from Mr. Hammerstein, which read:

"Because of circumstances over which I have no control I have been forced to dispose of the Manhattan Opera House, and your services are therefore no longer required."

Mr. Hammerstein was called to the stand, and told how he came to make the second contract. One day while a rehearsal of "Elektra" was being held in the Manhattan Opera House after the first performance he noticed in the orchestra Mr. de la Fuente dressed, as he put it, "very unusual."

Mr. Hammerstein asked the reason of the display, and the Director informed him that he was going to see Director Gatti-Casazza to make a contract at $275 with him for the production of "Elektra" at the Metropolitan.

Mr. Hammerstein said that he had already lost a number of artists to the Metropolitan, and he feared that if de la Fuente went too his rivals would be able to put on "Elektra," and so get all the benefit of his two months' work. So he agreed to give de la Fuente himself a twenty-week contract at $275.

Then later in conversation with his son Arthur and de la Fuente he found that the talk of a contract with the Metropolitan was false.

STUDY ELECTRICITY RATES.

Utilities Board Reopens Hearings on Pleas for a Revision.

Commissioner Maltbie yesterday reopened the cases before the Public Service Commission looking for a revision of the rates charged for electricity. Assistant Corporation Counsel Malone stated that the city was interested in an early decision, as it affected important administrative policies of the Mayor and Department of Gas and Electricity. P. E. McManus, representing the Central Association of Wine, Beer, and Liquor Dealers, urged a substantial cut in the rates. F. B. de Berard, for the Merchants' Association, criticised the entire investigation.

Joseph P. Day, the real estate broker, was called by the New York Edison Company. He said the real estate market was at a low ebb and had been since 1910. He said the war had caused the practical stoppage of the erection of business buildings, and that there were more vacancies because more business men were trying to economize on space.

James H. Perkins, Vice President of the National City Bank, said that on July 1 business throughout the country was pretty fair, although there was no boom, but the war had brought a change everywhere. Money conditions had improved in the last month. Business, he said, had slowed up and so there was more money for loans.

Arthur Williams of the New York Edison Company gave statistics of the new buildings sanctioned by the Building Bureau for the months Jan. 1 to Oct. 31 for several years. For Manhattan the statistics were: 1909, 851 buildings, value $111,435,962; 1910, 728, value $88,239,620; 1911, 724, value $84,606,050; 1912, 463, value $91,804,160; 1913, 505, value $51,595,215, and 1914, 370, value $42,813,265.

The commission will probably pass upon the rate question next Friday.

YEAR'S CORN CROP THE RIGHEST EVER

NOW 69.7 CENTS A BUSHEL

On the Estimated Yield This Would Make the Crop's Value $1,885,867,324.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—This year's corn crop is, perhaps, the most valuable ever grown, owing to its increased price on account of the European war. The Department of Agriculture announced today, in its preliminary estimate, that the crop would amount to 2,705,692,000 bushels and that, on Nov. 1, farmers were receiving 69.7 cents a bushel. The value of the crop, therefore, based on Nov. 1 figures, is $1,885,867,324.

The total production this year of the principal farm crops as announced in the preliminary estimates, with comparison figures for last year, follows:

CROP.	1914.	1913.
Corn	2,705,692,000	2,446,988,000
Wheat	891,950,000	763,880,000
Oats	1,139,741,000	1,121,768,000
Barley	196,568,000	178,189,000
Rye	42,664,000	41,381,000
Buckwheat	17,025,000	13,883,000
Potatoes	406,238,000	331,525,000
Sweet potatoes	56,020,000	59,057,000
Hay (tons)	68,804,000	64,116,000
Cotton (pounds)	7,341,000,000	6,772,000,000
Tobacco	963,715,000	953,734,000
Flaxseed	15,973,000	17,853,000
Apples	258,862,000	145,410,000
Sugar beets (tons)	5,147,000	5,659,000

Other details of the report follow:

CORN.—Acre yield, 25.8 bushels, against 23.1 last year and 26.7, the ten-year average. Farm price Nov. 1, 69.7 cents a bushel, compared with 70.7 cents last year. Corn of 1913 crop on farms Nov. 1 is estimated at 80,069,000 bushels, compared with 137,972,000 bushels of the 1912 crop remaining on farms Nov. 1, last year.

WHEAT.—Acre yield, 16.7 bushels, against 15.2 last year and 14.4, the ten-year average. Farm price Nov. 1, 96.2 cents per bushel, compared with 77 cents last year. Weight per measured bushel, 58 pounds, against 58.7 last year and 59.9, the ten-year average.

OATS.—Farm price, 42.5 cents, against 37.9 last year. Weight per measured bushel, 31.5 pounds, against 32.1 last year and 31.7, the ten-year average.

BARLEY.—Farm price, 51.3 cents, against 54.7 last year. Weight per measured bushel, 46.2 pounds, against 46.5 last year and 46.8, the ten-year average.

BUCKWHEAT.—Acre yield, 21.4 bushels, against 17.2 last year and 19.7, the ten-year average. Farm price, 78.1 cents, against 75.5 last year.

POTATOES.—Acre yield, 109.6 bushels, against 90.4 last year and 96.6, the ten-year average. Farm price, 54 cents, against 63.6 last year.

HAY.—Farm price, $11.71 a ton, against $12.26 last year.

TOBACCO.—Acre yield, 853.8 pounds, against 784.3 last year and 823.8, the ten-year average.

FLAXSEED.—Acre yield, 8.3 bushels, against 7.8 last year and 7.9, the ten-year average. Farm price, 118.7 cents a bushel, against 113.7 last year.

SUGAR BEETS.—Acre yield, 10.6 tons, against 9.76 last year and 9.96, the ten-year average.

J. McCUTCHEON APPRAISAL.

James McCutcheon, head of James McCutcheon & Co., the Fifth Avenue linen house, who died on July 20, a resident of Greenwich, Conn., left a net estate taxable in this State of only $126,113, according to the appraisal as filed in the office of the State Controller yesterday. Mr. McCutcheon's holdings in the firm and whatever securities he may have, or realty outside of New York State, under the Transfer Tax law, must be taxed in Connecticut. The sole taxable property here is 4 West Twenty-second Street, appraised at $150,000, from which are deducted the widow's dower and commissions of the executors. The value of the entire estate could not be learned at the offices of Robert L. Redfield, 35 Nassau Street, attorneys for the estate.

The property here, under the will, goes into the residuary estate, 35 per cent. of which goes to each of the two daughters, Theodora Nye McCutcheon and Alice Booth McCutcheon, in trust for life; 15 per cent. goes to Elizabeth H. McCutcheon, daughter-in-law, for life or until she shall remarry, and 15 per cent. to Elizabeth McCutcheon, a granddaughter. Mr. McCutcheon's widow gets $40,000 in trust for life. His autos, horses and carriages, books, paintings and bronzes go to the daughters.

Capitalist Ends His Life.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Nov. 9.—John Levy, a capitalist, formerly of Philadelphia, was found dead with the gas turned on in a room at his home, 229 South Vermont Avenue. Mrs. Levy missed him, and seeking him, finally found him in the servants' bathroom in the basement. A pulmotor was used without effect. Mr. Levy was heavily interested in beach front properties. LUCIUS M. WEBB, men's furnishing goods, 174 Perry Street, liabilities $915.

To Preside at Methodist Conference.

At a meeting of the Conference Commission in this city, the Rev. Theodore S. Henderson was selected yesterday as the presiding Bishop for the next session of the Newark Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, which will be held in St. Luke's Methodist Episcopal Church, Broad and Murray Streets, Newark, beginning on March 24, 1915, and continuing for one week.

MRS. STODDARD IN COURT.

Must Leave Biltmore for Poorhouse, She Says, Unless Husband Aids.

From the Biltmore Hotel to the poorhouse is the disaster threatening Mrs. Mabel Cole Stoddard unless her husband comes to her rescue, according to Mrs. Stoddard's testimony in the Domestic Relations Court yesterday. She told Magistrate Cornell she was prepared to prove that she might become a public charge if her husband did not support her. When she made this statement she wore a sealskin coat, a well-tailored dress, and a black hat with an imposing plume. Her address, she said, was the Hotel Biltmore.

Albert Henry Stoddard, the husband, was in court to answer a summons obtained by his wife last Saturday, when she first complained that he had refused to support her. His counsel said that although he had recently met with business reverses he had not denied his wife reasonable support. But he was financially unable, counsel said, to maintain Mrs. Stoddard in a suite of rooms at the Biltmore. Upon request of Mr. Stoddard's counsel an adjournment of the case was taken for a week.

A little more than a year ago Mrs. Stoddard was conspicuously written up as one of the "Successful Women of the Work-a-Day World," and her real estate operations were said to be extensive. She was the founder and President of the M. H. Cole Company, which had offices at 500 Fifth Avenue, and it was through her business activities that she came to meet Mr. Stoddard, whom she married in Jersey City last February. Six weeks after her marriage she separated from her husband, and recently the offices of the M. H. Cole Company were closed, chiefly, it was said, because of Mrs. Stoddard's ill health.

Mr. Stoddard was in the real estate business before he met his wife, and later went into business with her. He was one of the original members of the Tercentenary Commission, but left the commission when it repudiated some of the contracts he made. Not long ago he won a suit of $7,500 for back salary from the commission. His home is at 39 East Thirtieth Street.

SICKLES LEFT ONLY $500.

The petition for the probating of the will of Gen. Daniel E. Sickles was filed yesterday and recites that the General left no real estate and only $500 worth of personal property. Accompanying the petition is a waiver of citation by Mrs. Carolina G. Sickles, the widow, consenting to the probate of the instrument, which did not mention her or her son, Stanton Sickles, both of whom had been estranged from the General for years, and with whom the latter became reconciled only a few days prior to the old soldier's death, on May 3. The will was dated Aug. 30, 1912.

BANKS ACT TODAY ON WITHDRAWALS

Manhattan and Bronx Savings Institutions to Discuss the Sixty-Day Clause.

SATISFIED WITH SITUATION

As Unrestricted Payment of All Demands Is General, Abrogation May Be Delayed.

Representatives of all the savings banks in Manhattan and the Bronx, constituting one of the groups of the State association, will meet at the Union Dime Savings Bank, Sixth Avenue and Fortieth Street, this afternoon to consider the further enforcement of the sixty-day notice.

When the begining of the European war was followed by incipient runs on some of the savings banks, Superintendent of Banks Richards advised that all the savings banks put the sixty-day clause into effect, and this was done, although most of the banks required no notice of individual withdrawals of $50 or less. When these notices began to run out about a month ago, the situation was improved so much that most of them were canceled, and there have been no heavy withdrawals since.

A few days ago Mr. Richards wrote to all the savings banks saying that in view of the improved conditions he no longer would insist on the clause, but would leave it to the discretion of the banks, suggesting, however, that they act in concert by groups. The meeting called for today is the result of this letter, although the Superintendent of Banks has no legal authority to direct the banks either to impose or to withdraw the sixty-day clause, and acted merely in an advisory capacity.

It is not expected that the banks will withdraw the clause at their meeting today, although they can do so safely, so far as the present situation is concerned. For the last few weeks they have been generally ignoring the clause and paying all demands without restriction. This they probably will continue to do, but without rescinding the requirement at present.

The reason for this is that after each semi-annual interest day, there are always considerable withdrawals. It is felt that the withdrawals after Jan. 1 may be heavier than normal, and the banks may desire at that time to use the sixty-day requirement, which for the time being is practically a dead letter. To rescind it now and perhaps find it advisable to reimpose it after Jan. 1, it is thought, may have a bad effect, which will not be the case if the requirement is simply left standing, but not enforced under existing conditions.

ROAD CONGRESS ASKS FOR FEDERAL AID

BIG BURDEN TO THE STATES

Military Advantages Suggested in Connection with a Government Highway System.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTA, Ga., Nov. 9.—Federal aid for road improvement and the elimination of the road problem from politics were the keynotes to the first session of the Fourth American Road Congress, which opened here today. There were 1,000 delegates present when President Austin B. Fletcher called the convention to order, and he said he expected 5,000 to be present at tomorrow's session.

Mr. Fletcher said the time had come to take the public road out of politics, and to handle the question of road building as a great business undertaking. He advocated the creation of a nation-wide corps of trained and efficient men to make road building and road maintenance their life work.

Senator Hoke Smith said that the building of a system of improved highways connecting the counties and the States was a problem of nation-wide interest, and that the Government should aid it. This view was also expressed by Robert P. Hooper, Chairman of the American Automobile Association, who said that the association was lending its influence to have Congress afford the desired co-operation and financial assistance.

"Road management in the United States is wasteful and inefficient," said L. W. Page, Director of the United States Bureau of Public Works. "Of the amount expended last year about $30,000,000 might have been saved by judicious management. The question of good roads is not local. It is a matter in which all should join, that the best thought and best talent should be turned to it."

Mr. Page quoted Federal statistics showing that in 1914 the hard-surface roads in the United States were increased by 18,000 miles, or three-fourths of the mileage of national roads in all of France. Last year, he said, $205,000,000 was appropriated for public road building, and $225,000,000 would be set aside for that purpose this year, or more than $100 for every mile of public road in the United States.

Mr. Page indorsed the Georgia method of utilizing convict labor. He indorsed also the organization of the Womens' Auxiliary to the American Highway Association, which is to hold its first meeting here on Tuesday.

"I hope and believe," he said, "that the women will accomplish marvelous results in bringing about through moral persuasion an improvement of road conditions in rural communities, and in doing so will help the cause of better schools, better churches, and better homes."

Robert P. Hooper, President of the American Automobile Association, told of the work of the association toward obtaining Federal aid, and particularly in aiding the projected national highway across the Continent. Leonard Tufts of Pinehurst, N. C., Chairman of the Executive Committee of the American Highway Association; George W. Coley, State Highway Engineer of Minnesota, and Col. Sidney Suggs, State Highway Commissioner of Oklahoma, also urged that road building be kept out of politics.

The afternoon session was devoted to the subject of "Federal Legislation," under the auspices of the American Automobile Association. George C. Diehl of Buffalo, N. Y., Chairman of the Good Roads Committee of the American Automobile Association, said the association was maintaining an office in Washington, D. C., in the hope of obtaining Federal legislation for the construction of an efficient system of roads. This object, he said, could not be obtained by bearing the expense and building the roads by piecemeal. The proper division of the expense, he regarded as one of the big arguments for a Federal road law. One-half of the States have only one-tenth of the taxing ability for road construction that the States of Massachusetts and New York have.

The Federal Government, Mr. Diehl said, should assist in roads of national importance, because the county had to build the roads from the farms to the railroad station.

THE FIVE-PER CENT. CASE

To be Argued Before the Customs Appeals Court Today.

Arguments will be heard by the United States Court of Customs Appeals in the so-called 5 per cent. case at Washington today. The question before the court is the construction to be given sub-Section 7, Paragraph J, of Section 4, as appearing in the Tariff act of 1913. This provision grants a rebate of 5 per cent. in the duties on merchandise arriving in this country in vessels of American registry.

The Treasury Department ordered customs officials to treat this provision of the law as inoperative for the reason that it conflicted with the treaty rights of nations having commercial conventions with the United States. Importers, however, succeeded in bringing a test case before the Board of General Appraisers, which held that the rebate accrues on goods brought in American ships. It was also held that merchandise coming in foreign vessels cannot have the benefit of the discount. The board further gaves its opinion that the provision in question does not violate the treaties.

N. Y. Dock Co. Has $100,000 Fire.

Fire Marshal Thomas F. Brophy of Brooklyn decided yesterday to investigate the fire which occurred early in the morning in one of the buildings of the New York Dock Company, at the foot of Pacific Street. Marshal Brophy said last night that, while he had not completed his investigation, he had found nothing to show that the blaze was the work of an incendiary. The fire caused a loss of about $100,000.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—The storm of Sunday has passed to sea off the Middle Atlantic Coast, and the weather has cleared in all eastern districts. Rain has fallen in extreme Southern California, Southwestern Arizona, and along the coasts of Washington and Oregon.

It is considerably cooler in the Atlantic coast and Eastern Gulf States, while higher temperatures prevail in the Missouri Valley and the Northwest.

Fair weather is indicated for all sections east of the Rocky Mountains, except for probable snow or rain in the upper lake region.

It will be warmer in interior valleys east of the Mississippi and in the lake region, but colder in the Missouri Valley.

Winds along the North and Middle Atlantic Coasts will be moderate north to northwest; South Atlantic Coast, fresh north, diminishing.

THE CIVIL SERVICE.

City.

The receipt of applications for tabulating machine operator will be closed at 4 P. M. on Nov. 19. Candidates must present evidence of having been employed in a position giving them practical experience in the operation of the Hollerith tabulating machine. The salary is $900 a year. The dates of the physical, written, and practical tests will be announced later.

United States.

The commission announces for Nov. 17 a competitive examination for oil and gas inspector for oil and gas well records, for men only, to fill a vacancy in the Bureau of Mines, Dept. of the Interior, for service in Oklahoma, at a salary ranging from $1,800 to $2,400 a year. Competitors will not be assembled for examination, but will be rated on education, experience and fitness, and thesis. They must have reached their twenty-first but not their fortieth birthday on the date of the examination. Further information may be obtained from the commission, Washington, D. C.

EDUCATION NOTES.

M. Samuel Stern, Chairman of the Committee on Nominations, said yesterday that no opinion had been received as yet from the Corporation Counsel with regard to the case of Walter L. Harvey, a member of the Board of Examiners.

The Parents' Association of P. S. 89, Longwood Avenue, the Bronx, will hold a meeting this evening in the auditorium of the school.

There will be an art exhibit at P. S. 171, 19 East 103d Street, this afternoon, tomorrow afternoon, and Thursday and Friday afternoons.

A meeting of the council of Mothers' Clubs of Greater New York will be held at P. S. 27, Forty-second Street, near Third Avenue, on the afternoon of Nov. 20.

One of the seeming inconsistencies in the attitude of the Board of Education toward married women teachers is that while it will not appoint them to positions in the day schools it does appoint them to positions in the evening schools. One of the officials explained yesterday the reason was that a married woman who is finally appointed in the day school cannot be removed except upon proven charges, whereas the evening school appointment is of one year's duration only and has to be renewed annually.

THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Suburban buying was the leading feature in the realty market yesterday as shown in the announcement of the sale of two large estates near New York, one at Alpine, N. J., and the other at Irvington-on-Hudson.

From its financial value the latter was the more important as it involved a change of ownership in a country seat held at $300,000. The property was the Samuel C. Millett estate known as Caldwell House, containing about fifty acres, with a magnificent residence, completed in 1910, in the Elizabethan style of architecture. In addition there are substantial out-buildings, including a garage, stables, and a farmer's cottage.

The purchaser was John G. Luke, President of the West Virginia Pulp & Paper Company, and it is interesting to note that three other members of the family have bought homes in the immediate vicinity, Arthur K. Luke having acquired some time ago the Legg place, David L. Luke buying the David Dows place at Irvington, and Walter Luke buying the Miller place near Scarsdale.

The Millett homestead, just purchased by John G. Luke, has a frontage of about 500 feet on Broadway and runs northeasterly to Sunnybrook Lane. It is near the homes of Helen Gould Shepard, R. B. Dula, W. L. Bull, Daniel G. Reid, and C. H. Matthiessen.

The brokers in the transaction, which is the largest in some time in that locality, were Kenneth Ives & Co.

Sells Palisades Estate.

One of the fine old estates at Alpine, N. J., has just been sold by J. Cleveland Cody, the architect. It overlooks the Hudson River from the top of the Palisades, and has a frontage of about 500 feet on the Hendrik Hudson Boulevard. Mr. Cody has owned the property since 1870. It contains nine and three-quarter acres, and on it is a large mansion which is said to be nearly 100 years old. The buyer is Missning extensive alterations to the place. ning extensive alternations to the place. It has been held at $35,000. Dutton & Kilsheimer, as attorneys, represented Mr. Cody in the deal.

West Side Deal.

The two-story building at 158 to 162 West Eighty-third Street, on plot 58 by 115.9, has been purchased by the recently incorporated Gilson Realty Company from Walton A. Wells. The building is used as the Branch Station W Post Office.

Harlem Dwelling Sale.

The purchase of the three-story dwelling at 70 East 111th Street by Gerson T. Citron is reported. The recent owner was Joseph Katz. The house covers a plot 16.3 by 100,11, between Madison and Park Avenues. Mr. Citron owns the adjoining houses at 66 and 68, and the recent acquisition gives him a frontage of 50 feet.

East Side Tenement Sale.

The five-story tenement house at 75½ Columbia Street, between Rivington and Stanton Streets, on plot 20 by 49.8, has been sold by Philip Gellis for the Lawyers Mortgage Company to an investor.

Brooklyn.

The G. X. Mathews Company has sold one of its model flats at 1,882 Putnam Avenue, 27.6 by 100, to Dr. Frank Kent for $11,500. This is the fifty-fifth house sold by the builders since the first of the year.

Mrs. Sarah Morrissey has sold the old Morrissey home at Kings Highway and Twenty-second Avenue to Albert Ketcham of Mount Vernon. Henry R. Nostrand was the broker.

James Watters has sold for Charles H. Noble the two-family brick dwelling 269 Seventy-third Street, and for Isabella T. Sands six lots on the north side of Eighty-second Street, between Fourth and Fifth Avenues.

New Jersey.

A residential site of four and a half acres on Oak Bend, Llewellyn Park, West Orange, has been sold to a client for improvement by Edward F. Hamilton & Co.

Staten Island Buyer.

A house and three acres of land at Huguenot Park have been sold by the Princes Bay Realty Company to L. Hoag of the Borough of the Bronx.

Eldorado Apartment Leased.

The Eldorado apartment house, occupying the block front on Central Park West, from Ninetieth to Ninety-first Street, has been leased by The Securities Holding Company to Max Raymond for four years and eleven months at a rental of $51,000 a year. The Eldorado is eight stories high and has a frontage of 201.6 feet.

Business Leases.

Horace S. Ely & Co. have rented for the Rogers Peet Company the second story of the 16 East Forty-second Street section of their new building. The tenant is the Pomeroy Company, surgical appliances.

Douglas L. Elliman & Co. have leased the store and basement, at 31 East Forty-eighth Street for Harry Parker to a firm of exterior decorators.

Webster B. Mabie has leased for Walter J. Salomon the store at 1,576 Broadway to the Broadway Electrical Novelty Company.

Porter & Co., have leased for D. & J. H. Tonjes, to Max Meyerson, the store at 300 West 125th Street.

Pease & Elliman have leased for Mrs. Mary T. Tatum the three-story dwelling at 102 Edgecombe Avenue, between 139th and 140th Streets, to E. E. Gross.

Realty Notes.

Lloyd N. Worth was the broker who negotiated the exchange of property at 494 and 496 Hudson Street and 107 to 115 Bedford Street, for the plot, 75 by 120 on Southern Boulevard close to the 174th Street Subway station in the Bronx, recently reported.

HELLENSTEIN DEFIES CITY INVESTIGATOR

COURT MANDATE SOUGHT

Commissioner of Accounts Aims to Show Abuses and Charges May Follow Investigation.

Blocked in his effort to obtain from Coroner Herman Hellenstein any information which would aid him in the inquiry he is making into the Board of Coroners at the direction of Mayor Mitchel, Commissioner of Accounts Leonard M. Wallstein served notice yesterday afternoon on the Coroner and his counsel, ex-Assistant District Attorney Frank Moss, that he would carry the matter to the Supreme Court. The climax was reached after Dr. Hellenstein had occupied the witness chair for more than four hours at the first of a series of public hearings in the Commissioner's office in the Municipal Building. Upon the advice of Mr. Moss the Coroner refused to answer more than half of the questions he was asked. Suddenly the Commissioner put aside his notes.

"I suspend this hearing temporarily," he said, "pending an appeal to the Supreme Court to compel Coroner Hellenstein to answer these questions or stand in contempt of court."

Mr. Moss offered no objection as the Commissioner went on to explain that he believed it was the legal duty of the Coroner, or any other public officer paid out of the funds of the city, to answer simple questions concerning the administration of his office. The Coroner, who had taken the grilling good-naturedly, glanced at Mr. Moss and then smiled. He nodded cordially to Commissioner Wallstein and hurried out of the room.

Mr. Moss, whose legal advice has halted temporarily the Mayor's inquiry, is also counsel for Mayor Mitchel's Municipal Civil Service Commission, now being subjected to an investigation by the State Civil Service Commission.

Scope of Inquiry Board.

It became apparent yesterday before the hearing had been under way very long that Commissioner Wallstein had mapped out his public inquiry on a broad scale and that his aim apparently was not only to show that the Board of Coroners should be abolished, but also to bring out facts which would provide the basis for charges against individuals if it developed that there had been abuse of power.

In objecting to many of the questions put to the Coroner Mr. Moss did not seek to conceal the fact that he was endeavoring to protect his client in the latter emergency. He based his refusal to permit answers to many of the questions on the ground that the Commissioner did not have jurisdiction to inquire into anything that tended to review the judicial acts of a Coroner, but he admitted as frankly that he foresaw that the question of preferring charges might come up.

"My broad proposition is," said Mr. Moss, "that the Coroner is presumed to know the law. He is under that burden. If he violates the law he must take the consequences; whether he is learned or not in what the law says of his duties that makes no difference."

One line of attack which aroused much interest was Mr. Wallstein's effort to elicit from Coroner Hellenstein information concerning his connection with various insurance companies. He asked the Coroner if he knew the conditions under which accident, death, and liability insurance companies paid premiums, but Mr. Moss would not permit his client to answer. At another time he asked the Coroner if he had not sought a ruling from the Corporation Counsel in the case of Isaac Weingart, but Dr. Hellenstein refused to say yes or no. Mr. Weingart, an importer, was found dead at his home, 285 Central Park West, on Nov. 8, 1913, in a bath-tub half filled with water. Coroner Hellenstein and Coroner's Physician Timothy D. Lehane gave the verdict that death was the result of natural causes. Mr. Weingart was insured for $310,000 and a clause in the policy made it void if he committed suicide.

Mr. Wallstein said after the hearing that many of the questions he asked of a general nature concerning the manner of filing death certificates and the conduct of the Coroners' Office had a bearing on specific cases which he had in mind. The Weingart case, he said, was one of them. Further information, he said, would be sought if the Supreme Court directed Coroner Hellenstein to answer his questions.

Coroner Changes Testimony.

Coroner Hellenstein answered some questions regarding his connection with the life insurance companies.

"In connection with your employment by the Aetna Life Insurance Company, did you not testify at a private hearing before me that you had no letter of introduction to Dr. Archer of the Aetna Company?" he was asked.

The Coroner conferred with Mr. Moss for several minutes, and then admitted that, despite his former testimony, he had had such a letter and that it was from Dr. C. V. Everitt, the medical director of the Fidelity and Casualty Company.

"I thought I had only an introduction by telephone," he said. "After you had it published in the newspapers I asked Dr. Everitt, and he told me there was a letter."

Dr. Hallenstein next admitted that he also had had a letter of introduction to Dr. J. J. Moorehead of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company and that he had called upon him. He made no effort to conceal the fact that he had business relations with the insurance companies mentioned while he was Coroner, and had solicited medical business from them.

Commissioner Wallstein made it known that he intended to call the other Coroners to the stand, and asked Mr. Moss if they were going to make the same objections to the questions. Mr. Moss said he could speak only for Coroner Hellenstein.

Mr. Wallstein said that his principal reason in asking the Coroners the questions was to give them a chance to state their side. He did not want to go ahead, he said, with a one-sided inquiry, which might be criticised, as the hearings might end in a recommendation that the Board of Coroners be abolished or that charges be brought. Mr. Moss offered no suggestion to avoid carrying the dispute to the Supreme Court, and Mr. Wallenstein said he would take it up immediately with the Corporation Counsel and make the application to-day.

"We will continue the hearings at the earliest possible moment," he said to the reporters.

Dr. Hellenstein was vague in response to questions about the reported steps of the Greater New York Coroners' Association to defeat legislation at Albany intended to abolish the Coroners. He did not recall a suggestion which Mr. Wallstein said had been made at a meeting of the association on March 27, 1914, that each clerk be assessed $2 on every $1,000 he was paid to raise a fund to fight the proposed law.

OREN DAY POMEROY DIES.

Was Under Knife in Flushing Hospital When Nurses Struck.

Oren Day Pomeroy, on whom Dr. Charles B. Story was operating when the Flushing Hospital nurses quit the operating room to go on strike on Oct. 31 last, died in the hospital on Sunday. Mr. Pomeroy's death was said to be due to appendicitis complicated by malignant endocarditis. Dr. Story was operating for appendicitis when the nurses left, and he said yesterday:

"There were four physicians in the room and the operation was uninterrupted despite the desertion of the nurses. It really was not affected by their action."

Mr. Pomeroy was 32 years old and lived at 750 Seventh Avenue, College Point. He was a son of the late Dr. O. D. Pomeroy, one of the founders of the Manhattan Eye and Ear Infirmary. Mr. Pomeroy leaves a wife and two sons.

HARTMAN SEIZED IN $700,000 FRAUD

ARREST AT THE VANDERBILT

Widow, Now Bankrupt, Charges Fortune Was Stolen Through Power of Attorney.

HIS TRIP ABROAD BLOCKED

Promoter Had Arranged to Sa Today—Indictments Specify Larceny of $133,000.

Richard J. Hartman, the former President of Tyson & Co., ticket brokers, who got into legal entanglements last year through transactions in Metropolitan Opera tickets, was arrested yesterday afternoon on a charge by Mrs. Charlotte L. Mackenzie that he had stolen her entire fortune, approximating $700,000, and two diamond rings valued at $1,000 each.

The arrest was made by Detective Sergeant Barney Flood of the District Attorney's office, on three indictments, specifying the larceny of $133,000 from Mrs. Mackenzie. Shortly before the arrest the District Attorney's office received information that Hartman had made preparations to sail for Europe today. He was caught as he was entering the café of the Vanderbilt Hotel, and was locked up in the Tombs Prison last night, in default of $25,000 bail.

Her Entire Fortune Gone.

Mrs. Mackenzie, who is about 55 years old, is the widow of James S. Mackenzie, a brother of Alexander R. Mackenzie, who was formerly the head of the Singer Manufacturing Company. Most of the money said to have been stolen by Hartman was in shares of stock in the Singer Company left the widow by her husband when he died, in 1907. All of it, as well as her other holdings in stocks and bonds, has been lost.

Mrs. Mackenzie is now a bankrupt. Early in the year she was forced to abandon her home at 37 West Eighty-ninth Street, and on Feb. 18 of this year her furniture was sold at auction to satisfy debts aggregating $6,216. Two days later an involuntary petition in bankruptcy was filed against her.

The complainant has four children, three daughters and a son, of whom the eldest is a daughter now about 28 years old. That the children did not have their mother's confidence in Hartman is indicated by the fact that in March, 1910, when he was Mrs. Mackenzie's confidential business agent, Miss Addy Mackenzie, the eldest daughter, obtained the appointment of a commission to examine into her mother's competency, and until the commission had made a favorable report, Mrs. Mackenzie was restrained by Justice Newburger from transferring or disposing of any of her property.

Met Him in a London Hotel.

When she realized that she had lost everything she had Mrs. Mackenzie made her first complaint against Hartman to Assistant District Attorney James A. Delehanty. In 1908, a year after her husband's death, Mrs. Mackenzie met Hartman at a hotel in London, she said. He was agreeable, and seemed to be a prosperous business man, and soon won his way into the favor of the widow, who was then managing her own affairs. After her return to America he continued his friendly relations with her until he had gained her entire confidence.

Mrs. Mackenzie said that, as she had no business agent, she consulted Hartman in many matters, and in 1911 he learned that she owed money on loans to two corporations in Jersey City. These debts were $41,500 to the Hudson County National Bank and $32,000 to the New Jersey Title Guarantee and Trust Company. The former was secured by 336 shares of stock in the Singer Manufacturing Company and the latter by 1,104 shares in the same corporation.

One day shortly after Hartman had received this information, Mrs. Mackenzie received two telephone calls purporting to come from the bank and trust company by which she was notified that the loans would have to be paid immediately. Hartman promptly offered to pay the loans for Mrs. Mackenzie, and allow her to owe him the amount of them, she alleged, and she consented to the arrangement. She trusted the man to such an extent that when he presented certain papers to her to be signed she affixed her name without inquiring into their nature. He told her that they were simply formal documents necessary for the transfer of the two loans, Mrs. Mackenzie alleged, but in fact her signatures to them gave him the power of attorney over her affairs.

Power of Attorney Used.

With the papers in his possession, Hartman was able to buy and sell, receive and give in Mrs. Mackenzie's name without question. Then it was that he started in to get everything the widow had, she alleged. First he took up the two Jersey City loans, according to her story, and pledged 600 of the shares he obtained from the Jersey corporations to the Seaboard National Bank of New York for $100,000. Needing more money later, he pledged the remaining shares to other banks, until he had borrowed up to their full value, Mrs. Mackenzie said. He never repaid the loans, and ultimately the shares were sold by the creditors.

Mrs. Mackenzie alleged that Hartman gradually obtained possession of every share of stock and every bond she possessed, pledged them all for loans, and permitted all to be sold, until today neither he nor she owns a single stock or bond. The complete list of securities which Mrs. Mackenzie lost without her knowledge was 100 shares of United States Steel preferred, 500 shares of Manhattan Transit Company, 50 shares of Brooklyn Union Gas Company, 40 shares of Dominion Copper Company, 2,206 shares of Singer Manufacturing Company, $16,000 in bonds of the Hudson Gas Company, and $15,000 in bonds of the New York and Hoboken Company. The shares in the Singer Manufacturing Company had a market value of $285 each.

All of the time Hartman was pledging

THE NORTH CAROLINA REPORTED BLOWN UP

Washington Worried Over Rumors About Cruiser at Beirut —Telegrams Unanswered.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—Government officials found cause for worry today over a report that the armored cruiser North Carolina had been blown up at Beirut, Syria.

Outside of the fact that the report itself was disquieting, the naval authorities had reason for concern, because efforts to get word from the North Carolina in the last few days had been unsuccessful.

How and where the report originated the officials of the Navy Department were unable to tell. All they knew about it was that the first inquiries made of the department came from Boston. They would have been disinclined to pay much attention to this rumor if it had not been that a telegram of inquiry, addressed to the Commander of the North Carolina at Beirut three days ago, had remained unanswered.

She reported her arrival at Beirut on Nov. 2. Last Saturday a dispatch in American newspapers said that United States marines had been landed at Beirut to protect American interests. That day the Navy Department sent a cable message to the Commander of the North Carolina asking him if the news report were true. No answer to this message came to the department, and another message of inquiry was sent yesterday. This also remains unanswered.

The North Carolina and the Tennessee were the "gold ships" sent from the United States to Europe with money to relieve distressed Americans.

After the two vessels had completed their relief work in Northern Europe and along the Mediterranean they were ordered to Turkish waters for the purpose of protecting American interests should occasion arise. The Tennessee last reported from Mitylene, (Lesbos,) in the Aegean Sea.

The North Carolina is commanded by Capt. Joseph W. Oman.

PSYCHIC WAR NEWS.

It Favors the Allies — Says Also We'll Take a Hand in Turkey.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 10.—War news derived from purely psychic sources is contained in The Occult Messenger as follows:

"The United States, the most unlikely people of all, will put a finger in the Turkish pie. Greece, Bulgaria and Russia will be in Constantinople at Christmas. In the third and fourth weeks in November Russia will assuredly be victorious and tread German soil on the way to Berlin. The Allies will make unexpected progress during the latter part of November. New guns are making their appearance to smash German forts. New invention in French aviation seems to increase Allies' tactical superiority and throw dismay in retreating Teuton ranks. German losses are appalling, over 1,800,000 being already put out of action on both her frontiers."

SCHWAB HAS A MYSTERY.

And an Opinion on Kitchener—Keeping Story of Weeks in England.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 10.—Charles M. Schwab will sail for New York tomorrow on the Adriatic. He refused to say anything about his trip to England, except to remark: "I hope before a great many years to write an autobiography and I trust that when I do so I can tell the full story of the last three weeks."

Mr. Schwab has occupied a suite of rooms at the Savoy Hotel for ten days and has consistently declined to be interviewed. It is known, however, that in private conversation a few days ago he made the remark that "Lord Kitchener is the best President the United States Steel Corporation ever missed."

AVALANCHE OF PROSPERITY.

Credit Man Would Make the Dollar the World's Standard of Exchange.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 10.—An avalanche of prosperity was predicted today at a gathering of credit men of this city. The optimism of the speakers was tempered with conservatism. It was their opinion that while golden opportunities awaited the commerce of the United States to the south and across seas, it would be a mistake to rush headlong after business that now is and will be seeking our markets.

"Make the United States dollar the world standard of exchange," suggested Calvin J. Smyth, President of the Young-Smyth-Field Company.

"While it is true that Europe has reaped a rich harvest in South America," he concluded, "it also has paid the price in the present enormous losses, so that while we have been deprived of the trade there for years, we also have been spared heavy financial losses in this crisis."

SAYS SPIES FIRED SHIP.

Captain of Rembrandt, on Which 800 Horses Were Burned, Blames Crew.

NORFOLK, Nov. 10.—Virtually all of the 800 horses on board the British steamship Rembrandt were burned to death when the ship took fire off the Virginia capes yesterday, according to information reaching here tonight. The Rembrandt was bound from Baltimore to St. Nazaire, France, and the animals are understood to have been intended for the armies of the Allies.

It was reported here tonight that Capt. Edlin of the Rembrandt had notified officials of the Lamport & Holt Line, owners of the ship, that he had reason to believe the vessel was fired by German spies who were members of the crew. The Captain is said to have claimed that threats against the ship were made before she steamed from Baltimore Saturday.

Tonight the Rembrandt was ten miles off Cape Henry, disposing of the carcasses of the horses. She will proceed to Newport News for repairs. The forward compartments of the ship are reported badly damaged.

When the fire was discovered the ship was 200 miles off the capes. The smoke was so dense that the crew could not reach the horses, and the stampeded animals were left to their fate. The ship's hold was flooded and the hatches closed, smothering out the fire.

SPY EXECUTED IN TOWER OF LONDON

NO SUCH CASE IN 214 YEARS

MARRIED AN OMAHA GIRL

Lived in New York and Nebraska, Where He Was Tourist Agent and Employe of German Steamship Line.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 10.—Karl Hans Lody, alias Charles A. Inglis, the German who was found guilty of espionage by a court-martial on Nov. 2, was shot this morning in the Tower of London.

To the very end, says The Daily Mail, Lody maintained the calm imperturbability which characterized him throughout the three days' trial, and when facing the firing party he refused to be blindfolded.

The execution took place in the miniature rifle range at the Tower just as dawn was breaking. Over night Lody had been removed from Wellington Barracks, where he had been confined since his trial, to the Tower, and was taken to one of the guard rooms. Just before daybreak eight soldiers were roused and marched to the rifle range, being followed immediately by Lody, who walked firmly and calmly.

A Sergeant cried, "Present! Fire!" The eight rifles rang out with one report, and Lody was dead. Subsequently his body was buried within the precincts of the Tower.

The last previous execution at the Tower was that of Lord Lovat, who was beheaded on Tower Hill for taking part in the Jacobite rebellion which was crushed out at Culloden.

First Said He Was American.

LONDON, Nov. 10.—Lody when arrested claimed to be an American, but later confessed that he was a German. He had lived in New York and Omaha. In the latter city he married the daughter of Gottlieb Storse, a brewer, who later divorced him.

Lody met his death in the Tower of London after having been found guilty by the court-martial on charges of having communicated with the enemy. The statement concerning the execution is brief, saying: "The sentence was duly confirmed."

It is understood that Lody refused to the last to reveal the name of the superior officer from whom he received his instructions to spy on the British Navy.

This was the first execution for espionage in the Tower of London since 1700. The scene of the execution was not far from the spot where Anne Boleyn and other persons famous in English history were put to death.

Lody was about 28 years old.

OMAHA, Nov. 10.—Neither the former Mrs. Karl Haus Lody, who is the daughter of Gottlieb Storse, nor her father is in this city. Mr. Storse, however, indicated some time ago that his interest in the Lody case was only a passing one, and the convicted man's former wife has consistently remained in seclusion since Lody's arrest.

The marriage of Lody to Miss Storse created considerable comment when the wedding, which was almost clandestine, took place two and a half years ago. Miss Storse met Lody while on a tour of Germany and other European countries. She obtained a divorce a few months after their marriage.

Lody has not been heard from by the Storse family since he sailed for Europe shortly after the decree of divorce was granted.

Arrested in September.

Lody was the first person to be tried in England and executed in the Tower of London for the crime of espionage in 214 years. He was arrested late in September and brought up for trial on Oct. 30 at the Middlesex Guildhall. Lord Cheylesmore was President of the court. There were nine judges. The trial was conducted under the ancient laws for such actions, and the President appeared in a dark blue uniform with gold epaulettes, while the eight other judges wore khaki service uniforms. Khaki-clad soldiers with fixed bayonets were stationed at the entrances and guarded the prisoner.

Although he had previously protested that he was an American, Lody bore himself with the stiffness characteristic of a German officer. On the first day of the trial it was shown that he had admitted to a member of the American Embassy that he was a German, and he made no appeal for the protection of the United States. Archibald H. Bodkin, the prosecutor for the Crown, stated that Lody posed as an American tourist during his travels in the United Kingdom. He said that on Aug. 4 Lody had received an American passport from the American Embassy under the name of Charles A. Inglis of New York, and that late in the same month Lody had visited Edinburgh and various other places as Inglis. The prosecutor alleged that he had sent valuable reports to Berlin, and especially referred to letters sent from Edinburgh describing Queensferry and other places on the Firth of Forth, giving accurate details regarding armaments and the location of British ships, and stating that important buildings in London had been selected as targets for fire netting from the attacks of Zeppelins.

Testifies at Court-Martial.

On the second day of the trial Lody took the stand and gave an outline of his mission to England, after admitting that he was a former senior Lieutenant of the German Navy, but was then on the reserve list. He admitted that he had been a tourist agent for the Hamburg-American Line while in New York, and that two years before, while an employe of the Union Pacific Railroad, he had married in Omaha a daughter of Gottlieb Storz, a retired German brewer.

Lody testified that while in Berlin in July he received instructions from a high naval officer, whose name he refused to disclose, to go to England and report on the movements of the British Fleet. He was told to use any means to get information, and was given $5,000 in gold for his expenses.

ENGLISH COAST TOWNS TELL OF AIRSHIP VISIT

Searchlights Busy All Night and Firing Is Heard from the Cliffs.

LONDON, Nov. 10.—A dispatch to The Evening News from Dover says:

"As a result of a report that an airship had been sighted over Sheerness the searchlight corps was busy all night. Later the airship was reported over Harwich.

"Firing was heard on the eastern cliffs between 2 and 2:30 o'clock this morning."

ROME, Nov. 10, (Dispatch to The London Morning Post.)—A member of the German Embassy here said today that when the Germans landed in England, as men, women, and children would alike oppose a stubborn resistance, the Germans would treat them as they have treated the Belgians.

KAISER SENDS CAVALRY TO RUSSIAN FRONTIER

Horses and Men Rushed From Flanders—Von Kluck's Strategy Under Censure.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ON THE NORTH BELGIAN FRONTIER, Nov. 8, (Dispatch to The London Morning Post.)—A trustworthy friend, who has just left Brussels, assures me that Emperor William was there last Monday on the way back from western headquarters. The fact of his presence was not generally known and he remained a few hours only.

A man who has just come from Berlin informs me that in three days eighty trainloads of horses and men, drawn from the western theatre of war, have left Berlin for Posen. This weakening of the German cavalry force in Flanders he believes to be due in part to the fact that the fighting on the western side is largely confined to artillery and infantry, but the main reason is the urgent need of cavalry reinforcements to cope with the advance of the Russians in the east.

My informant, who has special sources of information, tells me that the German strategy in Flanders is the subject of severe criticism in military circles, and that a commander, said to be Gen. von Kluck, has personally been taken to task by the Emperor. This is especially hard on Gen. von Kluck, who is believed to have acted throughout as the executant of imperial orders.

It is stated in Berlin that the German Government has paid Turkey as the price of her intervention in the war the sum of 200,000,000 marks ($47,600,000.)

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, Nov. 10. (Dispatch to The London Morning Post.)—I hear from a well-informed source that Germany, alarmed at Russian successes, has made preliminary offers of peace to the Russian Government, which has, however, rejected them.

GERMAN CASUALTIES OVER HALF A MILLION

Latest List Contains Thousands of August and September Victims, Few of October.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

COPENHAGEN, Nov. 10. (Dispatch to The London Times.)—The official lists of German casualties in killed, wounded, and missing officers and men give a total of 509,000.

One list alone contains 29,281 names. Most of the names in the latest list are from September, some thousands are even from August, and only a few from October.

Only last Sunday a dispatch from Berlin said that the total number of names of Berlin victims given out there in one week was 57,800.

LORD HUGH GROSVENOR MISSING AFTER FIGHT

LONDON, Nov. 10.—A casualty list dated Nov. 2 and issued tonight gives the names of seventeen officers killed, including Lieut. the Hon. F. E. Lambton of the Royal Horse Guards, and forty-three wounded.

Among the wounded is Capt. Lord Alastair Robert Innes-Ker of the Royal Horse Guards, brother of the Duke of Roxburghe. He married in 1907 Miss Anne Breese, daughter of the late W. L. Breese of New York.

Others wounded are Lieut. the Hon. C. H. G. Mulholland of the Eleventh Hussars, Major the Hon. R. B. F. Robertson of the Twenty-first Lancers, and Capt. L. D. Tollemache of the Lincolnshire Regiment.

Among the nine missing is Capt. Lord Hugh Grosvenor of the First Life Guards.

LONDON, Wednesday, Nov. 11.—Lord Rosebery, the former Premier speaking at a recruiting meeting in Edinburgh yesterday said he had just received news that his nephew Col. W. R. Wyndham had been killed in action.

The Hon. William Reginald Wyndham was 38 years old and was the heir presumptive of the third Baron Leconfield. He was educated at Sandhurst, and until 1913 had been a Captain of the Seventeenth Lancers. He resigned during that year and again entered the service on the outbreak of the war. eH was a member of the Jockey Club.

GERMANY LOSES TWO SEA RAIDERS; THREAT TO CUT OFF BELGIAN RELIEF; ALLIES HOLD IN VIOLENT BATTLE

EMDEN BEACHED AND BURNED

SHARP ENGAGEMENT FOUGHT

German Casualties Heavy, Three British Killed—Attempt to Cut Cable Failed.

KOENIGSBERG BOTTLED UP

Found Hiding Up African River by Chatham and Shelled—Colliers Sunk in Channel.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 10.—Victory over two commerce-destroying German cruisers, the redoubtable Emden and the Koenigsberg, was officially announced by the British Admiralty today.

The Emden, which in the three months she had roamed the Indian Ocean as a raider had destroyed British shipping worth more than $5,000,000, was discovered yesterday by the Australian cruiser Sydney attacking the cable and wireless stations on the Cocos or Keeling Islands, southwest of Java, in the Indian Ocean. A fight followed, resulting in victory for the Sydney, the heavier and more formidable ship. The Emden, ablaze fore and aft, was driven ashore on one of the islands of the group. There she burned. Her casualties are declared to have been heavy, but it is reported that her commander, Capt. von Muller, and some of the crew were saved. On the Sydney three men were killed and fifteen wounded.

The Koenigsberg was bottled up in the Rufiji River, opposite Mafia Island, in German East Africa, where she was found hiding by the British cruiser Chatham on Oct. 30. The Koenigsberg was six miles up the river in shoal water. The Chatham was of too deep draught to ascend the stream, so after shelling the Koenigsberg and some shore intrenchments which her crew had dug, the British cruiser blocked the river by sinking colliers in the channel, rendering the escape of the Koenigsberg impossible.

Denied that Cable was Cut.

It was reported today that before her destruction the Emden succeeded in cutting the cable at the Cocos Islands, but a dispatch from Sydney, N. S. W., received by The London Morning Post tonight, indicates that she failed in this attempt. The Sydney dispatch reads:

"It is clear that the Emden's objective was both the Eastern Cable station and the troopships of the Allies' expeditionary forces. The fact that she was foiled in both purposes is attributable to the excellent manoeuvring of the Sydney.

"When the first news arrived here of her presence at the Cocos Islands it was expected that the Emden would emulate the exploit of the German cruiser Nurnberg in cutting the cable at Fanning Island, but this was evidently prevented by the timely arrival of the Sydney. Eastern Cable traffic is maintained throughout.

"The Emden arrived at the Cocos Islands at 7 o'clock Monday morning, and was able to damage the cable office before the arrival of the Sydney, but this did not prevent the maintenance of communication. It is reported that the Emden also disabled the wireless station."

How Lloyd's Got the News.

At Lloyd's a wild outburst followed the receipt of the news of the sinking of the Emden. The business of the day was in full swing, when suddenly above the hum the Lutine bell rang out. Only on momentous occasions is this bell rung.

Instantly business was suspended and all turned toward the rostrum, from which it was known that some great news was to be made public. The official crier mounted the steps and, in the rolling tones for which he is famous, began, "Gentlemen, it is officially announced that the Emden—"

That is as far as he was allowed to go. Cheer after cheer went up. Hats and papers were thrown into the air.

Again the Lutine bell was rung—to enjoin silence—and at last the message was completed that the Emden had been destroyed.

The shipping industry in the Indian Ocean is now relieved of the greater portion of its peril, and underwriters will sleep more comfortably. It is, perhaps, no exaggeration to say that this ship alone has inflicted more damage to British merchant shipping than all the rest of the German Navy combined.

The effect upon rates for the moment has not been particularly marked. For some days the rate from the East had shown an easier tendency, and today it was quoted unchanged.

Aside from a report from Tokio that Capt. von Muller, the Emden's commander, and most of the crew were saved, no news had reached here late tonight of the fate of the Emden's men.

Summary of War News.

The German cruiser Emden, which has preyed on British commerce in the Indian Ocean since the outbreak of the war, has been sunk by the Australian cruiser Sydney, near Cocos Island. The British Admiralty reports that the loss of officers and crew was heavy, but a dispatch from Tokio says that most of the men were saved.

The German cruiser Königsberg, which disabled the British cruiser Pegasus in Zanzibar Harbor several weeks ago, is bottled up at Mafia Island, on the coast of German East Africa, according to an announcement from the British Admiralty.

Karl Hans Lody, alias Charles A. Inglis, who once lived in this country, has been executed in the Tower of London as a spy. This was the first execution in the Tower of London since 1700.

The French War Office announces that a desperate attack by the Germans to the south of Ypres yesterday was checked, and the Allies have advanced between Ypres and Armentières. Progress was also made between Rheims and Berry-au-Bac.

The London Press Bureau reports that little change has taken place in the general position of the forces in France, and reiterates that the German offensive is gradually spending its strength.

The German Army Headquarters reports that the attacks near Ypres, where 500 French and British prisoners were taken and several machine guns captured, is slowly progressing. Advances have also been made south of this region, it is stated, the strong counter attacks of the British forces being repulsed.

The Russian General Staff announces that the right wing of the German Army in East Prussia, which has been stubbornly resisting the Russian advance near Lyck, has been driven back toward Masuran Lakes. Advances near Cracow and Przemysl are also reported.

The Germans are rushing reinforcements to the relief of the army in the eastern theatre of war. Thousands of trainloads of troops are reported to have gone through Belgium, and others are being rushed from the interior of Germany.

The German fortress of Tsing-tau, which surrendered three days ago, was formally handed over to the Japanese and British conquerors yesterday.

Kaiser's Troops Withdrawing from Coast to Make Final Effort to the South.

PARIS, Nov. 10, 11:38 P. M.—An official bulletin issued tonight said:

At the north the battle continues very violent.

There is nothing to report on the other part of the front.

The afternoon bulletin said:

The action continued all day yesterday with the same intensity that has characterized the previous fighting between the sea and the region of Armentières. The encounters were of particular violence for the reason that the opposing forces are alternately taking the offensive.

Summing up, it may be said that the day was marked by the checking of a German attack in considerable force to the south of Ypres, and by perceptible progress on the part of French forces in the vicinity of Six-schoots and between Ypres and Armentières.

Equally on the front of the British troops all the German attacks were repulsed with energy.

Along the major part of the front, from the Canal of La Bassée as far as the Woevre, our troops made secure the results attained in the course of the past few days. There should be reported also our progress in the region of Loivre, between Rheims and Berry-au-Bac.

In Lorraine there is nothing to report.

In the Vosges fresh attacks on the part of the enemy, directed against the heights to the south of Hilsen Ste. Marie and to the southeast of Thann, all have been repulsed.

HAVRE, Nov. 10, (via Paris.)—The situation in Flanders today shows relatively little change, with slight improvements in favor of the Allies, according to the Belgian official bulletin made public today.

Says German Efforts Are Flagging.

LONDON, Nov. 10.—The Official Press Bureau issued this announcement tonight:

Little change has taken place in the general position, (in France.)

There are, however, not wanting signs that the violence of the German offensive, which has been as resolutely pushed as it has been stubbornly met, is gradually spending its strength.

Germans Advancing, Says Berlin.

BERLIN, Nov. 10, (via London.)—An official communication, issued by the German Army Headquarters, says:

Our attacks near Ypres yesterday were progressing slowly. More than 500 French colored and English prisoners have been taken, and several machine guns captured.

Further south our troops also are advancing, the strong counter-attacks of the British forces having been repulsed.

GERMANS SHIFTING FRONT.

THIELT, Belgium, (via The Hague and London,) Nov. 10.—The inundations in Flanders, which prevented the Germans from making their way along the coast in their efforts to reach Calais, are now proving equally unfavorable to the Allies, who today are finding it impossible to proceed through these marshy regions.

The Germans have been obliged to evacuate Middelkerke, on the coast, half way between Nieuport and Ostend, and this point has not yet been occupied by the Allies.

The Germans, according to information available here, are now concentrating all their forces for a final attack in the vicinity of Ypres. On Saturday afternoon they almost succeeded in surrounding the city as a result of attacks from the southwest and northwest. Today, however, their position is said to be much less favorable because of the excellent work of the French artillerymen and the scouting of the French and British aviators, who now seem to be flying better than the German airmen.

The fighting has swung over the country with rapidity, some villages, like Dixmude and Ramscapelle, changing hands several times a day. At the present time the Germans hold only two unimportant villages on the left bank of the Yser. These engagements, which German Proclamation Says Food Will Be Cut Off if People Do Not Return to Work.

RELIEF AGENTS ARE AMAZED

Will Appeal to Washington—Belgians Say It Is Impossible to Revive Industries Now.

BRUSSELS, Nov. 7, (Delayed,) (via The Hague and London, Nov. 10.)—A proclamation issued by the German Governor of Brussels Nov. 6 reiterates the German statement that Belgium needs an active population to make money to keep it from starvation, but this time the order threatens that unless the people return immediately and resume their former activities the German Government will close all charitable organizations which now feed the idle populace.

Well-informed Brussels residents say the German contention that the Belgian people are unwilling to resume their activities is unfounded. The Belgians, they say, are willing enough to work, but this is impossible since all their automobiles and horses have been taken by the German Army, making it impossible for them to haul coal and raw material for the factories.

The Belgians, it is declared, fished the miserable, half-blind horses out of the mines, fed them, and set them to work; but no sooner were these horses strong enough to pull carts than the Germans confiscated them for the army. Now the factories are without coal and iron or any raw materials.

The best industry, which was enormous in many parts of Belgium, has been ruined. The farmers have millions of beets rotting in the storehouses through inability to transport them to the factories.

The workmen, Belgians maintain, are willing to work for one-fourth of their ordinary wages, but the factory owners, unable to provide the necessary material, have been obliged to dismiss the men.

There has been a great scarcity of gasoline, since a British flier attacked unsuccessfully the German main gasoline depot at Heren, north of Brussels, and the Germans are keeping their gasoline nearer home.

The situation in the last week has turned for the worse. A strict order not to allow anybody to leave the country, numerous arrests of Belgians between the ages of 18 and 30, and the continual movement of trains bearing wounded and fresh troops are causing great unrest, and the population, which is doomed to idleness and which is watching the daily rations grow smaller and smaller, is beginning to murmur.

Open revolt and speedy destruction, some residents say, are preferable to this slow method of starvation, while the latest fine inflicted by the Germans of $1,250,000, which popularly is felt to be unjust, has suddenly sharpened the hitherto politely distant relations between the Belgians and their conquerors.

When informed of the reported threat by Germans in Brussels to stop the distribution of food by the American Relief Committee, Jerome D. Greene, Secretary of the Rockefeller Foundation, said today that the shipment of food and supplies from New York to the distressed Belgians would be continued until Ambassador Page at London advises to the contrary. Mr. Greene added:

INDIANS SPECIAL TARGETS OF FOE

OBSERVER LAUDS THEM

LONDON, Nov. 10.—The Indian forces in France have made good, but have achieved none of the daring and extraordinary exploits attributed to them, according to a statement issued tonight by the Official Press Bureau and written "by an observer with the Indian Corps."

The account emphasizes in particular the difficulties under which the Indians are fighting by reason of their ignorance of the French, German, and English languages. They have been repeatedly subjected to tricks on the part of the Germans.

"The Germans are full of resources," says the account, "and it is one of their favorite plans to lure the allied troops on to attack them by various devices, of which an indicated intention of surrendering is the most common. If this deception is successful, a skillfully concealed machine guns turns a murderous fire upon those who have advanced either to attack or to accept surrender.

"The audacity of the enemy cannot better be illustrated than by a well-authenticated statement of what took place last night in a trench held by a Gurkha regiment. A figure, silhouetted by the moonlight and wearing a complete Gurkha uniform, approached the end of the trench and delivered the message.

"'The Gurkhas are to move further up the trench; another Gurkha contingent is advancing in support.'

"Puzzled by this announcement, the officer in command replied, 'Who are you? Where do you come from?' to which the only answer was, 'You are to move up and make room for other Gurkhas.'

"The English was good, but something excited the officer's suspicions.

"'Answer, and answer quickly,' he said; 'if you are a Gurkha, by what boat did you cross?'

"This question, under the circumstances, was no easy one to answer, and the German (for such he was) turned and fled, but he had not gone five yards before he fell, riddled with bullets.

"If the officer had been deceived the trench, of course, would have swarmed with Germans almost before the Gurkhas had made room for them.

"It can readily be imagined that under such conditions the Indian troops engage the enemy in circumstances of special difficulty. They are in a strange country, their training and instincts have accustomed them to quite different conditions. It is easy to distinguish German and French soldiers in the daytime, but it is not easy in the dark.

"The Gurkhas understand no language but their own, and very few others understand that. Their stragglers are exposed to difficulties in the way of rejoining their units, which it is almost impossible to exaggerate. Nor must it be forgotten that the intentions which the German Emperor expressed with reference to the whole force under the command of Field Marshal Sir John French embraced to an equal degree the army corps composed of our Indian fellow-subjects.

"Letters found upon wounded men and prisoners make it clear that the German military authorities have spe-have caused some of the most severe losses of the war, have been fought over wet and muddy ground, which gives no opportunity for intrenching.

The Germans, in this fighting in Flanders, have made use of regiments composed of volunteers recruited from the best classes of Berlin society. Their officers are men of high standing.

Ninety-two trains of German wounded, each carrying 300 men, passed through Brussels Sunday, bound for Germany.

LONDON, Nov. 10.—The movement of retreat of the German Army continues, according to a telegram received by the Exchange Telegraph Company from its Rotterdam correspondent.

Thirty-five thousand men and 100 guns, it is said, have left Thielt in the direction of Ghent, and forty-eight wagon loads of munitions have left Bruges for the same destination.

A Central News dispatch from Amsterdam says:

"Trainload after trainload of German artillery is leaving the Lys Valley in the direction of Ghent.

"The German Army Headquarters has been transferred to Alost."

ALSATIAN PREDICTS A GERMAN COLLAPSE

Deserting, After Forcible Enlistment, He Says Kaiser's Soldiers Don't Know the Truth.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov. 10.—The Liberté publishes an interview with an Alsatian who, with twenty-five comrades, has just reached Paris after deserting from the German Army in Flanders. They formed part of a force of 135 Alsatians who were forcibly incorporated in a German infantry regiment at the time of the mobilization. The twenty-six survivors reached the allied lines last week.

The man who was interviewed said:

"At the outset of the war I was in Berlin on business. I tried to reach the frontier, but was seized in Cologne and assigned to a regiment, where my unfortunate compatriots were already. The Germans received us roughly, calling us 'French dogs.'

"The officers beat us and swore that we would be put in front in battle. They gave us no proper food for nine days. On the tenth we received some meagre soup and were told we would soon be killed.

"This was true, for when the regiment attacked the Belgians at Huy only forty-seven Alsatians survived, of whom the Captain shot two, alleging that they gave a signal to the enemy. That evening the officer came to torture us, saying: 'You will be in front in this war until only one is left. Him I shall be delighted to shoot myself.'

"During the subsequent weeks we suffered terribly. The Germans talked gloating about the allied disasters and the capture of Paris. Finally, while near Brussels, we learned of the Allies' victory on the Marne, which gave new courage. Those remaining decided to desert, and we managed to reach the French lines."

When asked about the German soldier the Alsatian replied:

"They are machines, perfectly organized, who obey blindly without seeking to understand. All accept what the officers tell them without any suspicion.

"Until last week none doubted that Germany was victorious and the Allies were crumbling, and the war nearing a close. But the Yser slaughter was impossible to conceal, and caused profound discouragement and many desertions. Soon the whole western army will learn the truth. I foretell an utter collapse of the German morale, followed by fatal disorganization and disaster."

STILL BOMBARDING RHEIMS.

Germans Throw 250 Shells Into the City in One Day.

PARIS, Nov 10.—The City of Rheims still suffers considerably every day from bombardment by the Germans. Last Friday 250 shells fell into the city, although no French troops are stationed there.

The ancient cathedral, into which entry is strictly forbidden, seems, observers say, to be a point of thee German gunners' aim. All the buildings around the edifice have suffered greatly, while the cathedral itself presents a shocking spectacle.

No French military station is anywhere near, and there is no artillery within miles of the city. The Military Governor has informed the cathedral authorities that any one ascending to the towers for any purpose will be shot immediately, as he does not desire to give the Germans any excuse for training their guns on the building.

On the old forts around Rheims, now in French hands, nobody can show himself without drawing an immediate gun fire from the Germans. German aeroplanes fly about constantly, and aerial duels are a daily occurrence. German airmen make frequent trips over Rheims, where thy drop bombs in the chief commercial section of the city, thereby adding considerably to the number of casualties among the civil population, which are understood to have lost about 700 of their number in killed from the effects of the German bombardment. Some lives were lost by persons being suffocated as the result of the subsidence of houses when struck by shells.

Every evening about 5 o'clock the shelling of the city begins, and the people of the poorer quarters spend the latter part of the day in the open fields on the side of the city away from the German positions. At other times of the day the people seem to go about their business as if nothing extraordinary was occurring.

BERLIN, Nov. 10.—Reports received from The Hague say that the Vicar General of Rheims admits that the French used the towers of the Rheims Cathedral for military purposes.

SEES GAIN TOWARD VERDUN.

German Observer Tells Importance of Capture of Vienne-le-Chateau.

BERLIN, Nov. 10, (via The Hague and London.)—The military critic of the Lokal Anzeiger expresses the opinion that the capture of Vienne-le-Château in the Argonne, reported yesterday, is an important factor in the German attempt to isolate Verdun from the west. The place lies about twenty-two miles east of Verdun on a pronounced rocky ridge, connecting Verdun with the French forces on the Aisne.

The critic, however, warns against regarding the capture of Vienne-le-Château as a breach in the French lines, for the reason that several other points on the same ridge also must be taken in such a movement.

The steep western bank of the River Meuse, opposite St. Mihiel, also must be cleared of French troops, and German progress in this wooded and hilly country can be won only by troops willing to purchase every foot of ground with their blood.

Furious Combat Around City Has Caused Terrible Destruction.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov. 10. (Dispatch to The London Chronicle.)—A citizen of Lille who left the city Thursday and got through to the coast with great difficulty, says that the city was captured by British troops on Oct. 20, but could not be held.

The Germans re-entered it on Oct. 23, and since then it has been repeatedly lost and recaptured.

In the course of successive bombardments there has been great destruction. One [illegible] situated be-

MINES KILL A THOUSAND.

Soldier's Story of a Colonel's Trap That Wiped Out the Foe.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov. 10.—The Eclair prints a letter from a French soldier recently engaged in the Argonne fighting, which, as the writer says, forms an interesting pendant for the bald words of the official communiqué telling of German attacks being repulsed. He describes the French retirement before a superior force from a village commanding an affluent of the Meuse, intersecting that part of the Argonne where a wide road followed that valley.

"We soldiers," he says, "couldn't understand why the Colonel abandoned the village, which was evidently of strategic importance, without a struggle, but we obeyed orders and retired sullenly.

"After traversing a quarter of a mile, there was a sudden terrific explosion that staggered the ranks. Simultaneously the officer, smiling, gave the order to retrace our steps.

"We re-entered the village, which was a scene of frightful desolation. The houses were utterly destroyed, and everywhere there were huge gaping holes in the ground, which was strewn with a thousand corpses. A dense pall of powder smoke hung over everything.

"A peasant who witnessed the catastrophe gave the details. Shortly after our departure two brigades of Bavarian and Saxon infantry occupied the village. Some were entering houses and others were resting.

"Then came the screaming noise of a shell which exploded near a church. An explosion like an earthquake followed, almost annihilating the enemy. Only a few stunned survivors were left on the outskirts.

"The Colonel had mined the village before retiring. The German assault was definitely repelled at this point."

ANCONA, Italy, Nov. 10.—A floating mine exploded today so near in shore in the vicinity of Fossacesia that it seriously damaged the flag station of the railway line running along the sea front. There were no casualties.

It is understood that the Italian Government has addressed representations to Austria concerning mines in the Adriatic.

DANGER OF A PESTILENCE.

Inability to Bury War Victims Adds a New Peril.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Wednesday, Nov. 11.—A Daily Mail correspondent in Northern France, describing the battle on the line between Arras and Lille, says:

"There have been bayonet duels on roofs and in cellars, and as the soldiers have been driven from one house they have retired to the next and again to the next. After such a terrible succession of duels it has often been found necessary by one side or other to destroy the houses, especially the coal miners' houses, with shell fire, which has buried the dead with the bricks.

"This combination of actions has absolutely prevented any full burial or any adequate sanitation. Much of the populous neighborhood north of Arras is quite unapproachable and the terror of pestilence is added to the other terrors of war.

"Sanitary reasons alone make a quick advance impossible. In some districts the regimental doctors forbid what the officers may desire."

GERMANS SEARCH DUTCH SHIP.

LONDON, Nov. 10.—An Amsterdam dispatch to Reuter's Telegram Company says:

"A telegram from Flushing states that the Dutch steamer Administrateur de Bats, which left Antwerp with forty-five passengers, was stopped by German officials off Fort Marie, near the Dutch frontier. The ship was thoroughly searched and all men between the ages of 18 and 30 years were arrested, although they had authentic passports."

EARL ANNESLEY MISSING.

Is Army Aviator and Left England by Aeroplane Last Friday.

LONDON, Nov. 10.—Earl Annesley, who left England last Friday by aeroplane, has not since been heard from, and it is feared that he has been killed.

According to a statement by the Admiralty Earl Annesley accompanied Lieut. Beever in the flight. The statement says that Lieut. Beever's loss as a skilled airman would be keenly felt.

The Earl was a member of the Royal Flying Corps, and has performed valuable services for the Allies in the war, notably during the stege of Antwerp.

Francis Annesley, the sixth Earl of Annesley, is a comparatively young man, having been born in 1884. He married, in 1909, Evelyn Hester Munday. The ancestral homes of the Annesleys are at Castlewellan and Donald Lodge, in the County of Down, Ireland. As the Earl has no children, a cousin, Walter Beresford Annesley, will succeed to the Earldom in case the death of the Earl is verified.

German Airman Thought He Had Discovered a French Mortar.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov. 10.—The Geneva correspondent of the Temps says that the Swiss were greatly perplexed over a furious German cannonade near the frontier, where French troops were entirely absent. A local newspaper explained the mystery.

A German airman saw a huge barrel of liquid manure which a farmer had left upturned in a field, and supposed it to be a French mortar. Thereupon a bombardment was begun, but was singularly ineffective, the barrel being unhurt, though 150 shells were fired from noon till midnight.

CANNON FIRING HEARD OFF CORONEL, CHILE

It Was Near This Port that a German Squadron Defeated the British, Nov. 1.

LIMA, Peru, Nov. 10.—Heavy cannonading was heard at sea yesterday off the Chilean seaport of Coronel, according to reports received here from Chile.

Coronel is 300 miles south of Valparaiso. It was off Coronel that the German squadron under Admiral Count von Spee defeated the British squadron commanded by Rear Admiral Sir Christopher Cradock on Nov. 1.

SPY EXECUTED IN TOWER OF LONDON

fused to reveal, to select a route to New York. He was to remain in England until the first naval engagement between Germany and England, and then give information concerning the actual losses of the British fleet. He was then to proceed to this city. Lody insisted that, while he had received orders to keep track of the movements of the British fleet, he was not told to do any spying. He admitted to the court that his instructions gave him uneasiness and that he had asked for an American passport because he thought that he had lived long enough in America to enable him to pass as an American and not to excite suspicion.

On the final day of the trial, which was attended by many leaders of London society as well as by prominent jurists, politicians, and military and naval men, the Prosecutor, in summing up, said that Lody had admitted being an alien enemy posing as a civilian and at times as an American. During this time he was sending important information to Germany. He described Lody as one "upon whom the international law against spies should be imposed.

Lody's counsel admitted that he was a German Lieutenant, and said he had taken the risks of his profession because he thought it was his highest duty to do so. He asked for a sentence less than that of death, but said that if the full penalty were exacted, Lody would face it like a man.

It was stated in New York a few days ago that Lody had been an officer on one of the Hamburg-American Line ships before coming to work for a tourist agency here. He made two tours around the world for the agency, and during that time learned all the details of the business. Afterward he went back to work for the Hamburg-American Line, and, when the line sent the steamer Cleveland around the world on its own tours, Lody became booking agent for the tours.

"He spied on us for a year," said one of the officers of the tourist agency. "We were very glad to get rid of him."

The last person to be executed at Tower Hill, outside the Tower of London, and also the last to be beheaded in England, was Lord Lovat, who was executed for high treason on April 9, 1747. He was a Jacobite leader and a man of very strange personality. Notoriously of bad character, he would seem to have persuaded himself that his dying "for the good old cause" atoned in a measure for his past sins, and that to have sacrificed himself for the Stuarts would bring him spiritual benefit. It is recorded that he faced his death with levity, and Horace Walpole complained that "The old creature's behavior has been foolish and at last indecent."

ACCUSE CONSUL OF TREASON.

Naturalized British Subject Gave Aid to German Reservists.

LONDON, Nov. 10.—The Grand Jury of the Durham Assizes has returned a true bill against Nicholas Ahlers, the German Consul in Sunderland Borough, on a charge of high treason.

According to the indictment Mr. Ahlers was naturalized in 1905. After the declaration of war he engaged in helping German reservists leave England for Germany.

KING PRAISES TROOPS IN MESSAGE TO FRENCH

British Commander Replies That the Army Has an "Unalterable Determination" to Win.

LONDON, Nov. 10.—King George has sent the following communication to Sir John French, commander of the British expeditionary force on the Continent:

"The splendid pluck, spirit, and endurance shown by my troops in the desperate fighting, which has continued so many days against vastly superior forces, fills me with admiration. I am confident of the final result of their noble efforts under your able command."

Gen. French replied thanking his Majesty for the message, which he said had been received with gratitude and pride by the army.

He assured the King "of our unalterable determination to uphold the highest traditions of your Majesty's army and carry the campaign through to a victorious conclusion."

PARIS THEATRES MAY REOPEN.

Meeting Held by Amusement Associations to Consider Matter.

PARIS, Nov. 10.—A large meeting, attended by the representatives of all the theatrical associations and amusement organizations of Paris, and also of the provinces, held today with the view of procuring the reopening of the theatres and other places of amusement, also discussed measures to relieve the distress among actors and employes of the theatres.

The meeting drafted the principle of a manifesto, which will be further considered on Friday before its submission to the authorities.

Nothing in the nature of a theatre or music hall in Paris is now open with the exception of one. That is a concert hall devoted to a patriotic programme. Many moving picture shows still remain open.

He has been an ornament to the sea profession and an honor to the brotherhood of the sea, and it is greatly to be hoped that he survives to tell the tale."

The Daily Telegraph says:

"It is almost in our heart to regret that the Emden has been captured and destroyed. We certainly hope that Commander Karl von Muller, her commander, has not been killed, for, as the phrase goes, he has shown himself an officer and a gentleman. He has been enterprising, cool, and daring in making war on our shipping, and has revealed a nice sense of humor. He has, moreover, shown every possible consideration to the crews of his prizes. So far as is known, he destroyed over 74,000 tons of shipping without the loss of a single life. There is not a survivor who does not speak well of this young German, the officers under him, and the crew obedient to his orders. The war on the sea will lose something of its piquancy, its humor, and its interest now that the Emden has gone, but she had to go because she was so expensive."

Among the seventeen officers who served under Capt. Karl von Muller aboard the Emden was Lieut. Prince Francis Joseph of Hohenzollern, a member of the elder but non-regnant branch of the German Emperor's family. He is the second son of the reigning Prince William of Hohenzollern, and is 23 years old. It is not known whether he was still on board the vessel at the time of her destruction.

The Times says: "We rejoice that the cruiser Emden has been destroyed at last, but we salute Capt. von Müller as a brave and chivalrous foe. We trust his life has been saved, for if he came to London he would receive a generous welcome.

"Our maritime race knows how to admire a daring and resourceful seaman, and there are few episodes of modern naval history more remarkable than the meteoric career of the little Emden."

The Morning Post says: "The conduct of Capt. von Müller, who seems to have been brave without brutality, is something to set against the inhuman practices of the German army."

HOW SYDNEY CAUGHT EMDEN.

German Surprised at Cocos Islands and Driven Ashore Ablaze.

LONDON, Nov. 10.—In announcing the destruction of the Emden the Admiralty said:

"A large combined operation by fast cruisers against the German cruiser Emden has been for some time in progress. In this search, which has covered an immense area, the British cruisers have been aided by French, Russian, and Japanese vessels, working in harmony. The Australian warships Melbourne and Sydney also were included in these movements.

"Yesterday morning news was received that the Emden, which had been completely lost to sight after her action with the Russian cruiser Jemtchug, had arrived at Keeling, or Cocos, Islands and landed an armed party to destroy the wireless station. Here she was caught and forced to fight by the Australian cruiser Sydney, Capt. John Glossop.

"A sharp action took place, in which the Sydney suffered the loss of three men killed and fifteen wounded. The Emden was driven ashore and burned. Her losses in personnel are reported as very heavy. All possible assistance is now being given to the survivors by the various ships which have been dispatched to the scene.

"With the exception of the German squadron now off the coast of Chile, the whole of the Pacific and Indian Oceans is now clear of the enemy's warships.

"The First Lord of the Admiralty, Winston Spencer Churchill, has sent the following message to the Sydney and to the Navy Aug. 4. Then the Emden had disappeared. The next day, near Table Island, in the Indian Ocean, she captured, robbed of her coal, and then sank the City of Winchester, a steamer of 4,231 tonnage.

On Sept. 10 the Emden suddenly appeared in the Bay of Bengal, 8 x vessels ranging in size from 3,393 to 7,615 tons were taken and sunk, their collective value amounting to $4,500,000 with the cargo on board them. A seventh ship, the Kabinga, was also overhauled and seized. The crews of the other vessels were placed on board her, and she was released.

The prisoners later reported that the Germans had treated them very well, but that the Emden was in a very dirty condition. Those who had been taken on board reported that her officers, and even the crew, seemed to be perfectly well informed as to the movements of the Ganges pilots and of British merchantmen, and knew that the lightships on the Indian coast were not working.

As the Kabinga steamed away the Emden was seen to be coaling from the Hamburg-American liner Markomannia, which was accompanying her, and from the Greek ship Pontoporos. Later she stopped the little Italian steamer Loredano, whose Captain then made all speed for Calcutta, and thus prevented the loss of the large liner City of Rangoon and two transports with Indian troops on board. For this service the Government of Bengal presented to the Italian Captain a gold watch and chain, and his crew received presents of money

A week later the Emden made another sudden appearance. This was on the night of Sept. 22, off Madras. Here she fired a few shells into the shipping in the harbor, killing three men on board of the vessels, and then bombarded the oil tanks, two of which she set on fire. This exploit closed the port of Calcutta for a week, where there were twenty-three vessels ready to sail.

On Sept. 30, the Emden made another series of captures. Four vessels she sunk. The fifth, the collier Buresk, she captured and used as a ship for the prisoners. These were smaller vessels than those of Sept. 10, but the loss inflicted amounted to $535,000.

Up to this point only two British cruisers had been sent in pursuit of the Emden. They were the fastest on the China station, the Yarmouth, of 26 knots, and the Dartmouth, of 25.9. At this time it was reported that the Emden was not making more than 20 or 22.

On or about Oct. 15 the Yarmouth caught sight of the Emden and then lost her. She captured two of the Emden's colliers, the Markomannia and the Pontoporus, off the coast of Sumatra. While the Yarmouth continued her search, the French liner Paul Lecat had a narrow escape. She received a wireless signal instructing her to change her course and steam in a particular direction to avoid the Emden. There was an error in the signal which led the French Captain to suspect its authenticity, and he paid no attention to it, thereby avoiding the trap which the Emden had set.

Late in October the Emden left the Indian Ocean and suddenly appeared at Penang, on Malacca Straits. It was here that she performed her most daring feat. She rigged up a fourth smokestack and the Japanese flag. Thus disguised, she steamed slowly into the harbor, passing unchallenged under the guns of the British fort, and fired torpedoes into the Russian cruiser Jemtchug and a French destroyer, sinking them. Then she took to her heels and escaped unscathed through the straits.

Last week a British cruiser which had pursued her from Penang repeated the feat of the Yarmouth of Oct. 15. The enemy succeeded in capturing one of the Emden's steamships and sinking another. Then came her end on the Cocos Islands.

The Emden was a sister ship of the cruiser Dresden which took part in the battle off the coast of Chile last Sunday night when the British Squadron, under command of Rear Admiral Sir Christopher Cradock was defeated.

The Emden had a complement of 361 men. Her armament consisted of ten 4.1-inch guns, eight 5-pounders, and four machine guns. She also had two submerged 17.7-inch torpedo tubes, and when clean could make 24.5 knots an hour. Her displacement was 3,600 tons, her length 387 feet, and her beam 43 1-8 feet. She was laid down at Dantzig in 1908 and completed in May, 1908.

The Australian cruiser Sydney is the first product of the Naval Agreement act in 1903, which gave birth to Australia's Navy. The Sydney carries a main battery of eight 6-inch guns against the Emden's ten 4.1, thus giving her a heavy advantage over the German ship. While the speed of the vessels was theoretically equal the bottom of the Emden was evidently foul through her three months of constant cruising in tropical waters.

The Sydney was launched in 1912 and was completed the next year. Her displacement is 5,400 tons, her length 430 feet, and her beam 49½ feet. Her secondary battery consists of four three-pounders and she has four machine guns, and like the Emden two torpedo tubes. She is supposed to carry 780 men.

The principal vessels captured or destroyed by the Emden as officially reported are as follows:

Indus, 3,393 tons, Sept. 10 to 14, sunk.
Lovat, 6,102 tons, Sept. 10 to 14, sunk.
Killin, 3,544 tons, Sept. 10 to 14, sunk.
Diplomat, 7,615 tons, Sept. 10 to 14, sunk
Trabbock, 4,014 tons, Sept. 10 to 14, sunk.
Kabinga, 4,657 tons, Sept. 10 to 14, released.
Clan Matheson, 4,775 tons, Sept. 14, sunk.
King Lud, 1,650 tons, Sept. 30, sunk.
Foyle, 4,147 tons, Sept. 30, sunk.
Riberia, 4,147 tons, Sept. 30, sunk.
Tumerick, 3,314 tons, Sept. 30, sunk.
Buresk, 4,50 tons, Sept. 30, captured.
Troilus, 7,562 tons, Oct. 20, sunk.
Benmohr, 4,808 tons, Oct. 20, sunk.
Chilkana, 5,146 tons, Oct. 20, sunk.
Ponrabbel, 473 tons, Oct. 20, sunk.
Exford, 4,542 tons, Oct. 20, captured.
St. Egbert, 5,393 tons, Oct. 20, captured.
Kamagasaki Maru, (Japanese freighter,) sunk.
Jemtchug, (Russian cruiser,) Oct. 29, sunk.
Mousquet, (French torpedo boat,) Oct. 29, sunk.

COLLIERS BLOCK KOENIGSBERG.

British Feat Like That Attempted by Hobson with the Merrimac.

LONDON, Nov. 10.—Here is the Admiralty announcement of the bottling up of the German cruiser Koenigsberg on the east coast of Africa:

"After the whereabouts of the Koenigsberg had been indicated by the attack on the Pegasus on the 19th of September, a concentration of fast cruisers was arranged by the Admiralty in East African waters and a thorough and prolonged search by these vessels in combination was made.

"This search resulted Oct. 30 in the Koenigsberg being discovered by H. M. S. Chatham, Capt. Sidney R. Drury-Lowe, hiding in shoal water about six miles up the Rufiji River, opposite Mafia Island, German East Africa. Owing to a greater draught, the Chatham could not reach the Koenigsberg, which probably is aground except at high water.

"Part of the crew of the Koenigsberg has been landed and is intrenched on the banks of the river. Both these intrenchments and the Koenigsberg herself have been bombarded by the Chatham, but owing to the dense palm groves amid which the ship lies, it is not possible to estimate the damage done.

"Pending operations for her capture or destruction, effective steps have been taken to block the Koenigsberg by sinking colliers in the only navigable channel to the river, and she is now imprisoned and unable to do any further harm. The fast vessels which have been searching for her are thus released for other service."

The Königsberg preyed upon British shipping since the beginning of the war, but her successes in no way approached those of the Emden. She disabled the British cruiser Pegasus in Zanzibar Harbor on Sept. 20. The Pegasus was caught at a disadvantage as she was undergoing repairs. Twenty-five of her crew were killed and eighty wounded.

The Königsberg is a protected cruiser and was laid down in 1905. She is of 3,448 tons, 354 feet long, and has a speed of 23½ knots. Her main battery consists of ten 4.1-inch guns.

Mafia Island on the east coast of Africa, belongs to Zanzibar, but was assigned to German influence some years ago.

EMDEN'S MONTHS OF HAVOC.

Said to Have Sunk 42 Ships—Her Daring Penang Exploit.

The cruiser Emden has been termed "the German Alabama." The Confederate cruiser Alabama in two years destroyed sixty-five vessels, valued, with their cargoes, at $4,000,000. The Emden's complete list of victims is not known at present. The highest estimate is forty-two, mostly English; the names of twenty-three vessels and the circumstances of their capture are at hand. The value of these vessels has been placed at $4,000,000; their cargoes as high as $16,000,000.

The coast towns of India have been terror-stricken. In Calcutta toward the end of October The Times of India reported that the city had suffered a fall of over $15,000,000 in a single month for raw and manufactured jute alone; that exports in rice had fallen off $2,250,000, and wheat over $2,500,000. The Times of India of Oct. 2 printed a list of small vessels said to have been destroyed by the dreaded cruiser, none of which have been recorded in London. At Colombo, in Ceylon, and even at Calcutta, the ports have been closed for longer or shorter periods.

On Aug. 1 the Emden was coaling off Rangoon. England declared war on Germany Aug. 4. Then the Emden had disappeared. The next day, near Table Island, in the Indian Ocean, she captured, robbed of her coal, and then sank the City of Winchester, a steamer of 4,231 tonnage.

WAR RISK RATES DROP.

Destruction of Emden Brings Relief to Marine Underwriters.

News of the destruction of the commerce-destroying Emden brought relief to marine underwriters of this city who have been wont to take risks on vessels plying in the South Pacific and Indian Oceans. The war risk on hull and cargo in traffic through these waters fluctuated considerably yesterday, but the net result for the day was a drop of about 2 per cent., from 5½ to 3½ per cent. The higher rate had been in force for several weeks, ever since the Emden set out in earnest upon her work of sinking vessels of the allied nations.

The insurance men said there probably would have been a further decline if assurance could have been received from the Far East that a number of merchantmen due to arrive in Calcutta and Bombay shortly were safe. The underwriters did not know whether they had escaped the Emden before she ran afoul of the Sydney, and in the absence of information were chary of lowering rates until they could learn the entire history of the Emden's activities. It was said that if the underwriters were not called upon to bear any further losses in the Indian seas the war risk rate would quickly fall substantially.

On South American traffic, particularly that of the West coast, insurance rates continue high. The recent battle off the coast of Chile, which showed the power of the German Pacific fleet, caused the war risk rate quoted by some companies to rise abruptly from 6 and 7 to 10 per cent. The present rate is from 5 to 10 per cent, depending on the nationality and speed of the vessel and the nature of the cargo.

Germans Reported to be Hurrying Troops and Guns from East Prussia.

BIG FRENCH GUNS FOR SIEGE

New Eight-Inch Cannon to be Used by Czar's Artillerymen in Bombardment of Przemysl.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 10, (Dispatch to The London Daily News.)—Russian light columns which have crossed and dislocated the outer line of the German strategic railways running around northern and central Poland report feverish activity. They have been able to arrest the German movements on the railways nearest the frontier, but further back the German lines are crowded day and night by trains bringing troops and equipment, especially artillery, from East Prussia to positions behind Thorn and Posen.

The excitement among the German railway staff has thrown the civilian population into panic. Many thousands of German families have hastily packed their portable belongings and fled behind Posen fortress, fearing the Russian invaders may avenge the German cruelties in Poland. Others abandoning their homes are making for Breslau and Dresden.

It is evident that the German General Staff feel again outgeneraled. Their experts were convinced that when the Russians had repulsed the movement on Warsaw and the Vistula and had turned the Germans back as far as the frontier, the real campaign of invasion would be conducted through East Prussia. They considered it absolutely impossible for the Russians to bring a great combined army, with impedimenta for a Winter campaign, across the salient of Poland in November.

This has been done already, hence the Germans are now concentrating at high pressure all their available forces from the fortress garrisons and reserves in Silesia, Saxony, and Prussia.

Scene of Operations on the Russian Frontier

In East Prussia the Germans, according to Petrograd official announcements, have been driven back from the region of Lyck (1) toward the Masuran lakes. East of Neidenburg (2) Russian cavalry blew up some railroad bridges. In Poland, the Russians pursuing the right or Austrian wing of the main German-Austrian army, which is retreating to Cracow, have reached Mischow, (3) formerly the base of the German right wing. In Galicia, the Russians advancing on Cracow from the direction of Jaroslaw, have occupied Miechew (4) and Dynow. The forces operating further south have seized Lisko (5).

DRIVE GERMANS FROM LYCK.

Russians Marching on Fortress of Cracow Occupy Miechow.

PARIS, Nov. 10.—A dispatch to the Havas News Agency from Petrograd says that the following Russian official statement was issued today:

In Eastern Prussia the right wing of the enemy, who has been stubbornly resisting in the region of Lyck, has been driven back toward the Masurian Lakes.

East of Neidenburg, near the Muschaken railroad station, a Russian cavalry force defeated a German detachment which was protecting the railroad. The Russians captured a train and blew up the railway bridges.

On Nov. 8 Russian cavalry, meeting a cavalry division of the enemy, forced it to retire toward Kalisz.

On the route leading to Cracow we have attained Miechow.

In Galicia our troops have traversed the River Wisloka. They now occupy Rzeszow, Dynow, and Lisko.

Miechow, which the official report shows has been reached by the Russian troops pursuing through Poland the right, or Austrian, wing of the main German-Austrian army, was formerly the base of this wing.

The Austrian evacuation of the positions to the southeast of Lemberg, in South Galicia, and in Bukowina is reported to be continuing. There are also indications that the entire Austrian line from Stryi to Czernowitz, capital of Bukowina, is being gradually abandoned.

LONDON Nov 10.—A Central News dispatch from Vienna says that preparations are being rushed for the second siege of Przemysl. It is reported that the Russians are equipped with new eight-inch French guns.

RUSSIA CAN'T INVADE, GERMANS ARE ASSURED

Army Amply Able to Prevent Advance in Force Across the Frontier—Victory in Poland.

BERLIN, Nov. 10.—That there is no fear of a Russian invasion of German territory in force is the reassuring statement made to Berlin today by Major Morah in the Tageblatt. The forces patrolling the boundary are sufficient to prevent any such movement. Russians may penetrate the border, but the German Army in the east is stronger than ever, and can stop any advance.

The operations in Poland the Major explains, have not yet reached a point where the leaders are justified in setting forth the situation. At the proper time the people will learn what really is happening.

The following was contained in an official communication issued by German Army Headquarters today:

In Russian Poland, near Konin, (thirty-three miles northeast of Kalisz,) our cavalry dispersed a Russian battalion, taking about 500 prisoners and eight machine guns.

Official denial is made of the foreign reports that Gen. von Hindenburg, the German commander on the Russian front, and a 42-centimeter gun have been captured.

Particulars of the Russian repulse on the frontier of East Prussia, in which the invaders left 4,000 prisoners in German hands, have been reported to Berline from Gumbinnen under date of Nov. 8.

Simultaneously with their operations against the main German army under Gen. von Hindenburg on the line of the River Warthe, the Russians attempted to break into East Prussia by the old route south of Wirballen, but they were met by Gen. von Morgen's army, and after very heavy fighting were driven back across the frontier.

No intimations regarding the strength of the forces engaged have been published. The fighting occurred on the old battleground where the Germans met the Russians in the early days of the war and which since has been the scene of repeated engagements. The tides of invasion and counter-attack swept back and forth across the frontier.

Nothing new has been heard here of the Russian operations against the German positions on the River Warthe since the Russian cavalry division which followed the Germans in their retirement from Warsaw found that the Germans were making a stand behind this river.

Neither have reports of new developments been received concerning the line further south on the Polish frontier. An Austrian bulletin announces definitely that there has been no fighting on their part of the battle front. According to the opinion of Berlin observers, however, this front probably will be the scene of very important engagements during the next fortnight. The Germans are making ready to defend their eastern frontier vigorously. The western arena of hostilities, which has been getting more than its fair share of newspaper attention, must now yield equal or greater rank to the struggle in Poland and Galicia.

LONDON, Nov. 10.—The following dispatch from Berlin was received this evening by the Marconi Wireless Telegraph Company:

"It is officially reported from Vienna that the Russians have evacuated the greater portion of Bukowina and retired in the direction of the Dniester River, where they have been pursued by the Austrian troops, who have taken many prisoners.

SWEEPING ON WITH BAYONETS

Russian Infantry Replaces Artillery —Gen. von Liebert Captured.

LONDON, Wednesday, Nov. 11.—A Petrograd dispatch to The Daily Telegraph says that at every point the lack of artillery by the Russians is compensated for by the numbers of infantry. All along the Russian front bayonet tactics have been as common as artillery duels on the German-French battle line.

"Having reached the German frontier," says the dispatch, "the Russians have a tremendous task before them because the Germans on their own territory will fight according to their own theories with absolutely perfect lines of communication, on which the army will move automatically.

"The imperfect transportation conditions of the Russians will improve on the arrival of Winter, which in Poland is about a month hence. This will harden the roads. During this month of waiting Russia will rush forward her reserve forces to the points of contact.

"That the Germans have abandoned hope of coming back to Poland is shown by their destruction of the bridges and their having even ploughed up the main roads on their retirement. During four days, from Thursday to Sunday, on the Thorn-Cracow front the Russians kept up a hot pursuit of the retreating Austro-German Army, which hastily flung strong rear guards on to the crossings of the Rivers Warthe, Pilica, and Nida with the object of checking the Russian advance and affording the main body an opportunity to pull itself together. In general the artillery played the chief part in these rear-guard actions.

"On Sunday the Russians, keeping up the pursuit let their cavalry loose on the flanks of the defeated army with the object of completing the enemy's disorganization.

"Gen. von Liebert, former commandant of Lodz, who was taken prisoner, is a well-known figure in German public life. He was formerly Governor of German East Africa and later sat in the Reichstag. As an Imperialist he founded the anti-Socialist Society and was a member of the executive of the Pan-German Federation."

RANSOM WAS IN VAIN.

Germans Destroyed Edifices Poles Paid to Save, Prof. Pares Says.

LONDON, Wednesday, Nov. 11.—The Official Press Bureau tonight made public a communication dated Nov. 8, received from Prof. Bernard Pares, the British Government's representative with the Russian army, narrating the incidents of the Russian campaign.

He says that at Szidlewice, (Siedlce, Russian Poland?) the German commander threatened as the Russians approached to blow up the Florentine town hall and the 600-year-old Gothic church, but that the inhabitants of the town offered to ransom them by a contribution of $25,000. This, according to Prof. Pares, was accepted, but twenty minutes later the town hall was blown up and the church soon followed it.

"The three weeks of fighting following the German repulse at Warsaw," says Prof. Pares, "was of the characteristic Rusian style. The bayonet attacks were kept up for hours. The small units eagerly attacked larger hostile ones.

"In general the Russians outflanked the enemy, but in one case they broke through his centre.

"I am told on good authority that at Kalisz, Russian Poland, when a German soldier defaced a portrait of the Russian Emperor, the Polish officials struck him in the face. The German for two days was bound to a telegraph post for two days and then taken down and shot."

Prof. Pares adds:

"The theatre of the recent operations is of crucial importance. Here Austria and Germany join hands and serious reverses would compel them either to retreat on divergent lines or to expose one or the other of their capitals. Either event would have political consequences of the highest military significance."

THE WAR SITUATION.

(An Associate Editor of The Army and Navy Journal.)

Lord Kitchener's statement that Great Britain has a million and a quarter soldiers in training in the British Isles shows one of the weighty reasons for the defensive attitude adopted by the Allies in France. Neither soldiers nor guns can be made in a month. From three to six months are needed to get the recruit into shape, while an even longer time is required to manufacture guns and ordnance stores that must be supplied in such large quantities.

Great Britain has now sent to France practically all of her regular army from all over the world, except the regiments in Asia and Egypt. Her territorial militia are also in active service, either in France or in the many garrisoned posts that guard the interests of the British Empire in all parts of the world.

The regiments, organized under the calls for volunteers in August and the contingents from the various colonies, must be allowed still further time to complete the training necessary for efficient work at the front. Consequently the Allies are well content to hold the Germans on their present line in France until the time when half a million British and an equal number of French reinforcements can be sent to the front.

This accession of strength might prove a deciding factor in the Allies' plan of operations. While the German front is held by the present strength, the new forces would be available to sweep down upon the German flanks, and thus manoeuvre them out of the positions from which two months of frontal attacks have been unable to dislodge them.

The Russian occupation of Goldapp, in East Prussia, shows that they are avoiding the lake region, in which their army was trapped by Gen. von Hindenburg in September. Their advance in the latter district has already been checked, according to last night's statement from Berlin.

The Russian advance to Goldapp, however, indicates an intention to push through north of the lakes, so as to strike at the supply lines that lead from Koenigsberg to the German Army. By this move they have a chance to force the German retreat without the risk of campaigning in the lake region around Lotzen and Lyck. At the same time the Russians are pushing northward from Warsaw an army that has crossed the German border near Soldau, due south of Koenigsberg.

Thus at all points in East Prussia the fighting is transferred to points west of the German border. In this fighting the Germans are familiar with the country and have the advantage of their excellent railway service. It seems probable that they will be able for a time to hold back the Russian armies that are now attempting to regain the East Prussian territory from which they were driven during the fighting in September.

Other secondary results of the Russian victory in Poland are shown in the retreat of the Germans from Wloclawsk, on the Vistula, to Nieschawa, ten miles from the Posen border. A like retreat has taken place along the banks of the Warthe, where the German force at Konin has fallen back fifteen miles to Slupzy, on the border, due east of Posen.

No trustworthy news has been given out concerning the fighting between Kalisz and Czenstochowa since the Germans first made a stand along this line, though an unconfirmed rumor says that they have been forced to fall back. The carefully prepared field works that had been constructed along this line made it one that could be captured by frontal attack only at the expense of great loss of life. For this reason the Russians pushed forward a strong army of cavalry that advanced via Kola and Konin to the vicinity of Ploschen on the German side of the border, northwest of Kalisz. If the Russians were able to press this move in sufficient strength the Germans would have no choice but to abandon their defensive lines and fall back toward Breslau.

For three days the fighting in Southwest Poland has been carried on along the Nidsica River, half way from Kielce to Cracow. The Austrian resistance has evidently stiffened in this region, where they are making a strong effort to hold back the Russians in order to protect the retreat of their own troops from the San River. These troops at last accounts were still holding Tarnow and Przemysl, but their position, with their principal line of retreat parallel to the front, is a very dangerous one.

If the Russians should succeed in defeating the Austrian armies in the vicinity of Cracow, the result would probably be disastrous for the Austrian forces between Cracow and Przemysl. Consequently, it is probable that the Austrians have already started their retreat from the Upper San to avoid this risk.

This move would concentrate their armies toward the West and increase the resistance that they would oppose to the Russian advance on Cracow. This in turn would release troops to reinforce the German line in Silesia so that from the Carpathian Mountains to Posen the Russians would be confronted with a stronger force than ever, with their fighting ability much increased by the railroad systems that enable them to move troops rapidly to any point of their line.

The Russian advance, then, must soon slow up in order to give them time to bring up their heavy artillery and to make the many other preparations that will be needed to enable them to exert their full force against the new German defensive position.

GERMANS WATCHING DANES.

Try Vainly to Buy Iron Wire from Firms in Copenhagen.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

COPENHAGEN, Nov. 10, (Dispatch to The London Standard.)—There has been great nervousness recently among the German forces watching the Danish frontier, and the German guards have been reinforced considerably. Any other language save German over the telephones in the frontier districts is prohibited.

The presence of German spies in the Danish capital is common talk. There is also an ever-increasing number of German buyers of food and horses in Copenhagen. Some of these buyers tried to place large orders with a Scandinavian firm for iron wire. No firm, however, would accept the order, and this despite the fact that wire is not in the list of articles prohibited for export.

MISERY IN CONSTANTINOPLE.

Great Numbers of Unemployed Swelled by the Refugees.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, Nov. 10.—Notwithstanding the very sanguine Turkish official bulletins, private advices are to the effect that the situation in Turkey is so serious that the Government, as one dispatch says, "must have been hypnotized to have embarked on this war."

The numbers of unemployed in Constantinople are assuming enormous proportions, as great numbers of refugees are arriving, and the Government is taking no steps to relieve this misery. It cannot be long before the discontent takes an active form, it is declared.

Germany is pouring in money, provisions, and munitions, especially money. It is doubtful, however, if the German officers will be able to make much headway against the total disorganization in every department.

EGYPT REMAINS TRANQUIL.

Turkey Counted Confidently on an Anti-British Revolt.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ALEXANDRIA, Nov. 10, (Dispatch to The London Morning Post.)—The heads of the Azhar Mohammedan University in Cairo, the most important in the Moslem world, have counseled the Egyptian Moslems to remain tranquil in the existing crisis.

Said Pasha, Vice President of the Legislative Assembly, has left Egypa for Italy, and other members of the Assembly have been ordered to remain at their country seats.

Evidence is accumulating that Turkey counted confidently on an anti-British uprising when war was declared, but no trouble of any kind has so far been experienced.

FURIOUS FIGHTING IN ERZERUM REGION

BOSPORUS FORTS SHELLED

Turkish Fleet Sallies Out, but Withdraws—Many Merchant Ships Reported Sunk.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 10.—An official communication from the Caucasian Army Staff at Tiflis, dated Nov. 8, says:

"At daybreak, near Koprukeul, the combat was resumed with renewed force. The enemy launched against us troops concentrated in the region of Erzerum, which, in their turn, were reinforced from the garrison of that stronghold.

"To judge from the character of the actions and such information as could be gathered, German officers commanded the Turks.

"In the afternoon the fighting assumed a particularly tenacious character, the Turks supporting their advance guards by fresh divisions. However, their attempted envelopment of one of our flanks failed

"Thanks to the valor of our troops, we were able toward evening, when the battle moderated, to hold all we had previously conquered. One of our columns took possession of positions at Karakiline (Karakilissee?) and Alaschkertska."

An official communication from the General Staff of the Navy, issued this evening, gives the details of the sinking recently of several Turkish transports. The communication says:

"The commander of the Russian fleet on nearing Port Sangouldak sent two of his ships, with some torpedo boats, to destroy the buildings and workshops of the port. This was done successfully. Moreover, a Turkish steamer was sunk.

"At the same time our scout-ship sighted a Turkish military transport, filled with soldiers, which was about to put to sea. Our cruiser approached this vessel and opened fire and sank it. Then the Russian fleet put to sea.

"Shortly afterward the Russian fleet sighted through the mist a Turkish naval column of two transports, one of which, the Midhat Pasha, had hoisted the war pennant. Torpedo boats sent to destroy these transports soon sighted a third one.

"The three transports, laden with ammunition, guns, automobiles, and aeroplanes, were sunk. We saved and captured 248 men on the ships, among them several German officers and a staff officer who was bearing some documents. The prisoner declared that the transports were to be used to take troops to Trebizond.

Another communication from the General Staff of the army in the Caucasus says:

"The artillery fight on the Keprikey position lasted all day Nov. 9.

"The ships of the enemy were sighted at several points on the Black Sea coast.

ENVER BLAMED FOR THE WAR.

British "White Paper" Says Grand Vizier Seemed to Desire Peace.

LONDON, Nov. 10.—The diplomatic correspondence from the British Embassy at Constantinople relating to the events leading to the war with Turkey was issued tonight in the form of a "White Paper."

The correspondence, which begins on Aug. 3 and closes Nov. 4, portrays the Grand Vizier as ostensibly striving to maintain the neutrality of Turkey, but proving no match for his War Minister, Enver Pasha, who, "backed by Germany, was determined to force Turkey into a war against the Allies."

The detention by the British Government of the two battleships building for Turkey in England provided Turkey at the outset, according to the "White Paper," with a grievance, but this soon assumed minor importance compared with the affair of the cruisers Goeben and Breslau, with their German crews.

The Grand Vizier, according to a dispatch from the British Embassy at Constantinople dated Aug. 10, admitted that Germany was doing her utmost to compromise the Turkish Government, but gave solemn assurance that Turkey's neutrality would be maintained. This assurance was frequently repeated, and so impressed the British Ambassador, Sir Louis Mallet, that he wrote to Sir Edward Grey, the Foreign Secretary, that he was convinced of the Grand Vizier's absolute sincerity.

The Grand Vizier pleaded for more time in which to get rid of the German crews of the Goeben and Breslau, and explained that the mobilization of Turkey was due to necessity, to avoid being surprised by Bulgaria. But as stated in another dispatch from the Ambassador, Enver Pasha had got "entirely out of hand," and, continued the Ambassador, "I gather that he alone is responsible for the present situation."

The situation, as told in the correspondence, rapidly became more critical with Enver Pasha virtually in control. Turkey's preparations for hostilities became more open and her breaches of neutrality more glaring.

All the while the Grand Vizier protested his deep regret at the course affairs had taken, and still declared that he would do his utmost to maintain peace.

ALL DECLARE WAR ON TURKS.

The Five Allies in Europe Issue a Formal Announcement.

PARIS, Nov. 10.—A dispatch from Bordeaux to the Havas Agency, dated Nov. 9, says that a formal declaration of war, signed by the five Allies—France, Great Britain, Russia, Belgium, and Servia—was issued against Turkey yesterday.

The French declaration is remarkable. After mentioning the Black Sea episodes as the direct cause of war, it says that, since the Turkish warships, commanded by German officers, without due cause bombarded Russian ports, a state of war has existed between Turkey on the one hand and the five Allies on the other. It continues:

"It is not the French Republic's intention ever to forget the cordial friendship which for many centuries has linked France with the Ottoman Empire. In view of this fact, it will not consider the many Turkish subjects residing within the French borders as hostile enemies, but in the light of true friends."

TURKS' DOOM SEALED, SAYS LLOYD GEORGE

Ravagers of Armenia Fit Comrades of the Desolators of Flanders, He Asserts.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 10.—Chancellor David Lloyd George made another vigorous speech on the war to an assembly of Free Churchmen in London tonight, denying that Great Britain was responsible for the war. In part he said:

"We were not armed for continental warfare, but we have raised the greatest volunteer army the world has even seen. In a few months we shall double it.

"We harbored no designs against Germany; we maintained no quarrel with Germany; as the Lord liveth, we engaged in no conspiracy against Germany. We are in this war from motives of the purest chivalry to defend the weak."

Speaking of Belgium, the Chancellor said: "The Germans robbed Belgians of their food to maintain their armies. They are now sending to America, saying, 'You feed them.' It was not America that devastated their land.

"We are assailed by another national exponent of the higher culture—Turkey. We did our best to avoid a quarrel. No one could have shown more patience in the face of insolence and injuries than Great Britain in the face of the treatment accorded her by this miserable, wretched, contemptible empire on the Bosporus.

"I am glad that the Turk is to be called to his final account. The ravagers of Armenia and the desolators of Flanders are fit comrades. The Turk of the East and Turk of the West are both ruthless military empires with only one God—that is violence."

The Chancellor went on:

"Within the last few days it has been my privilege to meet one of the greatest Generals in the French Army and to talk to him of his experiences in the war and what he had witnessed—the carnage, the woes, the terror—and he said to me, 'The man who is responsible for this war has the soul of a devil.'

"That came from the heart of one of the greatest strategists in this French Army, which has been fighting for three months."

TURK SEES TURKEY'S RUIN.

Ifram Bey Says the People Will Take Revenge on the War Party.

ROME, Nov. 10.—Ifram Bey, head of the staff of Essad Pasha, the Albanian Minister of War, who is here to negotiate for the lending of assistance by Italy to Albania, said today concerning the situation created by Turkey's action in entering the war:

"Turkey is finished. As a Mussulman I am sorry, but I know the Caucasus and am convinced that Turkey cannot oppose serious resistance to the Russians. At Erzerum, Turkey claims, she has 300,000 men to resist the Russians, but her forces there are far below that number, while Trebizond is in even worse condition.

"Essad Pasha also thinks that a fight under these conditions is folly, and that Turkey should have remained neutral, acking in exchange some compensation from the Triple Entente. Now she rushes toward ruin. When the Mussulmans know that the power of the Caliph has been sacrificed to German interests and a few politicians, summary justice will follow, but it will be too late."

NOT TO ATTACK SUEZ CANAL.

Turks Drop Plan, Fearing It Would Cause Italy to Intervene.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, Nov. 10, (Dispatch to The London Daily Telegraph.)—The Neue Freie Presse of Vienna says that the Turks have renounced their idea of attacking the Suez Canal because they fear lest by so doing they might endanger the interests of Italy, who would thereby be compelled to abandon her neutrality.

cially charged the troops with the task of inflicting the severest possible punishment upon the forces whose civilization they deny and whose soldierly qualities they effect to disparage.

"Under all these circumstances it is a subject of great satisfaction that the Indian troops so finely fulfilled the high expectations which were formed of them. A word of caution, however, should be uttered with regard to the amazing adventures and exploits attributed to them—recommendations desired by neither the officers nor the men.

"It need hardly be said that the conduct and example of the British officers, who have undergone precisely the same hardships as the men, have been worthy of the highest traditions of the service. In loss of officers and men Great Britain has paid, is paying, and will continue to pay, a cruel and constant price for the liberties of Europe and her own existence as a world-wide power."

INDIAN REGIMENTS LOSE MANY OFFICERS

Killed, Wounded and Missing in Recent Fighting in Flanders Total 42 Britons, 23 Natives.

LONDON, Nov. 10.—A heavy casualty list of officers of the Indian Army issued by the Press Bureau today emphasizes the fierceness of the recent fighting in which the Indian troops have been engaged in West Flanders.

The list includes twenty-six British and eight native officers killed, thirteen British and twelve native officers wounded, and three British and three native officers missing.

A further list of casualties to officers of the British Army includes six killed and sixteen wounded. Among the latter is William G. M. Hay, Marquis of Tweeddale, a Lieutenant in the First Life Guards.

TO CHANGE ENVOY AT ROME.

Kaiser May Appoint Prince von Buelow—Pope Pleads for Wounded.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, Nov. 10, (Dispatch to The London Morning Post.)—Herr von Flotow, the German Ambassador here, will shortly leave Rome. Prince von Bülow, who usually resides here, and who through his Italian marriage has great influence in Italian society, is mentioned as his possible successor, in view of the importance of the post at this crisis.

The Pope has sent a letter to Mgr. Dobretchich, Archbishop of Antivari, saying that since he became Pope he has striven to diminish the horrors of this war, and begging Mgr. Dobretchich, as he had begged the Archbishop of Cologne, to help prisoners and wounded in Montenegro. His Holiness expresses confidence that the Montenegrin Government will treat them kindly.

The Pontiff has also written to the Archbishop of Rheims in the following words:

"We take a lively part in the grief caused by the spectacle of such misfortunes to the [illegible] your diocese and the fatal consequences to [illegible] the religious, political and [illegible] standpoint."

Library Bureau is now operating six factories. It distributes its product through forty selling branches. Its employees number nearly three thousand. It has tens of thousands of customers. Its annual sales amount to millions of dollars.

These are impressive figures. Yet they are incomplete—the most important item of all is missing. For Library Bureau's greatest asset is the Idea for which the business stands—the Idea of Service.

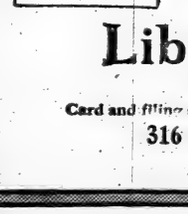
Library Bureau originated the card system, an innovation that has revolutionized the business world; that is in use in a million business houses; that has made it possible for men to keep right under their eyes, a record of every department of their businesses—sales, employees, advertising, stock on hand, customers, quotations, etc.

Here are some other things that show how the Library Bureau Idea has been developed:

Library Bureau originated vertical filing. Before Library Bureau existed, men "filed" letters in drawers, boxes or on hooks. To find a letter a year old was a day's work. But now——!

Library Bureau originated the unit record desk—a desk that has doubled the capacity of the worker and trebled his comfort. Seated in a comfortable chair, he has at his fingers' ends anywhere from 10,000 to 18,000 records—credit data, stock records, ledger cards, etc.

Library Bureau originated the counter height unit—card and filing cabinets, etc., combined so as to form a practicable counter. A saver of space and steps. Particularly adapted for offices where space is limited and rentals high.



And now Library Bureau is introducing a new—and better—method of filing—the L. B. Automatic Index. "Great" is the only word that describes it. It is quick—quick in, quick out. Makes correct filing easy and incorrect filing difficult.

WIN KAISER'S PRAISE LEAVING TSING-TAU

Germans Formally Hand Over the Stronghold to the Japanese and British Forces.

RECKLESS DARING SHOWN

Japanese Embassy Here Reaffirms Intention to Give Land to China, but Cites Technical Reservation.

BERLIN, Nov. 10, (via Wireless to Sayville, L. I.)—Johannes Kaempf, President of the Reichstag, has received the following dispatch from Emperor William:

"The heroic defense of Tsing-tau, that model settlement of German culture built with the labor of many years, brings new laurels to the spirit of faithfulness unto death which the German people have so often shown since their army and their fleet have been in defensive warfare against a world of hatred, envy, and covetousness, a war which, if God wills, will not be in vain."

LONDON, Nov. 10.—The German stronghold of Tsing-tau, according to a dispatch received by the Central News from Shanghai, was unconditionally handed over to Japan at 10 o'clock this morning.

Reckless Valor of Japanese.

TOKIO, Nov. 10.—A detailed official account of the operations before Tsing-tau has been made public. It is couched in modest terms, but shows that the storming of the German stronghold was characterized by the same recklessness and disregard of life that the Japanese soldiers evidenced in the war with Russia.

Led by a detachment of engineers, who exploded a powder magazine of the enemy at heavy cost in lives, the Japanese mounted the German parapets in a deadly rain of bullets from the machine guns. They were blinded by the illuminating shells exploded by the Germans to reveal their position. The account lays emphasis on the stubbornness of the German defense, and dwells upon one fierce engagement fought by the light of the moon. After Fort Moltke had been captured the order was given to halt. Thus deadly encounters in the streets of the city were prevented.

Reservation in the Contract.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—Official information reached the Japanese Embassy today that the fortifications at Tsing-tau and the surrounding territory of Kiao-Chau were formally turned over to the allied force of occupation.

At the embassy it was said that Japan had not altered her intentions, announced with the declaration of war against Germany, in regard to Kiao-Chau that the territory eventually would be restored to China. Technically and legally, it was said, as Japan had demanded in its declaration of war that Germany surrender the fortress of its own accord, and as Germany did not accede to the demand but resisted, it was pointed out that Japan was not absolutely bound to restore Kiao-Chau.

It was said, however, that no definite or positive announcement would be made at this time in regard to Japan's ultimate decision. But it is known that strong influences in Japan are at work toward the maintenance of friendly relations with China, and it is believed that Kiao-Chau will be returned at the end of the war.

That Japan would assume the offensive and send troops to Europe unless requested by Great Britain to do so was not thought probable, unless German successes against the Allies should endanger the vital interests or threaten the life and existence of Japan.

KAISER REJOICES OVER NAVY.

True German Sailor Spirit Shown in Fight Off Chile, He Says.

BERLIN, Nov. 10, (via Wireless Telegraph to Sayville, L. I.)—Emperor William has answered in the following terms a telegram from the Bremen Senate congratulating him on the victory of German warships over an English squadron in Chilean waters:

"I rejoice with the entire German people over this splendid proof of the true German sailor spirit. I pray God still to grant our weapons victories on land to the confusion of all the plans of our enemies for the destruction of German being and influence."

Rear Admiral Schlieper, retired, has spoken in praise of the superior seamanship of the German Admiral in the naval engagement in Chilean waters. He dwells on the splendid use the Germans made of the position of the sun and the direction of the wind to aid them in their fighting.

BERLIN, Nov. 10 via The Hague and London.)—Vice Admiral Count von Spee, the commander of the German squadron in the South Pacific which defeated a British fleet off the coast of Chile Nov. 1, has been decorated with the Order of the Iron Cross, First and Second Class, for this exploit. A large number of these decorations have been distributed also to officers and men of the squadron, as well as to the Captain and crew of the German cruiser Karlshuhe. There is no present way of communicating news of these honors to the men concerned.

120,000 SERVIANS BEATEN.

Austrians Well Over the Border and Pushing On, Vienna Says.

LONDON, Nov. 10.—An official Austrian communication, issued on Monday and telegraphed from Vienna via Amsterdam to Reuter's Telegram Company, indicates that the Austrians are now fighting in Servia well over their own border. The communication reads:

Our operations in the southern war theatre are progressing favorably. While our advance on the line from Shabats to Lesnitza was obstinately resisted at a strongly fortified point at the foot of a hill, a three days' battle on the line from Losnitza to Kroupani ended in success.

The forces of the Servians consisted altogether of six divisions, (120,000 men.) Their troops, after a heroic defense, are now retreating toward Valjevo.

Our troops yesterday arrived at Losnitza, east of the heights of Sokolska and Planina, southeast of Kroupani. Numerous prisoners and war material were captured.

LOOK FOR RUSH TO EUROPE.

Steamship Men Expect Americans to Swarm There When War Ends.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 10.—If the war ends before next Summer, there will be such a swarm of Americans anxious to get to Europe, according to the manager of one of the transatlantic liners, that the lines will not be able to accommodate all the passengers in view of the crippling of the German lines. In making this assertion today this steamship official said:

"Americans would forget all about the hardships of the past Summer if they had an opportunity to visit the battlefields next Summer. In fact when war is concluded you may expect to find hundreds of excursions to battlefields planned. As for myself, I would like to take some members of my family over the battlefields before they were raked clean."

It is said by this steamship official that he had already heard some tourist agencies speculating as to the duration of the war, and while they differed as to the date they were unanimous in the opinion that Americans would be keener than ever to come to Europe when the strife was over.

A high official of another steamship line expressed himself as extremely optimistic over the blow to the German passenger lines.

SELL STAMPS TO AID JEWS.

Central Relief Committee Hopes to Get a Large Sum in This Way.

The Central Committee for the relief of Jews who are in need because of the war in Europe is issuing self-taxation stamps to storekeepers and others who sell them to their customers and use them on business letters. The distribution of these stamps, it is announced, will be nationwide, and it is expected that a large sum for the relief of the sufferers will be obtained.

It was said yesterday that in New York 40,000 kosher chickens were killed each week, and the plan calls for the purchase of a one-cent stamp with every chicken. The children who attend the Talmud Torah Sabbath schools will be asked to contribute to the fund by the purchase of a stamp each week.

H. Fischel, the Treasurer of the fund, reported yesterday that the committee had received $16,441 and that additional subscriptions were coming in at the rate of about $1,000 a day.

Dr. Alexander von Nuber de Pereked, the Austro-Hungarian Consul General, has written the committee thanking it for having sent $5,000 to Vienna to be applied to Jewish relief work. There were now, the Consul General said, more than 400,000 Jewish refugees from Galicia, Poland, and other parts of the war zone in Vienna and Budapest. Nearly all of these were in need of immediate relief.

CHRISTMAS SHIP IS DELAYED.

Owing to the unexpected size of the cargo that awaited her, the United States naval auxiliary Jason, which was going to Europe with Christmas presents for the children of war sufferers, did not sail, as scheduled, yesterday afternoon. It is hoped that the cargo will be loaded in time for the Jason to get under way this afternoon, but the chances are that she will not start before tomorrow morning.

The cargo of the Jason will consist of more than 6,000,000 packages, each representing a Christmas gift. Altogether these gifts represent about one hundred carloads of freight and express. They came from every part of the United States as well as a great many places in Canada. Warm clothing, shawls, capes, caps, mittens, stockings, sweaters, and underclothes make up the greater part of the cargo. Thousands of dolls, toys and other playthings also are among the gifts.

The Jason left the Navy Yard yesterday and steamed to the Bush Terminal Stores in Brooklyn, where the cargo awaited her. One hundred coast artillerymen and sixty-five bluejackets, under Major Frank H. Lawton, U. S. A., of Governors Island, aided by a full force of longshoremen, immediately began loading the ship.

Lieut. Commander Charles E. Courtney, U. S. N., who commands the Jason, said yesterday that he hoped to get away today, but when he looked at the great cargo that awaited him he agreed with Major Lawton that it would be tomorrow morning before he could give the command to cast-off and head for Europe.

Rush to Join the Army Following Lord Mayor's Show Day.

LONDON, Nov. 10.—The effect of the martial display at the Lord Mayor's show has been the immediate stimulating of recruiting in England, where enlisting in the last few weeks has lagged.

HENRY FIELD A CHAUFFEUR.

Grandson of Chicago Merchant Serving with British Army.

CHICAGO, Nov. 10.—Henry Field, grandson of the late Marshall Field and one of America's richest boys, is serving as an English army chauffeur, it was learned today from a letter received by Stanley Field, his uncle. He is driving the automobile of a staff officer.

His stepfather, Maldwin Drummond, a Captain in the British Army, is at the front. In the country home of his mother, who was Mrs. Marshall Field, Jr., Mrs. Drummond is caring for forty Belgian refugees. His uncle, Admiral David Beatty, is winning fame on the sea, and his aunt, Mrs. Ethel Field Beatty, has equipped a hospital ship, while her country home is thrown open to refugees.

SOCIALIST ENVOYS FAIL IN BELGIUM

PREDICT TRIUMPH IN WAR

Urge Acceptance of the Inevitable—Belgians Reject Overtures and Maintain Cold Hostility.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 10, (Dispatch to The London Standard.)—The friendly attitude of German Socialists toward the Kaiser's aggressive war policy is being revealed more and more as time goes on. It already is known that the German Socialists conveyed their Government's peace overtures to France, and now I am in a position to give you more particulars of their warlike activity.

Four leaders of the German Socialist Party recently have been in Belgium to try to persuade the Belgium Socialist leaders to entice Belgian workingmen to settle down quietly and with contentment under German occupation. The German Socialists did their utmost to convince leaders of the Belgian labor movement with whom they conversed that it would be more advantageous for Belgian workingmen to accept German occupation and live their normal lives than to continue to offer any latent opposition. They assured their Belgian compatriots that the war was extremely popular among all classes of the population of Germany owing to "the unjust aggression of Germany's enemies" and to the horror inspired by the thought that "liberal-minded and cultured Germany could fall under the savage yoke of barbarous Russia." In any case, they added, the war now was well under way, and nothing could prevent it from ending in a complete triumph for Germany.

Therefore, the sooner the Belgian laboring classes accepted the inevitable the better it would be for them. France, said the German Socialists, could do nothing to help, and as for England, her army did not count as a Continental factor. They admitted that in regard to the British fleet it was different, but even the British Navy could not and never would prevent Germany from getting all the supplies which she needed.

Besides, concluded the Socialist emissaries of Germany, England was so shamelessly scrupulous in respect to the rights of neutrals that Germany could bring in abundance of all she wanted under England's nose.

When the Belgian Socialists reproached the emissaries for the suffering inflicted by the German troops on the civilian population of Belgium, the Socialists from Berlin warmly defended the severe measures which the German soldiers had been compelled to take to protect themselves from the "treacherous attacks" of Belgian civilians. It appears that some heated discussion ensued between the German and Belgian Socialists. The Germans tried to persuade the Belgians that they had been duped and befooled by King Albert into taking sides in a quarrel with which the Belgian people themselves had no concern whatever.

Again and again they persisted in their endeavor to shake the resolution of the Belgian labor leaders to maintain their attitude of cold hostility to the invader. Ultimately the German Socialists departed without having accomplished anything except to increase the Belgian Socialists' opposition to German rule in any form.

Following the visit of the German Socialists to Belgium comes the report of a speech made by the leader of the German Socialists in Rhineland, Herr Huer, who declared himself to be enthusiastically in favor of waging war to the bitter end.

ASKS US TO SHIP COTTON.

German Naval Critic Says Blockade is Not Effective.

BERLIN, Nov. 10, (via Wireless to Sayville, L. I.)—Count Reventlow, the German naval critic, in an article in The Deutsche Tages Zeitung, invites the United States to send ships laden with cotton to German ports. He says that there is no effective British blockade of such ports, and insists that German ports are not menaced by mines.

The English would acquiesce, he argues, in the breaking of the North Sea blockade, such as it is, by American ships.

MINES SCARE AWAY LOBSTERS.

England May Have to Import from Us—Heavy Loss in Fishing Trade.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 10.—It may be necessary in the near future for fish merchants here to import lobsters from America, as the presence of mines in the North Sea, so a well-known merchant said today, had greatly curtailed the supply, while the frequent explosion of mines has so greatly agitated the lobsters that it is believed they have deserted some breeding places there. It was said lobsters were susceptible to sudden shocks.

Recently English fishermen have in certain localities run across numerous surface mines in the North Sea and since then many have abandoned work, while the Government prohibits fishing in other areas. In the Grimsby fishing trade more than a score of trawlers have been lost as a result of mine explosions and the greater proportion of the crews drowned. There are half a dozen trawlers overdue. It is estimated that in boats alone the Grimsby trade has suffered to the extent of $000,000, most of which is borne by local insurance.

As a Nation, the Bravest People I Ever Saw, Says Explorer.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 10.—Henry Savage-Landor, the explorer, who has recently returned to London from an official mission in Belgium, which kept him in Antwerp or its environs from Sept. 1 until after the bombardment of the city had begun, said today:

"In the course of my work I was several times within the German lines, and I have also been among many German prisoners. The physique of the German soldiers is very poor, and does not compare with the physique of the Belgians, French, or English. It is still further below that of the Russians, who I consider the hardiest soldiers in Europe.

"I admire the way in which the Germans carry on military operations. I mean the scientific way in which they cut trenches, the wonderful accuracy of their artillery fire, and their astonishing methods of obtaining precise information.

"But my stay at the front in Belgium convinced me that the Belgians as a nation are the bravest people whom I have had the good fortune to know. The greatest is their King, at once the most heroic and most modest of European rulers. I am going to give lectures in aid of the Belgian relief work and then return to the front. I think the war will be a long struggle, with the Germans gradually driven out of France and out of Belgium. Then while the war in the west is waged on the Rhine the Russians will do the rest."

CURB GERMAN CARTOONISTS

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 10.—The German Government is having trouble with comic papers and German caricatures. The North German Gazette publishes an article protesting against the "unworthy abuse of heads of enemy States in Germany, the land of science, the land of poets and painters."

The German Government organ notes with regret that shop windows exhibit disgraceful caricature of the Kings of England and Belgium, the Czar, and M Poincaré. "Germany," it declares, "does not require such poisonous medicine and should leave such things to the English mob, the Paris apaches, and Russian moujiks."

The Berliner Tageblatt suggests that the German Government's protection should extend not only to the heads of States, but to enemy peoples.

LONDON, Nov. 10.—Auguste Rodin has presented to the British Nation the wonderful collection of his own sculptures recently on view at the South Kensington (Victoria and Albert) Museum. It includes twenty masterpieces representing all periods of the great sculptor's genius.

M. Rodin makes the gift "as a little token of my admiration for your heroes."

M. Rodin is now considering a suggestion that he should execute a statue of "Belgium," representing the heroism of that country.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 10.—Hotels in Italy controlled by English companies or in which English have financial interests have discharged all German employes, according to advices received by an official of one of the big hotel companies here, thus carrying the warfare on German waiters, cooks, and other employes even to neutral Italy.

Only recently drastic measures were taken to rid hotels here of German employes. It was asserted that some of the big German hostelries in Italy were being avoided by Italians.

Italy Unwilling to Stop Copper in Transit Across Her Territory — Won't Export Domestic Purchases.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—The British Government showed today that it did not intend to take any chances in the way of permitting copper, which has been declared absolute contraband, reaching German or Austrian territory.

Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, the British Ambassador, after a conference at the State Department today made the following statement:

"The Italian Government has prohibited the export of copper from Italy but not the transit of copper through Italy to a foreign country. Copper consigned to Italy for Italian use will not be subject to seizure, but copper which is consigned to a belligerent country or to order will be suspect. Arrangements are being made for the transit of copper to Switzerland for the use of that country on the guarantee of the proper authorities."

A formal statement on the subject furnished to the press by Secretary Bryan was as follows:

"The British Ambassador today informed the State Department that he had been advised by his Government that Italy prohibits the export of copper, but does not prevent its transit over Italian territory. The Ambassador said that in view of that fact the British Government would feel compelled to detain copper shipments to Italy unless assured that they were for domestic consumption or were in transit to Switzerland."

The British Government has found that Italy's embargo on the re-exportation of copper would not prevent a shipment originating in the United States from eventually reaching Germany. The Italian Government does not feel bound, according to the British understanding of the question, to interfere with a shipment from one country to another if Italian territory is merely used as an intermediary stage in the journey of a consignment of goods. Italy construes her obligation, it is said, to extend merely to preventing Italians from re-exporting copper to the belligerents.

From reports received by the State Department it is apparent that there is an unprecedented demand for copper in Europe, England placed it on the contraband list because of the variety of its uses in the manufacture of munitions of war.

The result of the British ruling on the Italian view toward copper will be, in the opinion of officials here, to retain all vessels at Gibraltar whose cargoes of copper are not consigned to a specific consignee in a neutral country. All copper which was shipped before the product was put on the contraband list will be paid for by the British Government wherever seized.

The action of Great Britain obtains emphasis from the announcement of Sir Edward Grey yesterday that as Denmark, Sweden, and Norway had given satisfactory assurances that the exportation of contraband articles from those countries would be prohibited, the British Government would not interfere with the shipment of such articles to the three Scandinavian countries.

Great Britain's action with regard to copper has a bearing on the case of the steamship Kroonland, which was detained at Gibraltar by the British authorities because she had a cargo of American copper aboard consigned to Italian and Grecian ports. The Kroonland was released, but the copper cargo was ordered before a Prize Court. The Kroonland had sailed before copper had been declared absolute contraband, and the British Government is willing that cargoes of copper that have that status shall be considered only as conditional contraband. In view of the decision of the British Government with regard to copper shipped to Italy it is not likely that the Kroonland's copper will be released for shipment to Naples, to which it was originally consigned. The probability is that Great Britain will dispose of the case by paying for the copper and applying it to her own uses.

AMAZED AT GERMAN ORDER.

London Commission Thinks There Is Something Behind It.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 10.—Reports from Holland that the Germans had decided to forbid importation of food into Belgium unless the Belgians returned to work created a sensation here, introducing a totally unexpected obstacle to the plans for relieving the Belgians' distress. No official confirmation has yet reached London, but information is being actively sought. The State Department will be asked to make inquiries of Germany.

There is no general reluctance of Belgians to work, it is said, but work under present conditions is impossible in most cases, because all industries are paralyzed. Where it has been possible Belgian workmen have resumed labors willingly. It is believed there is some underlying reason for the threatened German action which is yet unknown.

Hundreds of thousands of dollars' worth of supplies have been started to Belgium, where there is no doubt they are badly needed. It was through the American Government that permission was obtained from Germany a few weeks ago for the shipments. Germany giving guarantee they would not be seized for military purposes.

Under that guarantee and permission the Relief Committee here set to work organizing, has shipped some thousands of tons of cereals and other supplies, and has started work in America, whence are coming vast quantities.

So far as those here who are thoroughly familiar with Belgian conditions know, the matter of the people's refusing to work has never been of great importance nor in the least degree responsible for the food conditions—there is a distinct inclination to believe this is a subterfuge and covers some other reason.

Your correspondent had an opportunity to discuss the matter today with an eminent Belgian, who left Brussels on Friday. The news of the German proclamation had just arrived. This Belgian, who is deeply interested in relief work, vehemently protested that the people of Belgium were not unwilling to work, but there was no work to be had. He declared where possible people were working. He cited the case of a shoe factory in Brussels, where the owners happened to have plenty of leather, so the factory was started going full blast until the materials were exhausted. In other industries it is generally impossible to get materials, while if they are available exportation of the manufactured products is impossible. This man could not imagine the purpose of the German proclamation.

LONDON, Nov. 10.—A member of the Belgian organization for the distribution of food from the United States was in London tonight and was quick to voice a protest against the reported proclamation by the Germans at Brussels which would nullify American philanthropy.

"I am much surprised to hear of the German proclamation," he said. "With the best will in the world it is practically impossible for the citizens of Belgium to work as usual. It is utterly inconceivable that after giving to the commission for relief official authority to bring food from America to the devastated country the German authorities could, on the pretext mentioned, stop supplies necessary to our very existence."

The Belgian pointed out that the principal sources of occupation are the railways, the coal industry and metallurgy. The railway service for commercial purposes is stopped; coal could not be moved, even if mined, while the metallurgic industry is dead because there is no importation of ores.

"We are only too anxious to work," he said. "Give us transportation, and despite our desperate situation Belgium will be busy again."

WOMEN KNIT BETWEEN ACTS

Work for Relief Taken Up by Mrs. Walsh's Guests in Washington Theatre.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—Prominent Washington women set a new fashion tonight when they brought forth knitting material during the intermissions in the performance at the Columbia Theatre. Those who participated in the knitting bee were in the box of Mrs. Thomas F. Walsh, widow of the Colorado millionaire. Mrs. Walsh and her guests, who were Mrs. Lindley M. Garrison, wife of the Secretary of War, and two other ladies, knitted away unconcernedly. Secretary Garrison and another man were in the box.

The things that Mrs. Walsh and her guests knitted are to be contributed to the supplies to be sent to Belgium for the relief of suffering people.

KNITTING BEES FOR ALLIES

A woman who entered the hair-dressing parlors at the Vanderbilt Hotel yesterday morning found a row of blonde and brunette heads busily bent over tasks that were foreign to the usual occupations of the place, and was impatient when nobody sprang up to wait her and ask her whether she wanted a "wave" or a shampoo, or one of the other ministrations usually proffered in the place.

Somewhat offended, she demanded an explanation. Then it developed that all the attendants of the place were busily engaged in working for the soldiers of the Allies. All are either French or Belgian.

Mlle. Hélène, holding up an unfinished woolen sock, apologized for her inattention on the ground that she feared to lose a stitch. She has two brothers and several cousins at the front, but the socks are to go to anybody who needs them. Already the sock had reached the length of a No. 13, and still there was no sign of a toe.

"We have been told to knit them with lots of room in them," explained the woman with the knitting needles.

Mlle. Julie, who is a Belgian, and whose brother, she had just learned, had received a wound in the leg, was in tears, but she was deftly turning a corner on a grey chest protector.

"It is so cold in the trenches and so damp in my country that chest protectors are necessary," she said.

S. H. Butts, the manager of the beautifying department of the hotel, says in his long experience he has never known his women hairdressers and manicurists to be so much interested in their task as they are in this work. Even the American girls in the barber's shop are devoting the time between customers to turning out some article for the soldiers in the war. Some have embroidered little messages of good wishes in the offerings.

PAGE URGES CENTRAL BELGIAN COMMITTEE

Germans Have Taken So Much Food That People Face Starvation, Ambassador Says.

FEARS A WASTE OF EFFORT

Following the announcement from London published in THE NEW YORK TIMES yesterday, the fear felt there lest there should be conflict in relief work due to the multiplicity of committees in this country and in Great Britain, this letter from Ambassador Page was made public by Norman Hapgood of the Committee of Mercy yesterday:

Embassy of the United States.
London, Oct. 23, 1914.

Dear Mr. Hapgood: This is about the Belgian end of your Committee of Mercy work.

An International Committee has just been formed, composed of a few leading Belgians, men of the highest repute, and of Americans resident in London, and of representatives of the British Government. This committee is making a comprehensive plan for supplying food to the starving Belgians in Belgium. The Belgians in ordinary times grow about one-sixth of the food that they require. Of this one-sixth the Germans have consumed or transported to Germany so nearly the whole visible supply that the people are within a week or ten days of actual starvation. Men of means in Brussels have as their staple diet black bread. This account of the situation is not exaggerated, for in addition to the direct testimony of trustworthy bankers and merchants in Brussels who are now here, I have word to the same effect from the American Minister to Belgium, Mr. Whitlock, whom I personally know, and who is a man of careful statements. The secretary of his legation is now in London. He confirms what Mr. Whitlock writes. In addition to that, my own private secretary has just come back from a visit to Brussels, where he went on an errand of mercy. He confirms all these statements of that desperate situation.

There is, of course, difficulty in getting food supplies to Belgium, for the country is now held by the German military authorities. In addition to the difficulty that they could place in our way, this kingdom now, you know, forbids the exportation of food. Mr. Whitlock and the Spanish Minister in Brussels, two neutrals, have secured the written promise of the German military commander that he will not confiscate food sent for the relief of the Belgian population, and I have a copy of this written guarantee. The British Government is turning over to the International Committee a considerable sum of money for the purchase of food, which, however, must be bought elsewhere. (It turns out to be a small sum after all. They have thousands of refugees here for whom they must care.)

British Committee Organized.

The committee in London consists, by the request of the British Government, of the Spanish Ambassador, myself, and a number of the leading resident Americans in London, who are actually doing the work of buying the food. The rest of the committee is made up of our diplomatic and consular representatives in Belgium, who will co-operate with a regularly organized trustworthy committee of Belgians to distribute relief at the places where it is most needed in that kingdom. We have men of our own at every place of distribution.

I explain all these facts to you to show you in the first place the great need, and in the second place the efficient machinery that we have just created to do what we can to meet it. The funds put at our disposal by the British Government, which is acting nobly in this matter, will, we hope, be supplemented by funds from private sources in this kingdom, and by funds also contributed by the good people of our own country.

There's an enormous amount of duplication in Belgian relief work on this side, and, I hear, on your side, too. This results in waste. There ought to be only one committee on your side—a general committee for the relief of the Belgians, of all the organizations in the United States who are kindly giving their help in this good cause would unite in appointing a central committee in New York to take over their contributions, and let them come through one channel, so that work will not be duplicated, their kind help would go a great deal further and much trouble would be saved. These poor people need clothes, blankets, food, and you have never in your life dreamed of anything so pathetic.

If you have money for this purpose—any amount of money—I can cable you just what foodstuffs to buy, and precisely how to ship them. Let me hear by wire. Yours sincerely,

WALTER H. PAGE.

Mr. Hapgood said that Ambassador Page's suggestions met with the approval of the Committee of Mercy, and that he believed that a similar view of the situation would be taken by other bodies identified with Belgian relief work in this country.

The Belgian Relief Committee acknowledged yesterday subscriptions amounting to $18,728. The fund now amount to $420,444. Subscriptions should be sent to J. P. One of the contributions, which was for $7.65, came from the pupils of the Red Bank, N. J., High School. Miss Florence Wilbur, the teacher, wrote that she posted on the bulletin board the Belgian relief advertisement in last Sunday's TIMES and the pupils did the rest.

On the Holland-America liner Potsdam, which sailed for Rotterdam yesterday, the American Red Cross shipped a large consignment of hospital supplies to the German Red Cross. Another supply went on the same vessel to the American Hospital in Munich. On the French liner Rochambeau, which sails on Saturday, the American Red Cross will send a large allotment of bandages and other medical supplies to the French Red Cross.

A Cripple's Gift.

There is an orphan girl at 205 South Forty-ninth Street, West Philadelphia, Penn., who, though she has not walked for fourteen years, is busily plying her crochet needle in making wristlets for those destitute in Europe, particularly the soldiers in the war zone. Through Miss Margaret Wilson, daughter of the President, this girl sent the Red Cross yesterday eight pairs of these wristlets. With the wristlets Miss Wilson forwarded this letter, which she had received from the donor:

I am only a poor orphan girl and a cripple, but, oh, my heart aches for the poor men who have been brought into this war. Please see that these are delivered to the lady. [Miss Boardman.] I can crochet more if she needs them. I have some yarn that I cannot use for anything else, and God knows I am willing to do all I can. I have not walked, Miss Margaret, for fourteen years, but am trusting and patiently waiting.

Through the State Department American headquarters received yesterday this cable message from American Consul General Gaffney at Munich:

The King and Queen of Bavaria and royal Princesses, attended by a large suite, made an official visit to the American Red Cross Hospital in Munich today. The royal party spent one and a half hours conversing and distributing figs among the wounded soldiers. Michael Francis Doyle of the State Department and the members of the committee and their wives were presented to their Majesties, who expressed themselves profoundly impressed with the appointment and administration of the hospital.

The Red Cross Fund.

Subscriptions to the Red Cross yesterday amounted to $3,925. The total fund is now $339,195. Subscriptions should be sent to Jacob H. Schiff, treasurer, 130 East Twenty-second Street, or 52 William Street. These subscriptions were received yesterday:

The Vacation War Relief Committee received yesterday a check for $1,000 from Mrs. W. Seward Webb. Mrs. A. A. Anderson gave $200.

A lecture on art, with special reference to the cathedrals in the war zones of Europe, will be given by Frank Alvah Parsons at 8 o'clock on Thursday night at the meeting house of the Society for Ethical Culture, 2 West Sixty-fourth Street. Admission is $1. The entire proceeds will be given to the Red Cross Society for its work, with special reference to the needs of the Belgian refugees.

CARUSO WILL SELL PICTURES.

American Artists' Exhibition to be Kept Open Ten Days More.

The exhibition of the works of American artists at the Pietro Studios, 630 Fifth Avenue, for the benefit of the war sufferers was to have closed yesterday, but the interest displayed has been so great that the committees in charge has decided to keep it open for ten days longer. Caruso has promised to attend today and sell pictures.

The display is open from 11 in the morning till 7 at night, and there is a musicale every afternoon under the direction of Dr. Frank G. Dossert. Among the visitors last week were Ambassador Bernstorff, who came with Mr. and Mrs. Archibald B. White, and Pierre Mali, the Belgian Consul General. William H. Taft and Mayor Mitchel, who are members of the Honorary Committee, have written that they hope to visit the exposition before its close.

ARMIES FIGHTING IN VARIED CLIMATES

WINTER THERE PROLONGED

Milder Temperatures in France—Military Plans Must Be Made to Meet Weather Conditions.

The climatic conditions in the various countries where the armies of Europe are now battling against each other in the world's fiercest war show a wide diversity of range and severity, requiring in each case different military preparations and plans to meet different weather conditions.

Nowhere is the great range of climatic changes more to be reckoned with than in Russia, which extends through 26 degrees of latitude, from the cotton and silk growing regions of Turkestan and Transcaucasia to the moss and lichen clothed arctic tundras and the Verkhoyansk Siberian pole of cold.

Throughout the whole of Russia, however, the Winter is of long continuance and cold, lasting with frost into April and often May, to north of the fifty-fifth degree of latitude, with a return of cold weather in Central and Eastern Russia between May 18 and May 24. Frosts begin in the first half of September on the Middle Urals and in the first days of October in Southern and Western Russia, while they reach the Caucasus about Nov. 1. The temperature then falls rapidly.

By Oct. 10 on the Mid-Urals and Nov. 15 throughout Russia the thermometer ceases to rise above the freezing point. The rivers freeze rapidly, and toward Nov. 20 all the rivers of the White Sea basin are covered with ice, remaining so for an average of 167 days. The rivers of the Baltic Sea and Caspian basins freeze later; but about Dec. 20 nearly all the rivers of the country are highways for sledges. The Volga remains frozen about 150 days in the north and about ninety days at Astrakhan; the Don, 100 to 110 days; the Dnieper, 83 to 122 days; the Düna's ice prevents navigation about 125 days; and the Vistula is frozen over about 77 days at Warsaw.

The lowest temperature is in January, averaging from 20 degrees to minus 5 degrees Fahrenheit throughout Russia, and rising in the west only above 22 degrees. February and March continue cold, the temperature rising above zero only on the Black Sea coast. Even at Kiev and Lugan the average for March is below 30 degrees, while that of Central Russia is from 25 to 22 degrees, and as low as 20 degrees to minus 16 degrees at Samara and Orenburg.

The Russian cold is made the more unbearable by winds far surpassing in fierceness the winds of Western Europe, and growing from October to March to terrible gales, especially in the steppes and on the tundras. There are violent gales, with snow lasting two and three days, and northerly gales without snow, dangerous for man and beast.

In strong contrast with the savage climate of the Russian Winter is the climate in Belgium and France, where the western theatre of war is situated. The climate of France is generally temperate, though by no means uniform. The nature of the climate in the various sections of France is reflected in the products raised there. Thus the region of the cultivation of the olive tree is marked by a line at Bagnères-de-Luchon, in the Haute-Garonne Department, to Dié in the Isère; the region of the cultivation of maize from the mouth of the Gironde to Roan l'Etape in the Vosges; the cultivation of the vine marks the region from the mouth of the Loire to Mézières, in the Ardennes, and the northern region, where the brunt of the right wing fighting of the Germans is taking place, is called the region of the apple tree.

In general, the climate of Northern and Northwestern France resembles that of the south of England, with frequent rains and resultant good pasture lands. Mild winds blow from west to east from the Atlantic over all France except the lower basin of the Rhone, where the mistral blows, a cold wind from the north-northwest, and sometimes an east wind from the Alps and south winds, damaging the land and the health of the dwellers there alike.

The climate of Germany is intermediate between that of France and that of Russia. The mean annual temperature of Southwestern Germany, or the Rhine and Danube basins, in recent years has been about 52 to 54 degrees; of Central Germany 48 to 50 degrees, of the northern plain 46 to 48 degrees, that of Pomerania, and West Prussia, has been only 44 to 45 degrees, and that of East Prussia 42 to 44 degrees. The warmest climate is that of the northern Rhine plain and the valleys of the Necker, Main, and Moselle, with a mean Summer temperature of upward of 70 degrees, and an average January temperature that does not fall to the freezing point.

In Northwestern Germany, west of the Elbe, the Summers are not very hot, the mean temperature being from 60 to 62 degrees, and in Winter there is snow on the ground only a short time, the temperature west of the Weser averaging about 32 degrees and that east of the Weser sinking only to 30 degrees. Further east the contrast between Summer and Winter grows. The average Summer warmth of Germany is between 60 and 62 degrees, but the January temperature falls to 26 or 28 degrees in West Prussia, Posen, and Silesia, and to 22 or 26 degrees in East Prussia and Upper Silesia. All of these regions are now affected by the war operations against the Russians. Further south, along Germany's eastern front, the upper Danube basin or the Bavarian plain, the average January temperature is 25 or 28 degrees.

The northern zone of Austria, above 45 degrees north latitude, consisting of Bohemia, Silesia, and Galicia, in which the brunt of the warfare with the Russians has heretofore fallen, is visited by long and cold Winters. The mean annual temperature ranges from about 59 degrees in the south to 48 degrees in the north, and falling in some parts as low as 46 degrees or even 36 degrees. The average annual temperature in Vienna itself is 50 degrees, the highest being 94 degrees and the lowest 2 degrees Fahrenheit. In general, the eastern part of Austria, where the fighting has heretofore taken place, receives considerably less rain than the western part.

MRS. WHITNEY'S CORPS GOES TO PARIS TODAY

New York Woman with Nurse and Surgeons Reaches London on the Way to the Front.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 10.—Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, Robert Bacon, and the remaining twenty-seven members of her Red Cross party rushed into London this afternoon from the Lusitania, and gave the embassy several hours of hard work arranging for the continuation of their journey to Paris. In record time the French Consulate stamped its visé on the twenty-nine passports and then refused to accept the regulation fees, thus saving Mrs. Whitney $16, on the ground that she and her companions were on an errand of mercy toward French soldiers.

Mr. Bacon made a hurried visit to Ambassador Page, and was informed it would be wiser to wait for a train tomorrow morning via Folkstone than to start tonight via Southampton, which he and Mrs. Whitney decided to do.

Mr. Bacon said he had nothing to add to the interview given on leaving America. "I am here in purely a private capacity," he remarked. "My plans are vague and will depend on what I find in Paris. I am not attached in an official capacity to Mrs. Whitney's expedition, but naturally I am doing what I can to help her."

Mrs. Whitney spent a busy day conferring with the British Red Cross authorities and representatives of the French Embassy. She said:

"There is nothing to say about our corps beyond what is known in New York already. Naturally I want to get to the front as soon as possible. Our ten ambulances, which crossed aboard the Chicago to Havre, should be awaiting us there, but I cannot tell where we will go until we get to Paris. I only hope we shall do as good work as the American women already in France have been doing."

Mrs. Whitney is stopping at the Ritz. The surgeons and nurses who accompany her are at the Grand in charge of Dr. Martin.

GERMANS SHORT OF LEAD.

Levy on Music Trade for Supply Causes Dismay, American Says.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 10.—Besides the shortage of anaesthetics already reported, there is a considerable lack of lead in Germany, according to Dr. E. K. Johnstone of San Francisco, an officer in the United States Medical Reserve Corps, who has just returned from a long stay in Belgium.

Incidentally, Dr. Johnstone paid a high tribute to the German Red Cross, which he had opportunities of studying comprehensively. He expressed doubt that the Germans had used the Red Cross to protect them when carrying out attacks.

"It's impossible to guard against soldiers creeping forward under shelter of an ambulance or just behind a body of Red Cross attendants," Dr. Johnstone observed, "but I don't believe the German Red Cross lent itself officially to such a subterfuge.

"There is no doubt that supplies of lead are running low in Germany, owing to the stoppage of the mines in Galicia and Silesia. A few days before I left Berlin a secret order was issued calling upon the music stores to turn over to the Government all the lead in pianos, automatic pianos, and other musical instruments in which that metal is used. This demand, which, of course, is being rigorously enforced, has aroused feelings of the deepest dejection in the music trade, which foresees immediate ruin to itself in so drastic a step.

"The shortage of anaesthetics is due chiefly, I think, to the German General Staff's belief that the army could readily replenish its supply from captured French and Belgian medical stores. The French and Belgians, however, seem to have been particularly careful to prevent their drugs from falling into German hands, and as Germany does not produce the basic ingredients of ether or chloroform, the Red Cross is in bad shape in this respect."

Mitchell $1250

It Runs with Watch-Like Rhythm

THERE is a hidden secret about Mitchell cars, and a $1250 Mitchell in particular, that men buying automobiles should know.

It is balance of weight.

In a turbine engine balance of weight is the all important thing.

But in a motor car, balance means more than in any other machine, or in any structure.

Lack of balance affects power. It causes rapid tire wear.

It causes vibration and effects the rhythm of a car.

There is less than 5 per cent difference with the front wheels only of the Mitchell on the scales and the rear wheels only on the scales.

You can tell that Mitchell cars are balanced well because they run so smoothly.

The Overcoats of the Day!

Men's Knitted Overcoats

At $15

For $25 Quality

Really delightful coats to wear, as thousands of men already know. Light in weight, hence, not cumbersome. Soft in texture and very warm. Besides, the cloth is said by the makers to be absolutely rain-proof—we know ourselves that it will withstand a smart shower without wetting through.

Externally, these Overcoats look like a soft Shetland cloth—the inside reveals the finely Jersey knit effect.

They are made up in the excellent style illustrated—a new and popular model, with loose sleeves and skirt, and plain lapels or buttoning to the neck.

We have a limited number—250—of these Overcoats—which men will find comfortable to wear over evening dress, as well as in the daytime—to sell at the special price of $15—really of $25 standard, as men can prove to their own satisfaction. All sizes, 33 to 46.

SEEKS DIVIDENDS FROM THIRD AV. CO.

A. E. Cottier Asserts Money Due Stockholders Has Been Used to Extend the System.

HE WILL QUIZ WHITRIDGE

Man Who Forced Lehigh Valley Changes Asks Third Ave. Stockholders to Attend Meeting Today.

Alonzo E. Cottier, a stockholder of the Third Avenue Railway Company, who is recorded as owning 1,300 shares, intends at the annual meeting of the company today to ask why the company is paying no dividends, although it has spent a great deal of money to purchase additional street railway companies, and is paying its President, Frederick W. Whitridge, $60,000 a year. He does not want to make charges, he said last night at the Plaza, but he does want information, and he is advertising in order to obtain the support of other stockholders.

In the statement, which he publishes as an advertisement, Mr. Cottier points out that the stockholders of the old Third Avenue Railroad Company were compelled at the reorganization to pay the heavy assessment of $45 on each $100 of stock they held, and then he continues:

> After being deprived of any income during the long years of the receivership, and waiting patiently three years longer, from the formation of the new company, they are now informed with cynical frankness by President Whitridge that they needn't look for any dividends for years to come, as Whitridge expects to spend the dividend money for "other purposes." This in face of the fact that the company has accumulated on its $16,000,000 of stock since Jan. 1, 1912, probably about $2,000,000, or say 10 or 12 per cent. of surplus—notwithstanding what appears to have been an extravagant administration of affairs.

Small Stockholders Endangered.

"Another shareholder with twice as much stock as I own," Mr. Cottier said last night, "has pointed out what the inevitable effects of this policy will be. It is impossible for the small stockholders with only a few shares to hang on much longer. Some of them borrowed from the banks the assessment necessary to protect their equities in the old company. If things go on much longer in this way they must drop out, and they will be literally frozen out just as the company may begin to pay."

In this connection Mr. Cottier referred to a statement contained in the last annual report of the Third Avenue Railway Company, which said:

> It would not, therefore, be honest to pay a dividend until the time when the property is in such a condition that our allowance for depreciation will thereafter care for its needs over and above the ordinary maintenance, and further until the effect of the new subways on our earnings has been ascertained.

As the new subways were never intended to be opened before Jan. 1, 1917, and as it is admitted now that there is no hope of their being in operation for a year or more after that date, Mr. Cottier considers that this statement by Mr. Whitridge is melancholy reading for h's stockholders. It postpones almost indefinitely the date of putting the Third Avenue on a paying basis, and is calculated, Mr. Cottier says, to discourage those who are hanging on to their holdings only with the greatest difficulty.

The deals to which Mr. Cottier intends to call attention, and on which he wants the fullest information, are the purchase of the old Twenty-eighth and Twenty-ninth Street Crosstown Company, now the Mid-Crosstown Company; the old Central, North & East River Company, now the Belt Line Corporation, and the New York City Interborough Company.

The Twenty-eighth Street line was one of the subsidiaries of the old Metropolitan, which was thrown out by the receivers as worthless. It was then a horse-car line, and Mr. Whitridge as receiver of the old Third Avenue Railroad Company lent it storage battery cars and operated it as part of his system. Then he began negotiations for its purchase. He went before the Public Service Commission and asked permission to issue $500,000 4 per cent. bonds for the road.

Rejected Whitridge Purchase Plan.

The commission went into the question of the cost of reproducing the line and found it amounted only to $170,000, and into its earnings, and ascertained that in the four years it had lost $85,000, or about $40,000 a year. Consequently they declared that to authorize and stamp with the approval of the State of New York such a deal as Mr. Whitridge had proposed would be to sanction "the very same kind of operations which have brought a great railroad system in New England to the very verge of financial disaster."

So they ruled that the Third Avenue might give $150,000 for the line and, as their bonds were selling at 80, they might issue $187,000 of them, providing proper means for their complete amortization were provided. But while Mr. Whitridge only issued such bonds as the commission permitted, Mr. Cottier complains that he caused the Third Avenue Railway Company to issue its notes for the difference between the price he had proposed and the price the commission approved. Over the note issues of the Third Avenue Company the commission had no control, and so the Directors of the Third Avenue could do as they liked about them.

"It does not seem to me, as I told Mr. Whitridge," Mr. Cottier said last night, "that he had made a necessary purchase at a necessary price. Of course, there was talk of the value of getting a connection for the Third Avenue to the Pennsylvania Station, but paralleling Twenty-eighth Street is the Thirty-fourth Street line, which goes directly to the station, and I cannot believe that we shall develop much traffic in th's way. Other companies had abandoned the line as useless, and I cannot see where the profit comes in."

Bought Lines Over Shonts's Head.

In the Belt Line case the Third Avenue paid Edward Cornell for the Fifty-ninth Street line and the Belt Line, running down the east and west sides of the city, about $2,470,000, whereby Mr. Cornell, according to what Commissioner Maltbie told Mr. Cottier, made a profit of at least $300,000.

When the old Central Park Company was put up for auction at foreclosure sale it was expected that Theodore P. Shonts, President of the New York Railways Company, would buy it in for the upset price. He was on the County Court House steps, with his certified checks all ready, and a proceeding was in progress at the Public Service Commission to clear up certain formalities to make the purchase legal. Then, at the last moment, Mr. Cornell, a lawyer, who had never been heard of in traction circles, intervened and bought the line over Mr. Shonts's head. After a few weeks of negotiation, it was announced that the Third Avenue Railway Company would take the Belt Line Corporation off Mr. Cornell's hands.

"I'm not so certain about the value of the Belt Line," said Mr. Cottier last night, "but it is clear that the Third Avenue has been obliged to pay more for it in this way than it would have done if it had bought it at the auction instead of from Mr. Cornell. When I spoke to Mr. Whitridge about it he admitted that he had made a mistake, but why should a man getting a salary of $60,000 a year make such mistakes? He has no business to be asleep."

The other company in question is the New York City Interborough Company, which is a street railway concern running across the Bronx to connect the various north and south lines. Here Mr. Whitridge himself sold the line to the Third Avenue. He possessed the control partly as having received stock as a contractor, partly through the purchase of the stock as an intermediary. Before the Public Service Commission Mr. Whitridge testified that he made nothing out of [illegible]

If Mr. and Mrs. Robert D. Connors return to Tenafly, N. J., the bride, who was Miss Elizabeth C. Coppell until she married her chauffeur last April, will find The Towers, the Coppell family mansion, closed to her. Her brothers, Arthur and Herbert Coppell, have paid off the servants and practically closed the house, putting two policemen on guard there with instructions to bar the former mistress of the place and her husband.

The brothers said that by the will of their father the mansion was to be their sister's home only so long as she remained single, and now that she has married it reverts to the estate.

Mrs. Connors may enter the house if she insists, the brothers say, but presumably only to get her personal property, for Connors is barred absolutely. The bride also may remove her automobile from the garage, the brothers having notified the policemen that this was her personal property.

Until yesterday none of Mrs. Connors's family knew of her marriage, though for weeks it had been the gossip of Tenafly. One of her sisters visited her early in October and remained until about a fortnight ago, and while she was in Tenafly Connors disappeared, giving out the public explanation that "Miss Coppell" had reduced his wages and he had quit. When the sister left, Connors returned, and the next day he and his former employer started off in a big automobile.

The couple were discovered on Monday in Atlantic City, where they had stopped at the Marlborough-Blenheim Hotel, but dispatches from there yesterday told of their sudden departure and Connors's statement:

"We do not want any more notoriety. That is why we are leaving. Yes, this is the end of our honeymoon. We've had a pleasant trip, but there is nothing more to say. The papers said enough this morning."

Neither Connors nor his wife would say where they were going or whether they intended to return to Tenafly.

ing and selling her securities, Mrs. Mackenzie said, he prevented suspicion by paying her the full dividends and interest accruing from them. She had authorized him to collect her income for her, and as long as she received it regularly she never suspected Hartman of having disposed of her property. But early this year her suspicions were aroused, for then Hartman failed to pay the first dividend due. The fact was, Mrs. Mackenzie said, he had sunk every cent he had in his own ventures.

Indictment of Hartman.

But she did not know this, she continued, until much later, and accepted at the time his explanation that his lawyer, who had the securities, was ill and unable to collect the dividends for him. As the weeks passed Mrs. Mackenzie began to worry, and last April she went to Morris & Plante, lawyers at 27 Pine Street. When the attorneys found that Hartman had no money which Mrs. Mackenzie might recover they turned their evidence over to the District Attorney's office.

Assistant District Attorney Walter R. Deuel was assigned to the inquiry, and he had just about completed it day before yesterday, when he received information of Hartman's intended sailing. The case was rushed before the Grand Jury, and late Monday afternoon Judge Mulqueen of the Court of General Sessions signed a warrant for Hartman's arrest.

When arrested Hartman refused to talk about the charge. He engaged Harford T. Marshall of 34 Nassau Street as his counsel, and Mr. Marshall likewise refused to discuss the case, saying that he had not had time to familiarize himself with it. At Police Headquarters Hartman said he was 47 years old, lived in Tenafly, N. J., and had no place of business.

Hartman has been more or less conspicuous as a promoter for many years. He was heard from first in 1903, when he promoted the Sinaloa Railway and Smelting Company of Mexico, which, he said at the time, intended building a line across the Sierra Madré Mountains in three years. The railroad petered out soon and Hartman next sold stock in the Thomas Brace Rail Company, and was partly successful through the liberal use of the names of ex-Secretary of the Treasury Leslie M. Shaw and the Russian Government.

In Tyson Ticket Scandal.

After sinking large sums of money in various enterprises Hartman became the President of Tyson & Co. in the Spring of 1913. On Nov. 14 of the same year THE NEW YORK TIMES printed the news that Tyson & Co., which is not the same corporation as the Tyson Company, had bought $150,000 worth of season tickets to the Metropolitan Opera, for which subscribers had paid, and that he had pledged the tickets for a loan from the Metropolitan Trust Company. The money borrowed from the trust company was used by the ticket brokerage firm to buy more tickets.

A sensation was caused by THE TIMES'S exposure, and at once the District Attorney's office took steps against Hartman and Tyson & Co. The company was charged with grand larceny, and Hartman was threatened with indictment. Then suddenly the pledged tickets were redeemed, and the case against Tyson & Co. was not pressed. Shortly afterward the company was reorganized, and Hartman's connection with it was severed.

At about the same time that he became involved in the ticket scandal, Hartman paid several other large obligations and attempted to promote the manufacture of a cleaning compound called "Dus'troy." The promotion failed.

Hartman was arrested last June on a charge of perjury preferred by Harold G. Aron, senior member of the firm of Aron & Vanderveer, 30 Pine Street. He har made accusations of unprofessional conduct against Mr. Aron, which he had not been able to substantiate. He was released in $2,500 bail by Magistrate Ten Eyck, and, it is said, the case is still pending.

Mrs. Mackenzie has sought seclusion since she appeared before the Grand Jury last Monday. According to report, she is in ill health, and does not care to see any one. With the exception of a few jewels, it is said, she is penniless. According to her story, Hartman at one time persuaded her to put her jewelry in a safety deposit box which he rented in the Harriman National Bank. She allowed him to take the gems to the bank and thought no more about them until a few months ago. When she opened the box, she said, she found two diamond rings valued at $1,000 each missing. She charged Hartman with the theft.

Mrs. Mackenzie's name was mentioned in the newspapers in 1910, when she caused the arrest of a youth on a charge of having attempted to obtain $150 from her by blackmail.

CLOSE A WIRELESS PLANT.

Charge That Mexican Secret Station Aided German Ships.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—The Navy Department was informed today that a secret wireless station at Ensenada, Lower California, had been ordered closed by the Mexican authorities. The station, which was built close to the American border, is one of the several stations from which, according to British officials here, German cruisers in the Atlantic and Pacific have been receiving information concerning the whereabouts of English vessels.

The radio station at Los Angeles reported today merely that the Ensenada station was not operating, but from other sources came the information that on representations from foreign Consuls the plant had been ordered closed by the Mexican officials.

The Navy Department's radio experts and the United States Secret Service are continuing their search for wireless stations within the jurisdiction of the United States, which it is alleged are in secret communication with ships at sea in violation of neutrality regulations.

CALL FOR REFORMS IN ROADBUILDING

WANT EXPERTS EMPLOYED

Georgia's Use of Convicts to Build Highways Praised—Women Promise to Help Good Roads.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTA, Ga., Nov. 10.—Attacks on the spoils system were features of today's session of the American Road Congress held under the auspices of the National Civil Service Reform League. The various speakers asserted that no matter how much money the nation and the States might appropriate to build highways good results could not be obtained if the politicians were permitted to spend the funds and employ the road builders.

Richard Henry Dana, Chairman of the National Civil Service Reform League, discussed the general subject of road construction.

"Let me give some of the advantages that come from the employment of experts in road construction," he said. "It will save waste from poor plans, poor methods, and use of the wrong materials."

Moreover experts, Mr. Dana said, would save waste caused by "the employment of incompetent laborers, so as to give influential voters or friends of active politicians jobs at the expense of the public at high pay, and the inability to get a day's work for a day's pay from those otherwise competent men who know what they hold their jobs, not for what they do in road building, but through the political influence of the party boss behind the throne of the road authorities."

"It sounds more funny than fiction," Mr. Dana continued, "when we read from the report of James W. Osborne, special Commissioner to investigate the New York State Highway Department, that the Inspectors to pass on contract work were, some of them barbers, tailors, prizefighters, bartenders, and bakers, and as might be supposed their inspection was totally inadequate."

A. N. Johnson of the Bureau of Municipal Research of New York told of the results of State control of road work.

"What has been realized from State control of road work," he said, "may be thus summed up: The development of a system of main highways adapted to modern motor freight traffic which promises such great economic changes in both rural and urban life; increasing the efficiency of local road officials in the expenditure of the local taxes by preventing useless undertakings; by suggesting economic forms of construction and by increasing that economic service of the highways by concentrating expenditures on important roads and preventing waste on unimportant ones; the prevention of numerous accidents and fatalities by the construction of safe bridges and the elimination or treatment of railroad grade crossings in such a manner as greatly to lessen the danger from them. Experience has demonstrated that these ends are accomplished by State control of road work and only by such control."

Charles J. Bennett, Highway Commissioner of Connecticut, discussed laws regarding the construction of roads.

"The great fault with State highway laws," he said, "is that they are entirely too long and contain so much that is not pertinent. Most States have laws that no one can understand. They should be reframed so as to leave out all superfluous legal verbiage and be so constructed that the humblest citizen may read and understand them."

The Georgia system of road building by convicts was commended by J. F. Pennybacker of the United States Office of Public Roads.

"Georgia leads the United States in the matter of using convicts for the upbuilding of good roads," he said. "Whenever the remainder of the United States follows the lead of Georgia by placing convicts to work on the public roads, then we will obtain wonderful results."

The woman's auxiliary of the American Highway Association held a meeting today and heard addresses from a number of road experts. The women adopted a resolution pledging the auxiliary to work unceasingly for good roads. Various cities are contending for the honor of entertaining the Road Congress in 1915. Rochester, N. Y., has a booth in the middle of the auditorium in the armory, where its advantages are set forth. The City of Peoria, Ill., also wants the convention, and San Francisco also has entered the lists.

JOHN D. NOT ANAEMIC.

Pastor Says Oil Man Is in Good Health and a Pleasant Companion.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 10.—John D. Rockefeller is not an anaemic old gentleman with a citrous disposition, brought on by chronic indigestion; neither is he constantly in fear of assassination and afraid to laugh, for fear of being considered undignified. On the contrary, he is a pleasant companion, enjoys excellent health, and has an appetite that no day laborer might be ashamed of. He is possessed of a sharp wit, a ready laugh, and a kindly disposition, and enjoys life to the utmost.

The Rev. Dr. William W. Bustard, pastor of the Euclid Avenue Baptist Church, Cleveland, of which Mr. Rockefeller has been a member for more than sixty years, is authority for these statements.

Makes Your Bath Downright Fun

Instead of $200 to $300

Now Only $3.85

You and all your family can now enjoy the rich man's way of bathing—under a Four-Stream Needle Shower—with either hot or cold water—at a total cost of only $3.85.

If you know how luxurious and invigorating a Needle Shower is—how needle showers have heretofore cost almost as much as an automobile—how they have always required a special shower stall—couldn't be used on a bath tub at all—then you can realize what a wonderful opportunity this is.

Kenney Needle Shower

A Revolutionary Improvement—Regular Price $6
—Never Before a Cent Less—
Now—If You Hurry—Only $3.85

This new kind of needle shower is miles ahead of old-fashioned overhead showers, with their sloppy, clammy, unsanitary curtains, though it costs only a fraction as much.

Beats a plain tub bath forty ways. Makes either hot or cold water twice as stimulating and refreshing.

In Many Rich Men's Homes

This shower is fast being installed in many of the most expensive hotels. It is used by thousands of families who could afford to pay twenty times the price if more money would buy a bett r shower. (Names in book you get with the shower.)

All for a Penny a Day

And now—if you use the money-saving coupon below—only $3.85 complete—only a penny a day for a little more than a year—less than you pay for your daily papers.

Don't Wait—Next Week May Be Too Late

This, we believe, is the greatest value ever offered by the Riker-Hegeman stores. A shower like this at the regular price—$6—was looked upon as one of the most remarkable achievements in the business world. And now—for a limited time—only $3.85—a reduction of more than one-third.

Mail Orders Filled

If not convenient to call, simply mail the coupon and $3.85 together with postage, and a Shower will be delivered by Parcel Post. Add 8 cents for the first 100 miles, 16 cents for 250 miles, 20 cents for 500 miles.

CALLS SIEGEL CASE JUST PLAIN THEFT

HITS AT HIGH FINANCE

Uses Homely Illustrations to Show What Swindling by False Credit Statements Means.

Special to The New York Times.

GENESEO, N. Y., Nov. 10.—Assistant District Attorney Arthur C. Train opened the prosecution of Henry Siegel at 4:30 o'clock this afternoon before Justice William W. Clark in the Supreme Court here by telling the jury that the defendant, who once was a leader in the mercantile world, was charged simply with theft by deceit and trickery. By means of homely illustrations the Assistant District Attorney endeavored to impress the jury with the belief that this kind of stealing was the worst. Before the opening speech was made the prosecution scored twice against the defense when an objection and a motion made by John B. Stanchfield, Mr. Siegel's chief counsel, were overruled.

The jury, completed at 4:20 o'clock, was sworn in as follows: Edward Swan, farmer, Groveland; Albert Orman, farmer Avon; Stewart Russell, farmer; York; S. J. Macey, coal operator, Avon; Fred Niles, manufacturing company's employe, Portage; Frank Wilbur, farmer, Conesus, L. G. Sliker, farmer, Conesus; H. S. Linsner, farmer, Groveland; John Perrine, nurseryman, North Danville; E. R. Green, farmer, West Sparta; Frank Mills, farmer, Mount Morris, and Edward Heiman, farmer, Nunda.

The customary formalities [illegible] the swearing of the jury and then Mr. Train asked permission to read upon the record a statement which would leave no misunderstanding as to why the District Attorney had obtained the consent of the court to amend the original indictment. Mr. Stanchfield objected, but was overruled. The chief counsel for Mr. Siegel then made a motion to have the prosecution try the defendant on one of two counts. One of the counts charges larceny under the common law and the other charges grand larceny in the second degree. This motion also was overruled.

Justice Clark then dismissed for the term all jurors except those who had been called on the special panel, and the exodus half emptied the courtroom. The vacant seats were filled quickly, however, by nearly a hundred girls from the State Normal School. Wearing sweaters and school colors and felt hats of many hues, the girls gave the courtroom a striking appearance. They were very attentive to all that was happening and craned their necks to catch a glimpse of the man on trial.

Mr. Siegel followed Mr. Train's speech with close attention. He drew his chair close to the long table, where he was surrounded by his counsel, and leaned upon the table with his elbow, while his hand was placed upon his forehead.

"Siegel was indicted by the Grand Jury of New York County on April 7, 1914," said Mr. Train. The indictment, which may or may not play an important part in our progress, has been prepared in printed form and is more than 125 pages long.

"It can be boiled down to a single sentence. In plain English it charges Siegel with being a thief, but it charges him with being a thief in a particular way—not like the highwayman who assaults you on the road and takes your watch away from you, nor like the burglar who enters your home and takes your money away from you by force. You may have a chance with that kind of thief. But Siegel is charged with thieving by deceit and trickery."

Mr. Train then read to the jurymen Section 1,290 of the Penal Code defining larceny. Then he explained:

"If I induce you by means of lies to give up possession of your property, then I am a thief. There are just as many kinds of false pretenses by which a man may be induced to give up possession of his property, and there are just as many lies as there are ingenious minds to invent them."

Illustrations were employed so that the jury might understand thoroughly the charge in the indictment. Mr. Train told the jurors that they might be swindled out of money by a man who came to them with a poor variety of seed oats which he represented to be prolific. He also explained how they might be induced to accept in purchase of a horse a nugget of common iron pyrites given to them as gold. In either case they would be defrauded, because the other man had lied about the security.

The credit system next was explained to the jurymen. A dishonest farmer, Mr. Train said, could obtain a loan of $500 by submitting to his banker a false statement of the value of his crop, his land and houses, his farming implements and stock, and a false statement of the amount he owed and the amount of mortgage on his property.

The Assistant District Attorney further explained to the jurors that banks were forced nowadays to rely on credit statements. Because of the immense proportions to which modern business had grown it was impossible for them to inquire into the truth of all the statements of financial conditions of business enterprises submitted. Then Mr. Train, quickly changing his line of illustration, said:

"But against the man who comes to you with a smile on his face and a tall silk hat on his head and tells you he is worth a million dollars when he is in debt two million dollars and wants to borrow money, you have no protection. Neither have the thousands of depositors who have put their hard-earned savings in his bank. These men are the gold bricks of high finance. You will have a great deal to do with them in the next few days.

"Siegel is charged with going to the National Bank of Commerce in New York City and falsely pretending that three stores which he controlled—the Fourteenth Street Store of New York, the Simpson-Crawford Company store of New York, and the Henry Siegel Company store of Boston—were prospering, and that their assets exceeded their liabilities by nearly $2,000,000. He induced the bank to give to one of these stores credit for $100,000 instead of making known the fact that Henry Siegel had lost $4,000,000 in these three stores, and that the Boston store had never earned a cent from theday it was started, and that the Fourteenth Street Store, instead of being solvent, with capital intact, as he pretended, had lost $250,000 the very year he went there.

"They demanded a statement over his signature and thatof his partner, Vogel, because they could not investigate the statement. On the strength of this statement the bank parted with $100,000."

GOES TO FIGHT FOR ENGLAND

Son of Manager of White Star Line Volunteers.

Philip A. Curry, eldest son of P. A. Curry, Director and Manager of the White Star and American Lines at Southampton, England, sails today on the Red Star liner Lapland, with a number of British volunteers, to enlist for active service. He is taking with him several bales of blankets, woolen coats socks, bandages, belts, and 50,000 cigarettes, which have been donated by Mr. Curry's American friends as Christmas presents for the soldiers at the front.

Thomas Thorne of Wadi Halfa, Egypt; David Lindsay, Harvey Mead, and a number of others well known in the passenger department of the New York shipping trade gave Mr. Curry a farewell luncheon yesterday and wished him a safe return to New York.

IRISH LEAGUE HAS NO GERMAN AFFILIATION

200 Branches Disclaim Any Alliance with German-American Societies.

REPLY TO TIMES EDITORIAL

Chairman Doyle Calls Such Compacts Dangerous to American Citizenship.

At a meeting of the United Irish League of America, held last night in the Emmet Arcade Building, at Madison Avenue and Fifty-ninth Street, the organization disclaimed affiliation with any German-American societies.

This announcement was made by the acting Chairman, Dr. John G. Doyle, as the result of a statement printed recently in The Gaelic American, the organ of an American-Irish society, that the Clan-na-Gael was "at present politically affiliated" with some German-American societies. Dr. Doyle said that any affiliations which this society might have were in no way representative of the sentiment among Irishmen in this country generally.

A copy of a letter sent to THE TIMES by Secretary John P. Hayes was read and loudly applauded. In it reference was made to an editorial in THE TIMES on the reported affiliation between the two nationalities.

"In an editorial a few days ago THE TIMES mentioned, with a note of astonishment, the claim made by a correspondent that there was an alliance between the Germans and the Irish citizens in the United States, and suggested the unpleasant or dangerous possibilities of such alliances. THE TIMES was right in its implications that such alliances constitute a danger to good American citizenship and to single-hearted devotion to the interests of this country.

"There is no such alliance between German citizens and Irish citizens in the United States. There is an alliance between a society of Irishmen, known as the Clan-na-Gael and some societies who call themselves German-American societies. The Clan-na-Gael is composed of Irishmen with revolutionary ideas, who have always opposed the constitutional means adopted by the great majority of the Irish people. The Clan-na-Gael is a secret organization, with secret society methods. No alliance that it may enter into can have any effect except upon its own diminishing numbers."

At last night's meeting about 200 branches of the league were represented. It was announced that what probably will be the last convention of the organization will be held in the Hotel Astor on Dec. 8 and 9, when John Redmond, leader of the Irish Parliamentary Party, is expected to address the convention. Although the league was organized to promote the fight for home rule in Ireland, it was explained, it will not go out of existence now that the Home Rule act has been passed in the English Parliament.

Jared Flagg's Case Goes Over.

Jared Flagg was to have been before Judge Rudkin yesterday morning in the Federal Court for the decision of his motion for a new trial, and, in case of denial, for sentence. His counsel, John M. Coleman, however, said that he had discovered new evidence, and the case was adjourned until Friday.

Arnold, Constable & Co.

Three Great Epochs in Their History and a GREAT REMOVAL CLEARANCE SALE

Especially Arranged for Today, Thursday and Friday

The year 1914 has written into the History of Arnold, Constable & Co. an event, perhaps the most important in its nearly a century of existence.

The first Great Event was the establishment of the business in Manhattan at Canal and Mercer Streets in 1827.

The second Great Event was the removal to the present site, Broadway and Nineteenth Street, in 1868, after a period of forty-one years of successful merchandising.

The third Great Event is the recent securing of a site on Fifth Avenue and 40th Street, most favorable to the convenience of our friends and the public, in the very heart of the fashionable shopping district. The building to be erected thereon will be completed in 1915.

In this new location, in a new building with new fixtures and new surroundings, only the newest and most up-to-the-minute goods can have a place. It therefore becomes necessary prior to removal to close out everything now on our shelves, at prices that will bring to a successful end this determination on our part.

We have therefore inaugurated a series of Removal Clearance Sales which will continue from day to day. Each of these Sales will consist of the regular high grade Merchandise on hand at the time, all generously repriced for the occasion, and affording an unequalled opportunity for economical and satisfactory purchasing.

Thousands of other articles, not advertised, but of equally attractive value, will be daily on Sale.

WARM ROOM LED HER TO VISIT CLERGYMAN

Mrs. Brashears, Suing for Slander, Tells Why She Went to His Apartment.

DEFENDANT A WOMAN OF 70

Admits She Told Protege of Report That Minister Asked Complainant to "Get Out."

The only reason in the world why Mrs. Marion W. Brashears visited the Rev. Mr. Baker's private apartment in a Portland (Ore.) boarding house was that his room was the warmest and easiest in the place, while her own was insufficiently heated, she explained yesterday at the trial of her $50,000 suit for slander before Judge Hand in the United States District Court. Mrs. Brashears is suing her one-time friend, Mrs. Susan W. Smith of Shelbyville, Ky., who, though more than 70 years old, she says, circulated scandalous stories of her conduct with the handsome young minister, all of which hurt her socially in Portland.

Mrs. Brashears, a handsome woman, was effective in a suit of green velvet trimmed with red fox and a toque to match. She was self-possessed, and testified with well-controlled expression. She is treasurer of the Favary Tire and Cushion Company of 111 Broadway, and in Portland in 1909 was engaged with Mrs. Smith in marketing the stock of her company. Incidentally, she declared, Mrs. Smith had sold only 137½ shares to her 1,860. Both lodged with Mrs. O. W. Denny, widow of a former Consul General at Shanghai and counsel to the Korean Government. There also lodged Mr. Baker.

Mrs Smith testified regarding a statement to a protegé of hers, Miss Mary A. Case, a contralto, who admitted on the stand that Mrs. Smith had practically adopted her and had educated her in this city, Boston, and Paris. The defendant admitted having said:

"Mrs. Denny told me that Mrs. Taylor told her that she overheard Mr. Baker tell Mrs. Brashears: 'For Heaven's sake, get out of my room and stay out.'"

Mrs. Taylor was a friend of Mrs. Denny. In a deposition which was read, Mrs. Denny corroborated this testimony of Mrs. Smith. She also said:

"On two occasions Mrs. Brashears was in the parlor with the Rev. Mr. Baker, and on each of these occasions Mrs. Brashears asked me if I would mind if she locked the door. I objected, but, nevertheless, the door was locked. Then I decided to raise her rent, thinking Mrs. Brashears would not pay more, and the scheme worked. She left."

Mrs. Smith was sure that with the exception of her statement to the young woman she regarded practically as her daughter, and who called her "Mommey," she had circulated no tales whatever about Mrs. Brashears.

BERKMAN OUT ON BAIL.

Anarchist to Celebrate Anniversary of Attempt to Murder Frick.

Magistrate Simms in the Essex Market Court released Alexander Berkman, the anarchist, yesterday under $1,000 bail to await action of the Grand Jury, after he had waived examination on a charge of felonious assault.

The charge, which grew out of the arrest of Berkman and four of his anarchist comrades, at Ninth Street and Second Avenue, on Monday, was made by Policeman Wagner, who alleged that Berkman seized his nightstick while he was trying to arrest others of the party.

As he left the court Berkman said that tomorrow would be the twenty-first anniversary of his attempt to kill Henry C. Frick. He proposed to celebrate the anniversary, he said, by lecturing to anarchists in Pittsburgh, where he served fourteen years in prison.

To keep this engagement, Berkman left for Pittsburgh last night. He said he would be back whenever the Grand Jury wanted him.

POLICE FINALLY GET 'PHANTOM' POOLROOM

Gamblers Moved Location from Day to Day, Hoping to Evade Detectives.

PHONE TRAVELED WITH THEM

Raid Made at Last Address, 599 Broadway, Results in Arrest of Seventy-five Men.

For more than a week detectives of Inspector Wakefield's staff had been hearing of a mysterious poolroom. Now it was reported here and now there until the police came to know it as the Phantom Poolroom. Every man who took up the chase could discover where the room had been the day before and could hear tales of big play, but not one of them could catch up with the elusive gamblers until Detectives Costuma and Burnell, tracing the room from a loft in Eleventh Street, which it occupied on Saturday, to a place in Sixth Street, where the crowd met Monday, made friends with a man yesterday, who invited them to join the Old Van Rip Club.

It was the Phantom Poolroom, the detectives were satisfied, and, playing the parts of out-of-town sports, they quickly accepted the invitation to join the club. Each received a membership card from his new acquaintance and each was told that the betting yesterday would be done in a rear loft on the second floor of 599 Broadway, just south of Houston Street.

Costuma and Burnell were on hand and their cards obtained them ready admission to a half loft, separated only by a six-foot partition from an embroidery factory, where five girls worked with needles while seventy-five men wagered, less than a dozen feet away, on the results at Pimlico. There was only one telephone in the room, and the detectives learned that a new loft was selected each day, arrangements made for the installation of a single telephone, and word of the new address and the necessary admission cards passed out to the faithful daily. They learned, too, that the lofts were hired for at least a week in advance so that there might be no interruption of the betting.

After they had made their bets one of the detectives slipped out and notified Inspector Wakefield. The latter summoned men from the Church, Beach, Elizabeth, Macdougal, Mulberry, Charles, and Mercer Street stations, and with Capt. Donohue of the Macdougal Street Station and nine patrol wagons, he led them to the loft building. They guarded the stairs, the elevator, the roof, fire escapes and rear yard, and then a dozen or so broke into the room. There were seventy-five men inside, and all were captured.

John Brown, who said he was a clerk of 944 Kelly Street, the Bronx, was charged with keeping and maintaining the place, and the others, charged with disorderly conduct, were packed into the patrol wagons and lugged off to the various precinct houses. According to the police, The Phantom Poolroom has given them more trouble than any other single place ever operated in this city.

INQUIRY INTO WOODEN CARS.

Utilities Board Will Pass on Proposal to Bar Them in the Subway.

In the Subway the Interborough is operating 477 cars which are not constructed entirely of steel. Commissioner Cram brought this up yesterday at the meeting of the Public Service Commission and said that as in the last seven years only two of these had been replaced by steel cars it would at the same rate be the next century before all these cars were retired from service. He suggested that a hearing be held to determine why the company should not at once substitute steel for composite cars.

Commissioner Williams pointed out that the old cars, of which Commissioner Cram complained, had steel frames and were sheathed with copper, so they could not be called wooden cars fairly. The commission set Monday, Nov. 30, as the date for a hearing on the subject, and suggested that the old cars turned out of the Subway might be used up on the elevated railroad extensions.

BROOKLYN CHEMIST KILLED BY A DRUG

Hermann Dann Found Dying in Locked Room in Camden, N. J., Hotel.

WAS ON BUSINESS TRIP

Had Been with Charles Pfizer & Co. for Fourteen Years Until a Few Weeks Ago.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMDEN, N. J., Nov. 10.—A man believed to be Hermann Dann of Brooklyn was found dying from an overdose of a drug in a room in the Vendig Hotel late this afternoon. He was rushed to the Hahnemann Hospital, where physicians vainly used a pulmotor for fifteen minutes. Dann did not revive.

He registered at the hotel early this morning and was not seen after he went to his room. A maid tried to get into the room several times, and at 4 o'clock notified Manager Walsh, who had the door forced open.

In the man's pockets were found cards bearing the name of Hermann Dann, 923 Lincoln Place, Brooklyn, N. Y. He was about 40 years old, of medium height, and wore a blue coat, gray trousers, and black derby hat. The index finger of his left hand had been amputated.

Hermann Dann lived with his wife and son, William S. Dann, at 923 Lincoln Place, Brooklyn, and had been employed till a few weeks ago as an expert chemist in the factory of Charles Pfizer & Co., at 11 Bartlett Street, Brooklyn. Mrs. Dann said last night that he had left home on Monday for a business trip to Philadelphia, and that they had heard nothing from him until the news of his death reached them yesterday afternoon.

He was in good health and spirits when he left, she asserted. His son intimated, however, that he had been in poor health for some time past. The son left for Camden immediately on hearing of his father's death.

It is understood that Mr. Dann's errand to Philadelphia was to place a business proposition before the chemical firm of Powers, Weightman & Co. of that city. What success his proposal had is unknown.

Dann was born in Germany in 1872, but had lived in Brooklyn for a long time. He was in the employ of Charles Pfizer & Co. for fourteen years.

GOVERNORS IN CONFERENCE

Laws for Incorporation of Land Banks Urged by Committee.

MADISON, Wis., Nov. 10.—Incorporation of land mortgage banks under both State and Federal laws was favored today by the Committee on Rural Credits of the Governors' Conference. The committee's report, presented by Gov. Emmet O'Neal of Alabama, recommended uniform legislation regarding registration of land titles, foreclosure and taxation of mortgages, around which much confusion now centres. The Torrens land title system was indorsed.

Uniformity along these lines, Gov. O'Neal said, would give the farmer access to funds of savings banks, trust funds under the control of courts, and a reserve of large insurance companies. In this outcome he saw the one great opportunity for the farmers of America to obtain adequate funds for agricultural development. He recommended that the conference appoint a sub-committee to prepare a new Federal bill to meet the conditions and defects as he outlined them.

The State should extend adequate credit to settlers, Gov. A. O. Eberhart of Minnesota said, just as in his Commonwealth public funds are loaned to municipalities and schools. He saw grave difficulties in the way of a uniform system of rural credits owing to the varying rates of interest in different sections.

Mayor John Purroy Mitchel of New York telegraphed to urge the Governors to consider adopting relation of State to municipality as the general subject for discussion at the 1915 conference. He suggested that the conference be held at San Francisco, and that it join with a national conference of Mayors to consider this object.

Gov. Walsh of Massachusetts was among the arrivals tonight.

BEER TRUTHS

"A mild stimulant such as Beer, made of wholesome materials in an absolutely hygienic way, meets an adult human need that is almost universal."

We advertise these facts to convey to the public mind the real truth about Beer.

Beer is a *TEMPERANCE beverage in the strictest sense of the word.

It is a food product and is rarely used to excess.

The great scientist, Baron von Liebig, recognized the nutritive value of Barley-Malt and the Tonic qualities of Hops as contained in BEER, and rightly called it Liquid Bread.

Beer is not only a mild, nourishing beverage, but is the very purest of foods in liquid form.

It quenches the thirst, stimulates the appetite, aids digestion and nourishes the body.

Men and women who live at high pressure find good Beer invaluable, as it enables them to continue in good health under the most trying conditions.

The moderate use of good, wholesome Beer has always been recommended by eminent medical authorities.

Physicians strongly advocate its use in moderation and prescribe it for nursing mothers and to their nervous and anaemic patients because of its food value and upbuilding qualities.

When the public realizes the NUTRITIVE and DIGESTIVE qualities of Pure Beer, all prejudice against Beer will be removed.

RUPPERT'S Knickerbocker

The Beer That Satisfies

is a Beverage of absolute purity. Made of the highest quality ingredients and subjected to the various processes of Brewing, Filtering, Aging, Bottling and Pasteurization, that assure a finished product that is unsurpassed by any Beer made anywhere on earth.

CHICAGO WILL RAISE BAN ON CATTLE

Rid of Plague Germs, Great Stock Yards Will Reopen on Sunday.

KENTUCKY IS SHUT OFF

Fourteen States Now Under Government Quarantine—Disease Reported Spreading in the West.

CHICAGO, Nov. 10.—Believing that disinfection has killed the germs of the foot and mouth disease in the great inclosure, the Chicago Stock Yards will reopen for business next Sunday at midnight, when shipments of live stock from all non-infected districts will be received and the slaughter of animals will be resumed.

In determining infected districts the county will be used as the unit by the Government officials in enforcing quarantine. Under this plan every county in Illinois, Iowa, Wisconsin, and other infected States where a case of the foot and mouth disease has appeared will be prohibited from shipping live stock to the Chicago Stock Yards until further notice.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—Fourteen States are now under quarantine because of the foot and mouth disease. Kentucky was added to the list today, reports of infection in that State coming with news of further spread of the epidemic in Indiana, Ohio, and Michigan. Extension of the infected districts in the Middle West surprised and somewhat discouraged officials of the Department of Agriculture, who had expressed the belief that the epidemic had been brought under control in that region.

The only State now under suspicion is Mississippi, where a strange malady in a herd of cattle at Como is being investigated.

Department officials said today they had been unable to account for the peculiar virulency of the disease in the present outbreak, the most serious in the country's history. Another thing that is puzzling the experts is the fact that more swine have been affected than in previous epidemics.

It was explained at the department that while Dr. Simon Flexner of the Rockefeller Institute was expected to go into the infected regions to study the disease, he would act in a private capacity.

GUARD OUR MEAT SUPPLY.

Federal and State Authorities Plan to Prevent Famine.

In order to prevent further spread of the foot and mouth disease in this State, Commissioner Calvin J. Huson of the State Department of Agriculture issued an order yesterday that no cattle, sheep, goats, or hogs should leave any farm in the State before Oct. 16. As the incubation period of the disease is from two to six days, livestock that has been exposed to the infection will show symptoms within that time. After Oct. 16 the ban on the removal of cattle will be removed county by county.

Dr. H. D. Gill, representing the State Department of Agriculture in this city, said yesterday that the stockyards which had been closed in this city would remain closed until Oct. 18. No new cases of the disease have been found in this city. Suspected cases were reported from Erie County yesterday.

The slaughter houses in this city continue in operation. Cattle shipped from States not quarantined will arrive in sealed stock cars under Government supervision, and will be unloaded directly at the slaughter houses.

The Government and State officials are making every effort to insure a steady supply of live stock and dressed meat for this city, and thus far no increase in the price of meat has been reported. Some of the wholesale meat dealers say that the price is stationary here because there has been a marked falling off in the demand for meat since the epidemic was reported.

Dr. R. M. Mullings of the United States Bureau of Animal Industry, who has been put in charge of the fight against the disease in New Jersey, said yesterday that no new cases of the disease had been reported in that State, but five herds had been quarantined. Since the disease was detected in a herd bought in this city in October and taken to the farm of Theodore Webber in Hudson County it had been learned, Dr. Mullings said, that 510 cattle of the same lot had been shipped from the West Fortieth Street stock yards to farms in Monmouth, Burlington, Cumberland Counties, and Long Island. Cattle from these farms have been sent to different States.

Dr. J. D. Dunkel, Acting Inspector of the Bureau of Animal Industry in this city, informed transportation companies yesterday that they might receive for interstate or foreign transportation imported packages of goods and merchandise packed in hay and straw provided the shipper filed with them an affidavit that the packages were intact as originally imported. Dr. Dunkel also informed importers that imported packages of merchandise packed in hay and straw might be shipped out of the State intact as received from foreign countries, provided they furnished a guarantee that consignees would burn the packing.

New Jersey Orders Quarantine.

TRENTON, N. J., Nov. 10.—The State Board of Health today ordered a permanent quarantine on the shipment of cattle in New Jersey, because of the prevalence of the foot and mouth disease in this State. All cattle shipped into New Jersey since Oct. 1 are to be held under inspection until further notice.

Close Roads to Travel.

WORCESTER, Mass., Nov. 10.—Three cases of hoof and mouth disease were discovered today in a herd of thirty-five cattle on the farm of Morris Levine in North Grafton by Dr. Edward A. Cahill of the Massachusetts Bureau of Animal Industry. The farm was placed under quarantine, and roads leading to the place were closed to travel by order of the Inspectors.

SPICE OF GARLIC, $1.50.

Man Who Gives Dinner from Carte du Jour Complains of Cost.

"I don't kick at having to pay good prices," an irate patron of high-priced restaurants was saying yesterday, "but, I ask you, isn't $1.50 for garlic rather strong? As for me, the recollection almost makes me weep.

"I was giving a dinner for six last night, and as a part of the dinner I ordered two racks of lamb. The price on the carte du jour was $8 a rack. That's pretty high, but these are high times. I have a great opinion as to the merits of a dash of garlic in cookery, so to the waiter who took my order I suggested that the dish on which the lamb was to be served should be rubbed with garlic, as one frequently does in making a salad.

"When the bill came, the item for the racks of lamb was not $16, but $17.50. The waiter could not explain the increase. I called for the head-waiter. He went to the checker and came back.

"'The rack of lamb, plain, would have been $16,' he explained. 'The extra $1.50 was for the garlic.'

"One cent would have covered the cost of the garlic, and another cent would have covered labor and all overhead charges. I figure that the profit to the house on that garlic was 7,500 per cent. And yet they tell you there is no money in running a restaurant."

KINGSBURY FORCED TO RESPITE THORNE

Witness in Civil Service Investigation Had Been Suspended.

"INTIMIDATION," SAYS NEU

Coudert for Charities Commissioner Says He Regrets Charges Were Made at This Time.

At yesterday's session of the investigation of the local Civil Service Commission by the State Commission it was brought out by Frank Moss, Special Deputy Attorney General in charge of the investigation, that Angus P. Thorne, Superintendent of Dependent Adults of the Charities Department, had been suspended by Charities Commissioner Kingsbury and will be tried by the Commissioner on a charge of giving false testimony. The trial was to have been held today, but was called off by Commissioner Kingsbury after Chairman Neu of the State Commission and Mr. Moss had vigorously protested against its going on at this time.

Thorne testified at a previous session that Mrs. Isabel Mullan, a relative of Tax Commissioner George V. Mullan, former law partner of Mayor Mitchel, had been reinstated in the department as a hospital helper, at the request of Deputy Commissioner Doherty, after being dropped, and that Doherty had urged the reinstatement on the ground that the Mayor was much interested in her case. Doherty denied that he had mentioned the Mayor.

Chairman Neu and Mr. Moss vigorously opposed the action of Commissioner Kingsbury at this time on the ground that it would intimidate witnesses who might be called.

"It is a very serious thing," said Commissioner Neu, "so far as this investigation is concerned, if witnesses who are to appear before this commission are to be intimidated or are to be browbeaten or anything else by Commissioner Kingsbury during this investigation."

"I do not think that is a proper conclusion to draw until we know the facts," replied Frederic R. Coudert, counsel for the Municipal Civil Service Commission. "I don't know whether Mr. Kingsbury intimidated Thorne or not. I don't know about it, and I don't know whether you, Mr. Commissioner, know anything more about it than I do, which is nothing at the present time."

Later Mr. Coudert made this announcement:

"I communicated with Mr. Kingsbury indirectly by telephone as promptly as possible, and found to my regret that it was a fact that charges had been preferred as stated, and I advised Mr. Kingsbury I considered it very unfortunate that such action had been taken at this time, and that, in my judgment, the question of Mr. Thorne's actions should be held in abeyance until the completion of this inquiry. My present advice is the charges have been withdrawn."

On behalf of Dr. Henry Moskowitz, Chairman of the Municipal Commission, Mr. Coudert announced that an investigation would be started today into the appointment on Sept. 20 of ten elmbers and pruners in the Department of Parks in Queens. Mr. Coudert said the local commission was glad the State Commission had brought the matter to its attention. According to Mr. Moss, the appointees obtained their positions on primary day in connection with the candidacy of a Queens County politician.

Two young women of the forty-seven expert examiners of the Charities Department were put on the stand, and Mr. Moss attempted to show that while they had been appointed as experts they possessed no unusual qualifications for the work.

Miss Catherine G. Gleason said she was appointed by Deputy Commissioner Doherty after about five minutes' conversation with him, and Miss Bernadine K. Scherman gave similar testimony. Both said they had been interviewed on Friday, received their notice of appointment on Saturday night, and went to work the following Monday morning.

The hearing will go on today.

Cut Million Off Haggin Assessment.

H. E. Moller appeared at the Tax Department yesterday and swore off $1,000,000 of personal assessment on the estate of James B. Haggin, the late turfman. The original assessment was on $2,000,000. Commissioner Charles T. White cut the assessment in half when he learned that two of the executors of the estate are non-residents. Moller is one of the executors. Haggin's home was at 1 East Sixty-fourth Street.

SPHINX CLUB VOTES FOR BIG NEW HOME

Building as Headquarters for Advertising and Publicity Men to be Erected.

NEAR TIMES SQUARE REGION

Forty Sites to be Considered by Committee Named at Waldorf Dinner.

Following suggestions made by Joseph H. Appel, the Sphinx Club at its one hundred and thirty-fifth dinner at the Waldorf-Astoria, last night, voted unanimously for the erection of a big advertising building near Times Square. The structure is to house all societies dealing with advertising or with publicity in any of its phases. The Sphinx Club itself will not attempt to own or control the building, but will try to collect pledges enough to guarantee a builder a full quota of tenants.

In outlining the project Mr. Appel, who served for several months as Chairman of a committee of investigation, showed that two new "neighborhood communities" were building up, and both were bidding for the proposed structure.

"The New York Central Railroad Company, in charge of the Grand Central terminal," said Mr. Appel, "is competing with the Pennsylvania, which also has a new station, for neighborhood advantages. Both of them have one of these neighborhoods or we can put up a building near the centre where the advertising interests are now located. The Altman Foundation has a whole block under its control in Fifth Avenue, between Thirtieth and Thirty-first Streets. It proposes to put up a sixteen-story building there, and I am informed that we can obtain leases on this structure.

"In addition to these three desirable sites the lessees of Madison Square Garden have suggested that they would like to find tenants for a twelve-story building to be erected on the present site of the Garden.

"Roughly, our committee has decided that the building to be desirable would have to be somewhere in a circle bounded by the Grand Central Station, Thirtieth Street and Fifth Avenue, the Pennsylvania station, Times Square, and Forty-fourth Street, from Seventh to Fourth Avenue."

It was stated that enough tenants to make the proposed building a success were already on the committee's roster. Those named with Mr. Appel to complete the task of providing a building, were George Ethridge, R. F. R. Huntsman, A. C. G. Hammesfahr, Paul Meyer, James O'Flaherty, and H. C. Brown. They were instructed to consult with the Executive Committee of the club as to final plans, and to insist that the building contain, in addition to office rooms, a club room, a co-operative library, and a convention hall. More than fifty sites had been offered by twenty different real estate firms, it was announced.

To Greet Bouck White at Jail Gate.

Bouck White, who had to be ejected from the Fifth Avenue Baptist Church last Summer because he persisted in interrupting the services to debate with the Rev. Cornelius Woelfkin, gets out of the Queens County Jail tomorrow morning. He has served six months. A delegation from the Church of the Social Revolution, of which he is pastor, will meet him and escort him to the new headquarters of the church at 46 East Twenty-fifth Street. At a reception in the evening he will outline his plans for another attempt to engage Mr. Woelfkin in debate.

Thin Waltham Watches

Especially with evening dress a thin wafer-like watch is much desired. The trouble with most thin watches is that their thinness is their only virtue—they do not keep time.

At Waltham, accuracy is the cardinal virtue of every timepiece made. That is achieved first, and other qualities follow.

Some friend of yours would like one of these thin Walthams for Christmas—maybe you would like one yourself. The price is not at all ruinous.

WELL-TOLD STORIES

THE HOUSE OF LOVE
By ELIZABETH CHENEY

"The story is sweetly religious, distinctly wholesome, and very well told. Doris is not a spineless, milk-and-water character, without force, vitality, and capacity. She is an intensely active, normal child, who, by some keen intuition, grasped a great spiritual truth. She some way learned that we may dwell in the house of God's all-embracing love, and that he who trustfully dwells there is safe. . . . I know of nothing in late fiction that teaches a more beautiful lesson in a more beautiful way. It should have a large sale and a wide reading. While it is a story for the young especially, it is a story that all will enjoy."—(Rev.) Daniel McGuire, Dayton, Ohio.

THE STORY OF MARCO
By ELEANOR H. PORTER
Author of "Pollyanna"
Size, 12mo (4¾x7¼ inches). Illustrated. Pages, 326. Binding, cloth. Price, net, $1.00, postpaid.

Marco, the hero of this fascinating tale, a famous violinist, was brought up in a gypsy camp. By rare good fortune, a philanthropic artist heard him play and immediately determined to bring him in contact with a richer and higher life, and give him a finished musical training. His development into a great artist, and the supreme event of his life—meeting again, through the playing of an old air, the girl who was his constant companion in gypsy camp days—are related with true literary skill, and form the basis for a novel of unusual interest.

ON AND OFF SHORE
By GEORGE W. D'VYS

"It is a capital story, clean and inspiring, filled with adventures on sea and on land, but sound and healthy in all its teachings. The opening incident is a key to the spirit of the book. The hero scores the winning run for his school on a close play in a baseball match, and the umpire calls him safe. He, however, publicly acknowledges that he was out, and so stands for fair play to the loss of the game. There is considerable mystery and some stirring trips on the sea, with a real Gloucester flavor, but in the end the hero clears up the past and readers bid him farewell on the threshold of a successful business career with his character fully developed. All boys will like this story, and girls and grown-ups, too, will read it with interest and profit."—Somerville Journal, Mass.

THE THREE RIVERS KIDS
By FRANK H. CHELEY
Size, 12mo (5x7½ inches). Pages, 265. Binding, cloth. Price, net, $1.00, postpaid.

An interesting narrative of camping out days for boys, written by a man who is an up-to-date expert on boys' work. This book is an account of a boys' camp at which The Three Rivers Kids, with others, spent a season. It gives an interesting description of various things that belong to a boys' camp, and weaves in a story as a connecting link. The portraiture of the ordinary boy is splendidly done. The influence of the manly, wholesome lads affects the entire camp.

TANNER AS HARMONIZER

State Chairman Expects to See Hatchets Buried at December Meeting of Committee.

One outcome of the Republican victory in this State will be a determined effort to harmonize the factions in the Republican State organization, if possible, on a "progressive" basis, under the leadership of Gov.-elect Charles S. Whitman. Frederick C. Tanner, Chairman of the Republican State Committee, and himself a Republican of the "progressive" type, said yesterday that the work was already under way with prospect of success and that he hoped to see the factional hatchets buried for good at a meeting of the Republican State Committee and the Republican County Chairmen which he expects to call for the first week in December.

The fact that ex-Chairman William Barnes, when he declared his intention not to seek re-election to the Republican State Committee, virtually eliminated himself as a cause for contention, has made the work of peacemaking a great deal easier than it would have been otherwise.

Mr. Barnes, it was learned yesterday, intends to take up his residence in this city and devote himself in the nearest future to building up the national organization of the Republican Party along lines similar to those he followed in rebuilding the Republican organization in this State. Mr. Whitman, also, who admittedly received the support of Republicans, regardless of faction, it is expected, will be a strong factor in the movement to bring the warring factions together behind a "progressive" Republican programme.

Gov.-elect Whitman has received assurances from nearly all the "Old Guard" leaders in the Republican organization that they will lift no finger to hinder any reform programme he may care to initiate at Albany. It was on the opposition of leaders like William Barnes, Francis Hendricks, George W. Aldridge, and others of the Old Guard that many of the reforms Charles E. Hughes, when he was Governor, sought to inaugurate in this State, failed.

Mr. Whitman said last night that he was not prepared to announce any appointments as yet, but admitted that he had approached a number of high-class men whom he desired to appoint to administrative positions in his administration. While Mr. Whitman admitted having offered places to several men, he declared that not a single appointment had been decided upon as yet.

"I do not think," said Mr. Tanner last night, "that there will be any wholesale throwing out of Democratic office holders at Albany right away, as has been intimated. I think I know Mr. Whitman well enough to state that he will do nothing hurriedly or in a manner that might suggest patronage grabbing. There will be plenty of time for Mr. Whitman to carry out his scheme of house cleaning in an orderly and deliberate manner. I am assured that Mr. Whitman just now is giving more thought to his legislative programme than he is to providing jobs for office seekers."

SWORN IN FOR CANVASS.

Aldermen Begin Work on Vote Today—Budget Received.

The Aldermen were sworn in by County Clerk Schneider at noon yesterday as a Board of County Canvassers to canvass the vote cast at the recent election. Alderman Charles Delaney was made Chairman, a position he has held for twelve years. The canvass will begin this morning at 10:30 o'clock in the Aldermanic Chamber.

At 1 o'clock the Aldermen met in special session at the call of the Mayor to receive the tax budget as passed by the Board of Estimate. They have twenty days to consider the budget, which was referred to the Finance Committee. It was announced the committee would hold public hearings regarding it beginning tomorrow at 10:30 A. M.

That the Aldermen intend to investigate throughly the increases in the salaries of George L. Tirrell and Tilden Adamson, heads of the Board of Estimate bureaus that standardize salaries, was evidenced by a unanimous vote in favor of a motion by Alderman Dowling to have printed in The City Record the details as to individual salaries.

RUSH ASKS INVESTIGATION.

Surveyor Denies He Furnished List for Campaign Bagmen.

Thomas E. Rush, Surveyor of the Port, has demanded investigations by both the Federal Civil Service Commission and the Federal Grand Jury of the charge that he was instrumental in furnishing to Tammany's Campaign Committee complete lists of the employes in his department to facilitate the collection from them of campaign contributions. Mr. Rush denied knowledge of the means by which such lists reached Tammany, and United States District Attorney H. Snowden Marshall, to whom Mr. Rush made his demands for an investigation in writing, said that he would conduct an inquiry. To demand campaign contributions from State or Federal civil service employes is punishable by fine, imprisonment, or both.

Congressman George W. Loft, Chairman of the Tammany Campaign Committee, whose name was signed to circular letters, asking for contributions from Surveyor Rush's staff, said yesterday:

"The letters were sent out by mailing agencies hired by the committee."

BARNES'S PAPER LOSES SUIT

Albany Evening Journal Must Refund $6,749.86 to State.

ALBANY, Nov. 10.—The Albany Evening Journal, published by a company of which William Barnes, Jr., ex-Chairman of the Republican State Committee, is President, must refund to the State $6,749.86, the Court of Appeals decided today. The Journal charged both the State and the county for the same insertion of public notices and the State sued to recover all excess over 75 cents a folio received by the paper for such publication during the last ten years.

The action was started after the investigation of Albany city and county by a committee of the Senate several years ago.

HOW CONGRESS WILL LINE UP

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—An unofficial list of Representatives-elect to the next Congress was completed today by South Trimble, Clerk of the House of Representatives, and sent to the public printer. The compilation, not verified, but printed for information of Congress, gives: Democrats, 238; Republicans, 193; Progressives, 1; Independent, 1; Socialist, 1. Total, 435.

The names of C. C. Van Dyke of St. Paul, (Democratic,) as the successor of Representative Fred C. Stevens of Minnesota, a Republican, and W. E. Williams, (Democrat,) who succeeds himself as Representative at Large from Illinois, were among the eleventh-hour additions to the unofficial list.

MAY REOPEN MARCONI CASE.

Segar and His Lawyer Want to Answer Blackmail Charge.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 10.—The Marconi shares action produced an unexpected development in the High Court of Justice today. When the case was adjourned last week there were many references to blackmail, which grew out of alleged pressure on the part of Samuel Segar, who claims $43,000 from Godfrey Isaacs, Managing Director of the Marconi Wireless Telegraph Company, which sum, he says, represents losses suffered in the purchase of shares in the English and American Marconi Companies. Mr. Segar says Mr. Isaacs agreed verbally to recoup him for his loss.

The action stood adjourned until today for the final stages of counsels' speeches and the court's judgment. When the case was called, however, Leslie Scott startled the court by asking that the trial be reopened in order that he might produce evidence on suggestions of blackmail against Mr. Segar and Sir Thomas H. D. Berridge, his lawyer. He referred to the Judge's remarks last week and the suggestion on Godfrey Isaacs's side that the case was a blackmailing action. The submission then was that a contract for an illegal consideration was made by the defendant to take the plaintiff's shares in consideration of Mr. Segar's promise not to give evidence.

Counsel submitted that there was no evidence to support a charge of blackmail, but, in view of the gravity of the charges, he asked that the court order the reopening of the trial so that Mr. Segar might produce evidence as to misrepresentation of the charges. The Judge was told that he held the reputations of the two men concerned in his hands. Against them the gravest charges that could be submitted were laid.

The court decided to take time to consider this unusual request, adjourning the case until tomorrow.

STALLION HAS PRIVATE CAR.

Quarantine Bar Against Landing Beast Here Is Overcome.

Borough Cornishman left New York yesterday by water in a private car, bound for Sadorus, Ill., and he is making the journey that way because he is the kind of immigrant that cannot land either in New York or in New Jersey just now because of the foot and mouth disease quarantine. Borough Cornishman is a stallion, and his journey to Sadorus from the Atlantic Transport Line pier will cost his owner, Clifton Chambers of Sadorus, $275.

The stallion cost $3,000 in England, and he was being brought over through Wells, Fargo & Co. W. O. Heffernan, special agent of the express company, received a telegram about ten days ago from Mr. Chambers telling that the animal was coming over on the Minnehaha, and requesting him to see that he was transshipped promptly. A later telegram reported that Borough Cornishman was coming on the Menominee, and he was on that ship when she reached her pier Monday afternoon.

Mr. Heffernan wired the owner that the stallion could not be landed either in New York or on the Hoboken side of the North River, and that the only way to clear the animal would be to charter a horse car, put the horse into it, seal it up, take it over to Jersey City, and send it by through freight. Yesterday morning early came a reply to ship Borough Cornishman in that way. So the accommodation for nineteen other horses in the car was knocked down, and with a messenger from the company to act as his valet on the way the stallion was ferried over the river, and his private car attached to a train.

FRACTIOUS GOAT IMPOUNDED

Upsets Policeman and Drives Crowd Out of Harlem Market.

A large goat, of the type euphemistically known as William, was taken into custody yesterday by Policeman Fallon of the East 104th Street Station, who preferred charges of disorderly conduct, disturbing the peace, and resisting arrest.

Fallon was standing in the middle of First Avenue, near Ninety-eighth Street, when the goat slipped up from the rear and made an unprovoked attack on him, upsetting him completely. The goat then charged on into the Harlem Market, overturning peddlers' carts and driving people out of that flourishing mart in a headlong dash for cover.

Fallon pursued undauntedly, cornered the goat at Second Avenue and 100th Street, and got a rope around his horns; but the goat contumaciously refused to accompany him, and Policeman Gowan had to be summoned to assist in the removal of the prisoner to the station. Lieut. Shevlin ordered the goat taken to the pound at Twenty-fourth Street and Avenue A.

THE fragrant memories of some dusky panelled room in such an Old English House as that which enriched our literature with Irving's Bracebridge Hall may aptly recur to us in our search for the fit furnishings of the modern Living Room.

Recourse to the Hampton Shops Reproductions may make of these dim memories a gratifying actuality. Here may be selected the sturdy Jacobean Table with its carved supports, the Arm-chair of Walnut with its twisted turnings, Caned-backed and carven scroll work, the Grand-dad's Wing-chair for the cheery Fireside as well as such unusual accessories as the paned fronted Coffer or the hanging lantern whose pierced sides mellow the light of to-day to the rush light radiance of Centuries ago.

MINOR LEAGUES STAND BY ORGANIZED BASEBALL --- FOOTBALL --- BOXING --- OTHER SPORTS

MINOR LEAGUERS ALL AGAINST FEDERALS

Vote Unanimously to "Continue to Unequivocally Support Organized Baseball."

OMAHA, Nov. 10.—The National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues will continue to unequivocally support organized ball. A resolution to that effect was adopted at the first meeting of the association today.

During the day there were many conferences. President August Herrmann and B. B. Johnson of the National Commission joined Gov. Tener here this morning. They had an extended talk, at which were present several well-known leaders in minor league baseball.

Following this meeting Johnson confirmed the statement that Charles Weeghman had been given an option on the Chicago National League Club, and that the option had been extended to next week. Johnson returned to Chicago tonight, and will meet Weeghman Thursday to complete the deal.

When the convention took up the transaction of business a resolution was offered pledging the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues to organized ball. The resolution recites that an "unsatisfactory condition has arisen in professional baseball during the last year," and that players "have been induced to disregard their obligations to organized baseball, which has raised a question in the minds of the public as to the honesty and integrity of ball players as a class," and concludes:

"Resolved, That we, the representatives of organized baseball in the minor leagues, at this first session of our fourteenth annual meeting most emphatically and unequivocally reaffirm our allegiance to organized baseball as the ideal condition for the future prosperity of the great national game."

A ballcall was demanded, and there was not a single vote recorded against the resolution. The meeting then adjourned until this afternoon.

The annual report of Secretary John H. Farrell of the National Association of Professional Baseball Clubs says 200 cities and towns in the United States and Canada, comprising forty-two leagues, qualified for membership at the beginning of the last season and thirty-nine leagues finished the season. Three Class D leagues disbanded and two did not start. More than 9,000 players had their contracts recorded, but only 1,349 had their terms promulgated. Out of 1,083 players suspended, 319 were reinstated.

The association disbursed $301,870, divided as follows: Players drafted by National and American Leagues and American Association, $89,850; optional agreements, $39,700; paid for release by purchase of American Association players, $167,870; returned under waiver rule, $4,450.

The list of drafted players for the coming year covers nearly every club in the association. The highest price paid is $2,500. The National League clubs secured eight players at that price and the American League one. The list of players drafted by National and American League clubs follows:

NATIONAL LEAGUE.—By Cincinnati—From Winnipeg, Dugan.

By St. Louis—From Victoria, Steele; from Syracuse, North.

By Chicago—From Medicine Hat, Buckles; from South Bend, Schorr; from Saginaw, Robbins; from San Francisco, Standridge; from Toronto, Fisher; from Buffalo, McConnell. (subject to investigation.)

By Pittsburgh—From Harrisburg, Adams; from Sioux City, Murphy; from Ludington, Altenberg; from Denver, Coffey, (subject to investigation.)

By New York—From Sacramento, Stroud; from Portland, Ore., Kores; from Middletown, N. Y., Scull; from New Orleans, Adams; from Seattle, Gipe; from Columbus, Ohio, Cook; from Poughkeepsie, Beatty.

By Brooklyn—From Chattanooga, Howell; from Fort Worth, Appleton; from Wilkes-Barre, Cadore; from Harrisburg, Chabeh; from Seattle, Daly; from West, Donald.

AMERICAN LEAGUE.—By Boston—From Saginaw, Scott; from Battle Creek, Gill; from Springfield, Mass., Pratt.

By Philadelphia—From Greensboro, Harper; from Trenton, Lee; from Greensboro, Crane.

By Washington—From Galveston, Massey; from Fort Worth, Brown.

By Detroit—From Peoria, Yelle; from Grand Forks, Peters.

By Chicago—From Kansas City, Brief.

By St. Louis—From Atlanta, Perryman; from Elmira, Kauffman; from Charleston, S. C., Cochran; from Burlington, Miller.

DODGERS NOT FOR SALE.

E. J. McKeever Denies That Ebbets Will Sell His Shares to Wards.

Edward J. McKeever, Vice President of the Brooklyn Baseball Club, yesterday denied that there was any possibility of Charles H. Ebbets selling out his interest in the club to Robert S. Ward, the owner of the Brookfeds.

"The Brooklyn team is not for sale," said Mr. McKeever. "There has never been any talk of such a deal, and the yarn is made out of whole cloth. Mr. Ebbets was not in conference between the representatives of organized ball and the Federal League in Chicago. He merely stopped off there to change trains on his way to Omaha."

Mr. McKeever stated that he had an agreement with President Ebbets whereby neither could sell his respective holdings without the consent of the other. Each controls 50 per cent. of the stock.

Charles H. Ebbets, Jr., Secretary of the club, stated that his father would not sell out until he had won a National League pennant and a world's series with the Trolley Dodgers. So that means that he won't sell out soon.

Charles Ebbets, President of the Brooklyn club, who is now in Omaha, made it plain yesterday that control of that club was not to change hands.

"I shall remain in baseball as long as my health permits," he said, "and am in perfectly good health. There has been no option given on the Brooklyn club, and I would not sell my interests for $1,000,000 and the inventory value of the plant itself with a bonus for the individual players."

YANKEES FOR NEW YORKERS

In the event of a change in the ownership of the New York American League Baseball Club, it was learned yesterday, the property will go to New York men and not to any Federal Leaguers or investors outside of this city. The indifference now shown by the present officials of the club indicates that some change is being contemplated.

The Yankees got a severe blow in the secret draft, for they did not draw a single player. The club has no new purchased players of any particular significance, and none from the draft, with no manager, no train ng-camp decided upon, and no baseball park of its own.

It was announced only recently by an official of the New York club that the American League Club had no lease on the Polo Grounds for next year. There is simply a verbal understanding, the same as was in vogue during the past two seasons, by which the club is allowed to use the Ruppert Stadium simply through the courtesy of President Harry N. Hempstead.

Both the National and the American Leagues last season passed resolutions against the two leagues using the same parks, and these resolutions have not been rescinded. In the event of a new ownership, it is understood, that the club will go into the hands of men who will have the confidence and approval of the New York National League Club and that arrangements will be made so that the use of the Polo Grounds will again be obtained until the club finds a new park of its own.

The career of the American League club here has been somewhat changeable. There have been flagrant instances of bad judgment in the management of the club's affairs, especially in the dealings with managers. The regimes of Griffith, Stallings, Chase, Wolverton, and Chance have all been more or less stormy. It is believed that the league as a whole favors a change, although President Farrell stated again yesterday that no discussion of the matter had come up at the last meeting of the league in Chicago.

NEW MEN FOR GIANTS.

Princeton Third Baseman Latest Acquisition by McGraw.

The New York Giants have procured the most costly collection of players that a major league club has drawn in many a day, through the secret draft in vogue this season. Secretary John B. Foster said yesterday that, at the regular draft price, the New York Club had drawn players whose cost, if purchased, would amount to more than $40,000. The highest price paid for any of them was $2,500.

The richest prize the Giants drew was Ralph Stroud, the former Detroit pitcher, who was drafted from the Sacramento Club. Late last season Manager McGraw wanted to get Stroud to strengthen his pitching staff, but the Coast club wanted $10,000, an offer McGraw turned down. Arthur Kores, the third baseman from Portland, who was one of the hardest hitters on the Coast, is another valuable player, and last season the Portland Club refused an offer of $7,000 for him. John B. Adams, the catcher drafted from the New Orleans Club, is valued at $5,000.

There are several other players the Giants have landed for whom large sums were offered last season. Among these are Alvah Gipe, a left-handed pitcher, from Seattle, Wash. He is a six-footer and weighs about 200 pounds. Gipe pitched great ball last season, and Scout Dick Kinsella last year tried to buy him, but the offer was turned down.

On the recommendation of Bill Clarke, the Princeton baseball coach, the Giants have signed Bob Reed, the Tiger third baseman. Reed was out of the game last Spring because of a broken ankle, but Clarke says that he is in good shape now and is the best third baseman that has been at Princeton in many years.

Manager McGraw promises a real pitching sensation in a new Indian pitcher, named Homer J. Glass. McGraw discovered him more than a year ago, but was not able to land him because the redman was serving with the United States marines in Washington, D. C. His term of service has expired and he has put his name to a Giant contract.

Glass was a star football and baseball player at Carlisle before he enlisted in the marines. He has been pitching for the last few seasons on the United States marine team in Washington, and last season struck out twenty-one men in a game. Carl W. Scull is another drafted pitcher, from Middletown, N. Y., while Fred Cook, a right-handed pitcher, was obtained from Columbus, Ohio. Another pitcher to be obtained by Scout Kinsella is Alois Kirmeyer, a pitcher from the Decatur (Ill.) Club.

This collection of drafted players, together with the players purchased at the end of last season, gives the Giants the biggest squad of players ever carried by a major league club. Manager McGraw will take the record collection to Marlin late in February. Some changes are promised in the make-up of the Giants, and there will be several new faces on the club when the next season begins.

Second Baseman Reitz Killed.

SACRAMENTO, Cal., Nov. 10.—Henry Reitz, at one time a member of the famous Baltimore Orioles infield, was killed here last night by an automobile. Reitz began playing professional ball in Sacramento in 1890, and a few years later went to the National League, with the Baltimore team. He was a member of the Dan Brouthers-Reitz-Hughey Jennings-McGraw infield in 1896-7.

P. S. A. L. BASKET BALL.

Committee Decides Questions as to Make-Up of Teams.

Nearly all the time of the Elementary Schools Game Committee of the Public Schools Athletic League at their meeting yesterday was taken up with a discussion of questions relating to the basket-ball competition now in progress for places in the semi-finals and finals which follow the closing of the school contests for places on their representative teams on Monday next. Through the miscarriage of the letter as to the date of time of weighing in for these games in Public School 63, the Bronx, no team was weighed in at the proper time. The committee decided to allow the boys of this school to make their weight for both the 95-pound and 125-pound classes at once so as to make the boys eligible to competition in the interdistrict competitions, which extend from next week until Jan. 22.

The appeal of Public School 10, Manhattan, from the decision of the District Superintendent that they be not allowed to weigh in more boys of the 125-pound class, having already weighed in their ten, was not entertained, and the ruling originally made will stand. The committee ruled that the team to represent the school in the interschool games must be made up of the boys originally weighed in, in spite of the fact that some of them are not now eligible to play.

The interborough championships have been done away with, and in place of these there will this year be interdistrict championships in the twenty-four athletic districts into which the city is divided, with first, second, and third prizes for the three schools standing highest in each of the boroughs.

OLDFIELD STILL LEADS.

PRESCOTT, Ariz., Nov. 10.—Barney Oldfield in the Los Angeles-Phoenix automobile race arrived in night control here first at 2:52. His time from Needles was 9 hours and 20 minutes. Olin Davis was second in at 3:08 o'clock, with elapsed time 9 hours 32 minutes from Needles. Nikrent was third to arrive at 3:08 P. M. His elapsed time was 9 hours 30 minutes.

Judge Moore Will Not Compete.

Judge William H. Moore of Pride's Crossings, Mass., who admittedly has the finest string of heavy harness horses in the world, has formally announced that he will not enter his string in competition at the Charity Horse Show to be held at Madison Square Garden next month. The decision has been made thus early in order that would-be competitors for prizes may know that they will not be called on to compete against Judge Moore's horses. This he thinks will tend to bring about a larger entry list and sharper competition than would be the case if owners thought they would be called on to meet and try to defeat the dozen or more champions in his stable which have won in the largest shows on both sides of the Atlantic. The Judge makes this decision as a partial contribution to the objects for which the show is to be held, for much as he loves to show and drive his horses in competition he says he more desires to see a big entry in the classes in which his horses would naturally be expected to have a practical walkover in competition.

Justice Weeks Not for Secretary.

"I don't see how I can do it," was the comment made yesterday by Justice Bartow S. Weeks when asked to confirm a story that he had decided to be a candidate for the position of Secretary Treasurer of the Amateur Athletic Union. "My personal affairs take up so much of my time that it would be impossible for me to give adequate attention to the work of the office." Judge Weeks will render whatever aid he can to the man chosen as his successor.

Columbia Elected to A. A. U.

By a unanimous mail vote of the Board of Managers Columbia University was elected to the Metropolitan Association of the Amateur Athletic Union. The vote was opened yesterday, and Columbia immediately presented its entry of a team in the junior cross-country championship on Saturday.

Tod Sloan's Brother Dead.

CHICAGO, Nov. 10.—Fremont Sloan, brother of Tod Sloan, famous American jockeys when American racing was at its height, died last night at the County Hospital. Sloan raced a string of horses in Chicago before the ban was placed on the sport and he served as trainer for several well-known owners. Tod Sloan's services as driver of an automobile figured in the famous Ascot Stakes.

TOO MANY COACHES SPOILED PRINCETON

Committee Banishes All Except Head Coach Penfield to the Sidelines.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 10.—Field Coach Penfield assumed absolute control of the Tiger football squad in its practice this afternoon, and for the first time during the season the many coaches who have been accustomed to follow the men around the field were banished to the side lines. Many of the assistant instructors did not like the change, but the Coaching Committee upheld Penfield strictly in his decision, and no one was allowed to express his ideas except to the field coach. This restriction is largely the result of the belief that a good deal of the chaotic showing in the Harvard game was due to the variety of coaching given the men.

The entire squad, with the exception of Capt. Ballin and Glick, went through the hardest kind of a workout as the first preparation by which Princeton hopes to redeem herself this season. The preliminary drill of tackling and charging was held on University Field. After that was over the squad went to the Palmer Stadium, where there was a hard half-hour scrimmage against the scrubs. For the first few minutes the scrubs were allowed to have the ball and instructed to use Yale plays against the first string men. The Eli formations gave the 'Varsity some trouble for a time, but several bad fumbles by the scrub backs spoiled their opportunities for advances. Allen Brown, a scrub back, who has been starring all season, was particularly active in getting through the regulars' primary defense.

The 'Varsity made three touchdowns during the play. Eddie Trenkmann was responsible for the first. He scooped up a scrub fumble near the middle of the field, and then, when he was surrounded by a host of tacklers, made a backward pass to Hughes, who ran 30 yards for the score. Highley also made the second touchdown, scurrying across the goal line on a forward pass. Eberstadt, who substituted at quarterback during the latter part of the scrimmage, made the final score after the 'Varsity had marched up the field with the ball for a 50-yard advance. Eberstadt scored on a plunge through centre from the 2-yard mark.

The 'Varsity offense got still further attention after the last touchdown had been made, when men on the first and various distances from the goal line up to 20 yards and opened up their attack on the goal line. Moore, Tibbott, and Driggs were unusually successful in breaking through their opponent's defense and showed consistent scoring ability.

Ames was at quarter back for the first part of the scrimmage and was succeeded by Eberstadt, a player who is still out for the 'Varsity despite the fact that he was advised not to play any more football this season. Driggs and Law alternated at full back, while Tibbott, Moore, F. Trenkmann, and Diekerman were used at the halves.

Capt. Ballin took part only in the signal drill, the coach deciding that he needed rest because of his work on Saturday. There is a possibility that Glick may not be able to start the Yale game next Saturday, as a result of the additional injury he received in the Harvard game. Trainer Keene Fitzpatrick, however, is giving all his attention to this half back, who is the best line breaker the Tigers have and believes he will succeed in getting him back into shape.

YALE ROUTS SCRUB ELEVEN.

Five Touchdowns Scored in Thirty-Minute Scrimmage.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 10.—The Yale 'Varsity scored five touchdowns in a thirty-minute hammer-and-tongs attack on the scrubs this afternoon, Waite, Scovil, and Easton starring.

Aleck Wilson and Capt. Talbott played half the practice, and Hermann von Holt, who broke a small bone in his wrist, was in the first actual football since his injuries. He is now available for a short part of the Princeton and Harvard games. Von Holt weighs 195 pounds and was apparently sure of right tackle when he was crippled. Carl Betts started at right tackle again today, and the fact that Chub Sheldon relieved him is regarded as indicative of the coaches' feeling about the two leading rivals for the place. Sheldon's slump the last three weeks is one of the mysteries of the season.

Harry Le Gore was not at the field and Carroll Knowles did not practice, although he was in uniform and did some signal work. Both of these right bowers of the Yale attack is in the best condition, but Trainer Mack said today that both were certain to get into the Princeton game.

Mal Scovil retired in the middle of the practice with a slightly wrenched knee. The injury will prevent him from facing the Tigers, but he will probably not practice again for that game. "Nick" Carter was on the side lines, jogging out a conditioning run, and will try to get into condition for substitute service in the two final games. He has not scrimmaged since his injury last month. Higgins practised passing and handling the ball, but is still lame. If he is in condition for part of the Harvard game the coaches will be satisfied. The Yale team is still handicapped by minor injuries, and the condition of the back-field stars—Le Gore, Aleck Wilson, and Knowles—is not such as to allow a prediction that any of the trio will be able to remain throughout Saturday's game. There were no line changes today, and it is likely that the team will face the Tigers with its line as it scrimmaged today. The only position uncertain is right tackle, where Betts now has a slight lead over Charley Sheldon.

Fordham Presents Makeshift Team.

Despite the continued absence of Capt. Wymard, Dunn, Regan, and Conklin from the line-up because of injuries, Fordham's makeshift eleven swept the team from High School of Commerce all about Fordham Field yesterday in the first practice game held by the Maroon warriors in some time. While the tussle was made as brief as possible, the college players, with only one regular in the back field, swept the scholastic defense aside on almost every occasion. Although he is still suffering from a torn tendon in the arm, Yule proved a perfect avalanche against the Commerce line, carrying the opposing forwards with him each time he bucked the line. All of his changes averaged over five yards. Robbin was in Dunn's place, and showed as much headwork as the regular in getting off some fine punts. Little "Billy" Stowell, who got a chance against the Navy, was at Regan's position, and, despite his lack of weight, found no trouble in gaining around the ends at will. Dr. Spies made another examination of Dunn, Regan, and Wymard yesterday and expects to get them out in uniform before the Vermont game next Saturday. A new set of plays was tried out yesterday, but the practice was too short to get a real line on their value. The afternoon's work was closed by a short blackboard talk, during which "Skip" Wymard laid particulars emphasis on the weaknesses shown against the Middies.

Pennsylvania's Trainer Resigns.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 10.—"Pat" Dwyer, trainer of the University of Pennsylvania football team, who has been suffering from malaria since the return of the team from Michigan, today tendered his resignation to T. Truxton Hare, Chairman of the university Football Committee. "Pat" Dickson, an assistant trainer, will act in Dwyer's place until a successor can be secured.

HARD GRIND FOR CORNELL

But Coaches Constantly Shifted Players to Avoid Overwork.

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, N. Y., Nov. 10.—The Cornell football squad today engaged in a surprisingly hard work-out, considering the fact that the big game with Michigan is so close at hand, but by the constant shifting of players the coaches avoided any chance of overwork, and at the same time gave all of the promising men an opportunity to get some hard scrimmage work.

After a preliminary outdoor practice the squad went into the baseball cage at dusk, and for an hour the first and second teams mixed up, with the second team using the plays which the scouts brought back from Ann Arbor. The 'Varsity did not seem to have much trouble in getting wise to the Michigan formations.

The entire team got into the line-up, but many changes were soon made, Eckley and Lauts took Shelton's position at end when Shelton and O'Hearn retired and Jameson played Gallogly's tackle position most of the time. Jake Allen was assigned to right tackle on the 'Varsity and continued to show the scrappy defensive work that has pleased Dan Reed so far. In addition to Minnick and Anderson the coaches used Tilley and Snyder at guards, and they also sent McCutcheon into the game for a brief hardening up. McCutcheon donned the togs for the first time in six weeks today and appeared to be in good shape. He will be ready to play left guard should anything happen to Munsick.

The backs were strengthened by the return of Kleinert, who got into action for the first time since he broke his shoulder in New York in the Brown game. Dr. Sharpe said tonight that there was a chance that Kleinert might be used against Michigan.

Arrangements have been made to have the football team leave Thursday night for Detroit. A big parade and mass meeting preceding the departure of the eleven has been arranged.

Bracing Up Army Rushline.

Special to The New York Times.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Nov. 10.—The question of bringing the Army rush line up to form was handled without gloves today by the coaches. The big linemen who played last Saturday were all in at the start, except Merrillat and McEwan, and had a hard scrimmage for fifty minutes against the scrubs. The latter team sent a bewildering mixture of plays at them, with the result that the 'Varsity showed a lack of coordination today than has characterized some of its recent performances and the scrubs were unable to score, although Boots and Walker, in the scrub back field, did some yeoman service early in the week out in piercing the 'Varsity's defense for good gains. The big team got one touchdown for its efforts, Hodgson going over for the score on a line smashing play from the 5-yard line. McEwan and Merrillat are still reeling. Bradley and Goodman were both used at centre today and Kelly, Tully, and Neyland all got a chance at end. The latter showed up well.

Lieut. Charles D. Meyer, Secretary and Treasurer of the Army Athletic Council, began tonight the mailing of the Army's share of the tickets for the Army and Navy football game to be played in Philadelphia Nov. 28. The Army's share of 11,500 seats will be all in the mail under registered envelopes before the end of the week.

Eradicating N. Y. U. Faults.

Yesterday afternoon saw the New York University football squad hard at work again after the light practice on Monday, and Coaches Reilly and Gorsch making every effort to overcome the deficiencies shown in the Union game last Saturday. The line men had some drill in charging, and the ends received attention in their department in defensive and offensive playing. The team was then put through a snappy signal practice, in which most of the plays were tried which are expected to play a part in the Violet's opposition to the Stevens eleven on Saturday next. Following this drill the scrub eleven lined up against the 'Varsity for additional scrimmage, in which the latter made a most creditable showing. The general shake-up in the regular line-up, involving as its main feature the transfer of Capt. Huntley from his customary position at quarter back to left half, with the subsequent shift in his former position of Olawang, the "midget" quarter back, appears to have resulted in a more smoothly working backfield.

Midshipmen Cheer Their Team.

Special to The New York Times.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 10.—The Midshipmen attended this afternoon's practice at the Naval Academy and encouraged the squad with their songs and yells. The practice was secret, but was along the same lines as usual, except some special plays were tried out. The scrimmage was long and very fast. Craig and Miles continue to do fine running with the ball, and Craig, though he weighs only 145 pounds, may start in the game at right half back if the ground is hard, so as to make the running game available. If the field is soft, Failing could use his great weight to advantage. Overesch, the Navy end and Captain, is doing used moderately, as his bruised foot troubles him when he works hard.

Dartmouth's Last Scrimmage.

Special to The New York Times.

HANOVER, N. H., Nov. 10.—Dartmouth held its last scrimmage of the week this afternoon in preparation for the Pennsylvania game. The 'Varsity scored two touchdowns, and held the second team pointless, even though the latter were using the Pennsylvania formations, with extra coaching from "Bill" Randall, head coach here in 1910, and Harry McDevitt, '07, a former quarter back. Capt. Whitney rested today. Telfer replaced Redfield at left end, and excepting these changes, the 'Varsity lined up the same as against Tufts last Saturday. McAuliffe will be discharged from the hospital tomorrow, and will go to Philadelphia with the squad, although he may not be used. Tuck and Pudrith practiced a long while today in placement kicking and looked good.

Garfield and Tomkins in Line-up.

Special to The New York Times.

WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass., Nov. 10.—With Garfield and Tomkins back in the line-up today, the Williams College 'Varsity ran through signals for over half an hour, Dewindt and Jones taking turns at running the team. J. A. Wright, at centre, and Ocerton, at right half back, got into the line-up during the latter part of the work-out. Coach Daly continues his policy of light drills, and it is probable that only one hard scrimmages will be held this week, that one being scheduled for tomorrow. A college mass meeting is to be held tomorrow night at which Coach Daly, Capt. Payson, and the senior members of the team will speak. It is expected that over 450 students will make the trip to Amherst on Saturday.

Monahan Helping Lafayette.

Special to The New York Times.

EASTON, Penn., Nov. 10.—Bernie Monahan, a former famous tackle, assisted Coach Crowell in the drill of the Lafayette eleven's line today. The 'Varsity played well in the scrimmage today and scored one touchdown on their rivals. Gaynor worked at one of the guard positions and made a favorable impression. Swarts, the West Philadelphia high school boy, played the of the ends. Nothing has been heard of the condition of Kelly, the punter, who is at home threatened with typhoid fever. His absence is a matter of grave concern to the interests of the team.

Developing Second String Men.

Special to The New York Times.

SOUTH BETHLEHEM, Penn., Nov. 10.—Secret practice rule at Lehigh was lifted long enough this afternoon to allow the students to see the Brown and White team in action and to hold a cheering practice. Then the gates were closed and the 'Varsity and a good squad of second string men were run through the usual signal drill, following plenty of rudimentary work. Coach Ready's aim this week is to pay special attention to the development of the second string men, of which he now has a fair supply.

Soccer Clubs Give $100,000 to War.

LONDON, Nov. 10.—The soccer clubs throughout the British Isles have contributed $160,000 to the Prince of Wales's National Relief Fund. Every club in the country has made a response, from a percentage of gate receipts, practice games, special donations, and lately even the players themselves have consented to give up 5 per cent. of their salaries, which is sent forward weekly. The English and Scottish Football Associations head the list with a donation of $5,000 each, followed by the Durham F. A., $2,000, and the Irish and Welsh associations, $1,000 each, while the big league clubs, such as Everton, Chelsea, and Tottenham Hotspur have contributed over $2,000 each.

HARVARD GETS DOWN TO HARD WORK AGAIN

Crimson's Practice Will Be in Preparation for Yale Game Only.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 10.—The Harvard 'Varsity football men, who have had two days of rest since their engagement against the Tigers, all came back to the Stadium this afternoon and got down to business for the Yale game a week from next Saturday. There is a match to be played against Brown at the end of the present week, but no special preparation will be made for it, the coaching staff here figuring that it will be a good thing for the eleven to have to size up the Providence plays as they find them.

The 'Varsity showed this afternoon that no ill effects had been suffered from the match with the Tiger team and, in fact, the entire outfit looked in much better trim than it did when it came back to the field after having played Michigan. Harvard is now assured that it will have the benefit of all its forces against Yale providing no injuries come Saturday.

Today neither Hardwick nor Jeff Coolidge worked in the scrimmage against the second team. These end rushers already have shown their 'Varsity calibre, and much attention is to be spent on the substitute wings. Two or these, C. Coolidge and Weatherhead, were in the line-up today. It is still possible that Hardwick will be needed for the back field at any time, and if so Harvard's game will suffer greatly unless there is a really first strong end to get into the game. Weatherhead is very good on attack, but uncertain on defense, while the younger Coolidge is coming along very fast in all departments. These changes are like that of placing Wallace at centre rush, again, were the only ones made in the line today except for the temporary shift at the ends. Wallace has not played since the early part of the Michigan game, but he is now in fine trim again. He and Bigelow are running close, but Wallace has a little better football head for the requirements of centre play under the Harvard scheme. Bigelow, also, has the responsibility of being first substitute guard and tackle as well as centre, and he looks a big chances for being a regular were being hurt because of his being such a good all-around man for any place on the line inside of the ends.

The scrubs put on the Yale attack today, and then the 'Varsity did a little offensive work. It was not divulged how the Yale plays were gained the 'Varsity, although it was said at the end of the practice that there was not any scoring.

Welsh Rejoins Carlisle Team.

Special to The New York Times.

CARLISLE, Penn., Nov. 10.—The Carlisle Indians in their practice this evening showed the best form of this season. The Indians have been strengthened by the unexpected addition of ex-Capt. Welsh to the squad. Welsh, who was at Carlisle all Fall, had given up football, although he was still eligible to play, taking advance work at Conway Hall. He has been of material assistance in developing that institution's football list. Carlisle's quarter back, Crane, who disqualified in the Holy Cross game on account of his age, was also seen in the game, consequently dropped by the Carlisle coaches. This put the team in a bad hole for quarter back, and Welsh volunteered his services for the balance of the season. Welsh is regularly enrolled here, and, having only played three years at Carlisle, is eligible to finish the season under the school's four-year rule.

Stevens "Tech" Star Injured.

Stevens "Tech" football squad has been devoting more time to practice for the last week in order to develop new plays with the new men in the line-up. Hard luck is still on the tracks of the team, as Webb, the star full back and only reliable punter, had his arm broken in the game with Rensselaer on Saturday, and Capt. Stretch also has been out of the line-up, due to illness. The work during the last few days has consisted in stiff scrimmages against the scrub team and long drills in fortifying the secondary defense. Quite a few changes in the back field and a few in the line are noted, as Poole is playing half back in place of Todd, who has had the shoulder hurt, and Scherer is substituting for Herreshoff, who is also on the sick list. Stretch's place in the line is still open for competition.

President May See Cadets Play.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—President Wilson has received an invitation to attend the Army-Navy football game in Philadelphia Nov. 28, and may accept. Following out the precedent set by other Presidents as Commanders in Chief of the Army and Navy, Mr. Wilson witnessed the game last year.

Cyclists to Change Rules Today.

The six-day race at Madison Square Garden next week may be minus some of the best talent that has been imported for it, unless the meeting of the riders this afternoon at Madison Square Garden, with Manager McFarland as Chairman, brings about a modification of the rules governing the finish of the contest. When the French teams, composed of Dupuy, Seres, Parent, and Cosseau, announced yesterday that they would not start in the event unless the rules were changed to Europe style the meeting of the foreigners with the new arrivals and stated that they, too, would withdraw from the contest unless conditions were changed. With three of the best teams in the race objecting, Manager McFarland held a conference with Fogler, Root, Clarke, Moran, Goullet, Grenda, Walthour, and McNamara and arranged a meeting for this afternoon at the Garden to settle the dispute.

Seawanhaka-Corinthians Meet.

The Autumn meeting and mess dinner of the Seawanhaka-Corinthian Yacht Club at the Holland House last night was attended by about fifty members. The question of establishing two new one-design classes was discussed, and if sufficient number of members are interested in the new movement the two one-design classes designed by "Nat" Herreshoff and Cox & Stevens will be built and raced next season. The annual meeting of the club and election of officers will be held in January, 1915. Commodore Harold S. Vanderbilt was toastmaster at the mess dinner, and among those present were Daniel Bacon, Howard S. Bacon, George Nichols, Colgate Hoyt, Jr., and Eliot Tuckerman.

Columbia Wrestling Coaches.

Capt. Pendleton of the Columbia wrestling team has arranged for several local stars to assist in coaching the candidates for the Blue and White team. Carl Johnson of the Central Y. M. C. A., and John Carlson, Walter Smith, and Browner of the New York A. C., and Fred Norganes, the former heavyweight champion from Columbia, have all accepted invitations to grapple with the Columbia candidates, and afford them opportunity to gain valuable pointers.

SLOSSON BEATS CASSIGNOL.

Veteran Billiardist Wins Special Match at the Elks Club.

Firmin Cassignol, the French champion professional billiard player, lost a 400-point match at 18.2 balk line last night to George Slosson at the Elks Club by the score of 400 to 324.

The game did not show the real form of either player, and the average was below that expected. The change of the atmosphere and the fact that the balls were chilled were largely responsible for the poor display. Slosson twice reached the heights of his game when he ran 76 and 70 unfinished, but in his other attempts he was unable to do himself justice.

Cassignol at times demonstrated his perfect mastery over the ivories, but was unable to hold the spheres in proper position. Many of his massé shots were splendidly executed and left no doubt as to his ability to score when the balls rolled kindly for him, but he had the worst of the breaks and missed a number of comparatively easy shots. Slosson's plucky uphill battle, which finally gave him the victory, was frequently applauded by the big crowd of Elks who closely followed the cue work of the two experts. The scores:

Slosson—18 20 2 2 1 0 0 25 1 6 0 0 34 0 10 8 23 18 27 14 36 8 0 11 0 11 0 76 0 70. Total—400. High runs—76 70 36 34. Average—14 8-28.

Cassignol—0 25 2 14 12 8 0 30 12 9 18 37 15 48 2 8 0 0 20 0 1 0 0 8 31 0 27. Total—324. High Runs—43 37 31 30. Average—11 26-28.

DOG SHOW MUDDLE.

Protest Against Man Selected to Judge at Eastern Dog Club Show.

An unusual situation has arisen in connection with the show of the Eastern Dog Club scheduled to be held in Boston the last week of this month, at which New York fanciers constitute about a third of the exhibitors. George S. Williams of Hamilton, Mass., recognized as an expert in judging dogs of nearly all breeds, had been assigned to judge bulldogs, French bulldogs, Boston, Manchester, Yorkshire, Maltese and toy black and tan terriers, Pomeranian, Pekingese, Japanese, and English toy spaniels and toy poodles, and entries were made with the understanding that he was to be the arbiter as to the merits of the dogs in each of those classes.

Now that the entries are all in and the books closed a protest has been made to the American Kennel Club against his acting as judge on the ground that he is a professional handler of dogs, and acted as such for a Mr. Dexter, which made him ineligible to judge terriers. Mr. Williams denies the impeachment and asserts that he was simply an expert adviser to the owner of the kennels in which he is said to have acted as handler. The rules of the A. K. C. prevent a handler from acting as a judge.

Mr. Williams will try to prove to a committee from the A. K. C. that he is an amateur. If his contention is sustained all will go well, but if it sustains the protest entered all exhibitors who have entered their dogs in the twelve classes he was to have adjudicated have the privilege of withdrawing their entries.

Dog Owners' Annual Dinner.

Members of the German Shepherd Dog Club of America have arranged to have their annual dinner in this city in the week following the Westminster Kennel Club show at Madison Square Garden. Usually this annual dinner is held during the progress of the show, but as many of the members have social and business engagements made for the days of that week, it has been decided that it would be better for the interests of the club to have its annual reunion in the week following, the date fixed being Tuesday, March 2. As owners of these dogs come from all parts of the country it was agreed that their visit to the city could be easily prolonged to the date set, as they have much to talk over in connection with the field trial rules for the breed in which they are interested.

Long Island Kennel Club Shows.

Champions are to be barred from the first of the four shows to be held by the members of the Long Island Kennel Club at the Albemarle-Hoffman House in this city. This show will be held on Wednesday evening of next week, the dates for the others being Jan. 6, March 3, and May 12. A feature will be the competition for a Grand Challenge Cup on the last show night, open to all winners in all classes at the four match shows. The show of the Bronx Kennel Club, which had been set for the same evening, will be postponed to a later date, as the two clubs do not wish to conflict and divide interest, several owners wishing to compete at each.

Champion Boni Southshore Sold.

Mrs. A. Hungerford of Bayshore, L. I., one of the leading breeders and exhibitors of dachshunds in this country and the owner of eighteen champion dogs of that breed, has sold her latest champion, Boni Southshore, a dog 2½ years old, by Clarence Little of Brookline, Mass., a fancier and owner of extensive kennels near Boston. The price paid has not been divulged, but it is reported among dog fanciers to have been one of the largest prices that has been paid for an American-bred dog of this breed.

McCoy and Bartfield Draw.

Thirteen pounds advantage in the weights saved Al McCoy of Brooklyn, the so-called middleweight champion of the world, from defeat by Soldier Bartfield in the main bout of ten rounds at the Broadway Sporting Club last night. The soldier gained an even break, but with a little more weight he undoubtedly would have won. McCoy fought his usual rough battle, using frequent back-hand blows, and effectively placing his elbows on a vital spot in the clinches. He was frequently called to task by the referee and crowd. Bartfield made a running battle of the bout, boxing instead of fighting his sturdier opponent. His body punches landed with force, and often he placed three and four jabs to McCoy's face without return. But in the long run the championship claimant evened matters by continually boring in and hurting the Soldier with his hard lefts to the face and body. The weights were: McCoy, 158½; Bartfield, 146. McCoy had the better of the first and third rounds and gained an even break in the second session. In the fourth Bartfield first began to break through his rival's awkward defense, and time and again he planted solid rights to the stomach and crossed his left to the face. In the fifth and sixth chapters he more than overcame McCoy's lead, and in the seventh and eighth divided the points. Again in the ninth Bartfield outfought McCoy, but in the tenth the latter rallied and evened matters.

SUIT OVER BOXING CLUB'S OWNERSHIP

Manhattan's License Suspended Until Legal Dispute Is Settled.

Pending legal action brought in the Supreme Court by I. Perskin on behalf of John Frank, a Brooklyn sportsman, to settle an ownership dispute, the State Athletic Commission at its weekly meeting in 41 Park Row yesterday suspended the license of the Manhattan Sporting Club, which holds forth at Manhattan Casino, 155th Street and Eighth Avenue. Gil Boag, the Californian, who was was manager of "One-Round" Hogan, is registered with the Commission as sole owner of the club, having testified to that effect two weeks ago at an inquiry held by the Boxing Board into the affairs of the Manhattan Club.

Frank, according to the story told by Perskin to Commissioners O'Neill, Dixon, and Price, purchased the Manhattan Club from Gil Boag in April last, the price paid not being mentioned in the papers covering the sale, which are on file with the Commission. Boag, so Frank's story has it, turned over all the affairs of the club, which at MARITIME RIGHTS OF NEUTRALS.

Whoever has read the letters of "Historicus," that being the pen-name under which Sir VERNON HARCOURT contributed to The London Times during our civil war a notable series of letters upon questions of international law, must be aware that the law and the practice of the United States and of Great Britain in respect to the rights of neutral commerce at sea are in substantial agreement. The writings of Chancellor KENT, the opinions of STORY, of Lord STOWELL, and of Sir W. GRANT are of high authority in both countries, and the decisions of our prize courts during the civil war were little complained of in any responsible quarter in England. It is most unlikely, therefore, that any serious difference will grow out of the molestation of our seaborne commerce through the activity of the British Navy in the present European war. Under instruction from Sir EDWARD GREY, the British Ambassador has notified our Secretary of State that the guarantees as to the non-exportation of contraband goods given by the Governments of Norway, Sweden, and Denmark are satisfactory to the British Government, and that interference with cargoes consigned to named persons in those countries will be limited to a verification of the ship's papers and cargo. As to the expectation of American copper to Italy, the Ambassador says that, Italy having prohibited the export of copper but not the transit of copper through Italy to a foreign country, copper sent to Italy for Italian use will be exempt from seizure, but copper consigned to a belligerent through Italy or "to order" will be suspected—presumably will be seized.

The cargo of copper sent from this country to Italy by the steamship Kroonland is now at Gibraltar awaiting the decision of a prize court. What is known in international law as the doctrine of continuous voyages is here involved. In countless cases blockades have been run and contraband carried to enemy countries by neutral ships through the device of a call and pretended transshipment of cargo at some neutral port which was the ostensible but not the actual destination. The British port of Nassau, near Charleston, and the Mexican port of Matamoras, near Galveston, were much used during our war by ships trading in contraband. The great increase in the trade of such ports naturally gives rise to suspicion. Speaking of Nassau and Matamoras, "Historicus" wrote: "How comes it that these small and insignificant ports which two years ago were hardly known in Europe by name are now as crowded with shipping as the Thames?" It had to be admitted that the great majority of these vessels were "engaged in adventures which the American Navy are entitled to prevent." The recent marked increase in the shipments of copper to Italy has given rise to the suspicion on the part of the English authorities that the copper is really intended not for consumption in Italy but is to be exported from that country to Germany, probably for the use of the Krupps and other makers of arms and ammunition. An Italian port is the destination of the ship, it is the British theory that Germany is the destination of the copper it carries in its cargo. Copper having been declared not merely conditional but actual contraband, the right of seizure is therefore asserted and exercised.

Against the seizure by a British ship of a contraband cargo with a German destination, our Government could have no right of protest. It must be vigilant, however, to protect American commerce from undue and unjustified interference. Neutrals must look out for their own maritime rights, belligerents will always take the benefit of the doubt. The tendency, therefore, is to press upon neutral commerce from all sides, and if neutral Governments are not vigilant and active, the numbers and devastation of war will spread far beyond the limits within which they ought to be confined. It would be plainly the duty of our Government to protest against a general embargo upon the exportation of our copper to Italy. That would be, so far as that commodity is concerned, a paper blockage of Italian ports against us. Italy is at all times a large consumer of our copper. The metal has innumerable uses in the arts aside from its use in the manufacture of arms and ammunition. It forms a large part of our export trade. That any considerable interference with our exports of copper would be a serious matter may readily be seen by the appended table which shows the value in dollars of our export copper trade with the countries named in 1910, 1911, and 1912:

EXPORTS OF COPPER.

Germany	18,848,631	24,083,497	29,741,716
Italy	3,577,424	4,889,779	6,013,893
Holland	24,066,898	30,146,611	25,680,902
U.K'g'm	17,601,419	13,900,801	14,066,274

Italy in 1912 took 44,654,247 pounds of our copper. That she has taken as much as 7,700 tons of copper since Oct. 25 would naturally attract the attention of Great Britain. But there is nothing to show that her own use of the metal has not very largely increased, and unless it can be shown beyond reasonable doubt that any given cargo is destined, not to be added to the common stock of copper in Italy, but for re-exportation to Germany, the cargo should be exempt from seizure.

The point to be made and insisted upon, we think, is that while we cannot at all submit to the doctrine that all our copper exports to Italy may be stopped, we must demand that each individual case be judged upon the evidence it presents, and fairly judged. The doctrine laid down by Lord STOWELL in respect to the transshipment of cargo at an intermediate point with a real or suspected purpose of merely breaking the continuity of the voyage, is applicable here:

> It is a question in its nature subject to very considerable difficulty in particular cases, and one in which the court must exercise its judgment with great caution on the special circumstances which compose the substance of each case, and with great care not to attribute more weight to any particular fact than what it justly demands.

We may readily admit in the words of "Historicus," "that when the evidence is clear and decisive that the "delivery is to be to the enemy, the "mere fact that the destination and "the place of transfer is at a neutral "port will not justify the transaction." In the case of such a commodity as copper, which we have been accustomed to export in large quantities to Italy, there will of necessity be many cases in which the evidence, so far from being "clear and decisive" of an enemy destination, will show nothing whatever beyond an intention to send copper to Italy in the usual course of trade. In such cases seizure would not be justified, and we should expect a British prize court to decide against the captor. Mere suspicion is not enough. In the cases arising during our war there was usually abundant evidence of an unlawful destination, and we think in all cases where the cargo was held the evidence was sufficient to remove reasonable doubt. Great Britain cannot seize and hold cargoes of copper in cases where the evidence is not clear and decisive without departing from the rules and principles laid down by her own highest courts.

It is fortunate that there can be no clouding of issues through ill-will, for the two countries are on the best of terms. We have no wish to interfere with Great Britain's undoubted right to penetrate any disguise under which contraband may be shipped from our ports with an enemy destination, but in our own interest as neutrals, for the protection of our commercial rights about which we have always been most solicitous, we must take the ground that seizure will be justified only by the clear evidence of the individual case and that it cannot be based upon a general purpose to interfere with exports that might conceivably find their way into the hands of Great Britain's enemies.

THE EMDEN.

Australia's first great naval victory is the destruction of the Emden. Earlier in the war an Australian warship took possession of a German island in the South Seas, but there was no defense, and the achievement was useful but not glorious. Australia's small navy will derive much glory from the Sydney's removal from Oriental waters of the German cruiser which between Aug. 6 and Nov. 8 had captured and sunk fully twenty well-laden merchantmen and put out of commission a Russian cruiser and a French destroyer. The Sydney is, of course, a much larger boat than was the fleet German cruiser, and provided with heavier guns of a longer range, and quite as fast. Nevertheless, the Australians succeeded where the ships of England, France, and Japan had failed, and the destruction of the Emden in the Bay of Bengal is almost simultaneous with the bottling up of the Königsberg, another German commerce destroyer, in a little African bay. Not only in the countries with which Germany is at war, but in neutral lands as well, the news of the checking of the Emden's career will be heard with feelings of relief, for the ruthless destruction of commerce does not inspire amiable sentiments.

Nevertheless, the extraordinary skill, audacity, and heroism of the Emden's officers and men will not soon be forgotten. She was no privateer out for booty, but a ship of the German Navy fighting for the German people. In war warlike deeds are noble. The Emden did nothing not justified by the accepted rules of war. She was probably inferior in armament to more than one of the warships that vainly pursued her, though somewhat faster sailing than the average. She had no harbor of refuge and she depended for fuel and provisions on her prizes. Great Britain has bottled up most of the German Navy in the Kiel Canal and the Baltic, and in the many heroic and brilliant achievements Germany has put to her credit on the sea in spite of this great handicap the Emden has been the leader. But the end of Germany's small but effective marine warfare is now in sight. The Emden is done for and the Königsberg is in the same plight as so much of Germany's merchant marine. Swift cruisers and heavy battleships are trailing the Scharnhorst, Leipzig, and Gneisenau, and they cannot long escape destruction, as they can find no hiding place. The Karlsruhe is doomed, too, and soon there will be no peril in all the waters of the world for the merchantmen of the Allies.

IGNORANCE OF LAW AND FACTS.

I confess that it has been a little irritating to be subjected to the unreasoning criticism that has been leveled at the Commission when frequently it appeared that the writer was not conversant with the law or the facts.—Interstate Commissioner CLARK.

There is no reason why criticism of that sort should irritate the Commission. The criticism which hurts is, first, that of the Supreme Court, and, second, that of the conditions which have resulted under the Commission's protecting care of the railways. Within a day or two the Commission has handed down decisions conforming itself to the law and the facts as laid down by the Supreme Court in the cases of the Birmingham Southern Railway and the Manufacturers' Railway of St. Louis. The Commission had declared that the charges by those roads were rebates granted by their connecting trunk lines, and must be discontinued. The Supreme Court said that whether or not those charges were rebates did not depend upon the Commissioners' edict. If the roads named were common carriers, they had a right to make a joint rate with connecting lines, and their charges were not rebates. Accordingly the Commission is reconsidering its decision.

The Commission is not yet in its last ditch on these cases. The owners of the railways to which maximum rates fixed by the Commission are allowed declare them to be less than the cost of doing the business, and they are proposing to take the opinion of the courts on the Commission's order, which is declared to be confiscatory after its revision.

It is a pretty quarrel which has been running some years, and is only now in its interesting stage. The importance of the cases in connection with Commissioner CLARK'S criticism of his critics does not lie in the millions involved, but in its bearings upon the advanced rate case, which concerns the entire country and the Commission's future. The law and the facts are both against relief to the railways in the manner which the Commission indicated when it rejected the method of relief proposed by the railways. Another excuse for not granting the advance must be found for the forthcoming decision, if it is to be adverse for the third time.

This is only an incident of the rate question. On the broader question of a general advance the facts are more condemnatory and harder to escape. The condition of the railways is not psychological. There are over a billion of dollars in receiverships under conditions subject to the control of the Commission, and which the Commission has repeatedly declared satisfactory. At the present time the Commissioner has a quarrel with those who differ from it on this point, and as to what should be done about it. Admittedly there are regrettable incidents connected with the management of the railways. Without extenuating them, it may be asked whether the correction of those evils ought to be attempted through the rate question. There are very rich railways as well as bankrupt carriers. There are well-managed properties and ill-managed. Their securities may have many prices, but all roads in the same competitive field must have the same rate. The variation in the prices of the securities is the proper correction of bad management, or the watering of stock, or market operations. The profits or losses of the railways are in the prices. They neither have nor should have any relation to the rate. All sorts of roads must render the same service for the same price. That is the substitute for competitive ratemaking which it was intrusted to the Commission to regulate. The Commission conceived the idea that it was the punisher of vice and folly, instead of the regulator of rates according to the rule of reason and justice, and it holds to that theory tenaciously against all the teachings of experience and the corrections of the courts. It is sold not to be ready to accept the argument of facts against its theories in the Eastern case, and the Western case is treading fast on the heels of the Eastern case. It is not surprising to hear that the Commission is seeking to avoid in the Western case the embarrassment which has resulted in the Eastern case from considering the case as a whole. The Commission much prefers to consider rates separately, when the arguments from the harassed condition of the railways cannot be presented so convincingly. Yet the presentation of the case as a whole was only a reflection of the Commission's practice in making wholesale orders.

There will be little resentment of the Commission's uneasiness under criticism. It is proof that it is vulnerable, and uncertain in mind. If the Commission is irresponsible and above criticism, what is to be the future of the railways?

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

A Professor Brings Some News.

Another professorial person, Dr. THOMAS C. HALL of the Union Theological Seminary, has come back to this ignorant and deluded country, bringing to us, as would be expected, a vast amount of news and opinion, both guaranteed to be as accurate as surprising. To explain this expectation one need only say that instead of remaining in the United States, where the newspapers are rashly allowed to print about anything they please and get information from so many sources that it is sure to be confusing, Dr. HALL has been for a long time in Germany, that favored land where the press, being under a proper and wise control by the great and good, publishes only one side of any story, and that, of course, the right one.

How different was his position from what ours has been! As he says, he was not, like us, "cut off from direct contact with Germany, knowing only what England teaches us, and missing the real emphasis of the war." Much else have we missed, as that BRANDEIS, lonesome man, stands alone among his people, all the rest of them, including the Lieutenants, being passionately devoted to the preservation of peace and unable even to think of war without a shudder.

Dr. HALL does not reveal that he dined with the Kaiser and found his table manners and his domestic relations fully up to theological seminary standards, but of course the doctor did so dine, and equally of course his theory of the war was no more effected by that high privilege than has been that of other professors who have shared it with him. The Kaiser, being himself a professor of everything, knows how to treat his humble fellow-members of Faculties, and the kindness and respect he shows them are not, as in this benighted land, streaked with humorous distrust of their competency to handle the practical businesses of life.

It is truly sad that Americans should be getting a little impatient under such lessoning as that of Dr. HALL—that they smile almost as broadly—and rudely—at these well-meant efforts to mitigate their ignorance as they do at the logic of a correspondent whose letter appeared on this page yesterday. That correspondent, a German doing business here, has discovered that American sentiment is mostly pro-German. Why? Because the people to whom he writes letters, also presumably Germans, do not object to the inclusion in them of pro-German leaflets!

A Guide Into the Past.

With the just issued volume covering the months of July, August, and September, THE NEW YORK TIMES INDEX arrives at No. 3 of Volume II., and, with its six predecessors, makes on a shelf a good beginning for what will be as the years go on, if not exactly a valuable contribution to history, at least something that historians and many others will find valuable.

For an index such as this, prepared with skill and fully covering the more important and interesting events of each day in every part of the world, will be of enormous assistance to anybody who for any reason wants, in regard to past events, information more trustworthy and definite than even the best of memories can supply. We all know the ease with which we can forget the date and the details of events which, when they occurred, impressed us deeply. Already, for instance, few of us could pass an examination on the chronology of the war in Europe, and still fewer untangle the complicated sequence of its complicated happenings. This index promptly solves every such problem, and the several pages devoted by it to this subject alone form in themselves, for many purposes, a sufficient chronicle of the colossal operations conducted by the several nations.

Even without a file of THE TIMES or of any other paper, the index of what the columns of THE TIMES have contained is of frequent and great utility, and when it does not contain the exact information one happens to need, it offers just the assistance usually required for finding that information. The war, of course, is only one of thousands and thousands of subjects covered in the same way, and an elaborate system of cross references reduces to a minimum the difficulties of consultation that arise from the fact that no two people look at a given event from exactly the same standpoint or in any except the very simplest see the same peculiarity as the most important.

Of another newspaper index it used to be said that when the hunter for some fact had looked under every heading where it seemed likely to be, he could hopefully turn to "Pigeon-shooting" as a last chance. THE TIMES INDEX is not of that sort, for it illustrates the "state of the art" as it is today—a state very different from what it was in the past.

Mistranslation Serves as a War Measure.

That necessity has arisen for careful and elaborate explanations of the difference in signification between the English word "culture" and the German word "Kultur" illustrates anew the familiar but always interesting fact that when two peoples take a word from the language of a third they rarely select for their use the same one of its several meanings.

Every skilled translator knows of this linguistic peculiarity, and on principle refrains from turning, say, a French or German word into the English word that looks most like it. He knows that if he did this, in at least three cases out of four his translation would be the betrayal which, according to the exaggerating Italian proverb, every translation must be.

The case of "culture" and "Kultur" is peculiar, in that to use the former as the equivalent of the latter is a sort of war measure just now, since it puts German claims and pretensions in a way calculated to bring both ridicule and anger upon them. To do it is not fair, but it is as fair as numberless other things done in war.

Training in War and Peace.

A rather common assumption, not infrequently expressed and quite plausible on its face, is that, as the several nations now at war have already lost great numbers of their best-trained soldiers, the men who take the places of the "crack" regiments will be less efficient and trustworthy fighters.

It is at least possible that the thing will work out in just the other way. The troops called best before the war began had for the most part only a theoretical knowledge of their profession or trade. Theirs was the skill of the rifle range, the parade ground, and the highly artificial—and many have said unpractical—manoeuvres in the field against pretended enemies using blank cartridges. But whatever training the new recruits now coming forward get will be in the time and conditions of actual war, and though it may be brief, it will count for much.

NEW YORK'S OWN NEEDS.

Hospital Association Recalls Them Amid the Appeals from Abroad.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

After a meeting of the Trustees of the Hospital Saturday and Sunday Association just held, the following important statement to the public was issued by the Executive Committee:

In the pressure of appeals from abroad the good people of New York must not forget the great service of mercy and necessity which has to be rendered yearly by the hospitals of our city. The forty-seven institutions of the Hospital Saturday and Sunday Association are all dependent upon voluntary support. For the year ended Sept. 30 they have cared for 118,538 bed patients and 612,086 dispensary cases, making a total of 730,574. Their ambulance calls alone were 36,080.

The actual cost for maintenance of these institutions was $3,020,074.67, in excess of all their income from paying patients, from city appropriations for public charges and from income from endowments. This great sum has to be made up every year by voluntary contributions.

It is impossible to calculate the benefit to the community of keeping this vast army of ill and injured from breaking down and falling by the way.

The heartrending appeals from across the ocean must not be ignored, but they must be met by special sacrifice on the part of favored America. We cannot forget the destitute and wounded abroad. But in the daily battle of life in this great city of over five million people, many a man and woman have been making, right in our midst, a heroic struggle against illness, accident, and poverty. They wear no bright uniforms, wave no banners, win no medals, have no story, but they are coming daily in long lines to our hospitals where devoted doctors and nurses stand ready to help them. Their efforts must be made effective by loyal and united support.

Our forty-seven hospitals are facing a serious situation. In their behalf we make this united appeal for the loyal and generous support both of old contributors and new ones. Checks [illegible], 59 Cedar Street, will acknowledge all contributions, and they will be used solely for free hospital treatment.

HIGHWAY OF THE SEAS.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Were the Allies reinforced by Rumania, Italy, Holland, and Denmark, Germany and Austria would be invested by land save for local intercourse with Switzerland, and a blockade by ships along short coast lines would put them virtually in a state of siege. The Allies would then be entitled to the most terrible right of war—the right to starve a nation into submission. For by the law of siege nothing may enter save by the besiegers' will: everything is contraband.

The Allies, led by Great Britain, whose naval power points the way and sets the pace, are pressing to gain the advantage of the rule of siege without completing the circumvallation which alone imposes upon neutrals the duty to tolerate its terrific principle. Great Britain presumes to use the world's highway as a base for siege operations. She usurps the high seas for an arrogant employment of mines and for the search of neutral ships under an arrogant definition of contraband.

I make no comment now on the use of mines for coast offense or defense within narrow limits, or on the use of short-lived mines in an actual theatre of combat on the land.

But Great Britain declares she will lay a chain of mines from Scotland to Iceland, and warns all vessels bound to or from ports on or beyond the North Sea to take the Channel route, where they will be guided through the British mine fields.

Will this chain simply put up an additional bar to the egress of German cruisers to the Atlantic, we should have nothing to say. But it bars a highway between America and Northern Europe and compels neutral merchantmen to come to a station where they may be conveniently searched.

Here is reason for our vigorous protest, but, as Great Britain's action is avowedly taken because Germany has sown mines in the North Sea, the United States should seize the opportunity to warn both belligerents with impartial severity against an inhuman practice which will, unless checked, inevitably lead to worse.

The Times's War News.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

May I express my heartfelt appreciation of the war service of THE NEW YORK TIMES? As a teacher and student of history and as a specialist in international politics, which I happen to be, I am bound to say that THE TIMES has presented the most adequate and impartial account of the war that has come to my notice, and I have diligently perused much English, French, and German material.

I have not yet quite recovered from my amazement when I read the British "White Paper" in the columns of THE TIMES. I venture to think that the publication of the various "papers" by THE TIMES has done more than anything else to turn American sentiment to the side of the Allies, and I have been delighted to see the influence of your editorial columns thrown whole-heartedly into the scale.

You will be interested further to know that the opinions of your military expert are read with great care by a few of us here who are trying to follow the strategy of the war, and that we can always crush the doubting Thomases by appealing to this authority. May THE TIMES continue to flourish and go on publishing three pages of war news every day.

TO A COUSIN GERMAN.

My Hans, you say, with self-applausive jest,
"When Albert gave his Belgians Caesar's name—
'Bravest of all the Gauls'—surely 'twere shame
The King, unthorough man, forgot the rest:
'Bravest because most far from all the host
Provincial culture.'" Friend, it now your aim
Be that fine thoroughness your people claim,
Read on: "Such culture's worse, it stands confest, Oft weaken minds." And Caesar's word was just.
If men, bedeviled under culture's star,
Have left Louvain a void where flames still hiss,
Speared babes, and stamped the world's own Rose to dust,
God grant that Belgium's soul may dwell afar
Forever, from a culture such as this!

NO ORDER FOR SUBMARINES.

Fore River Company's Head Denies Story of Big Foreign Contract.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—Officials of the Government were interested today in a press dispatch from Boston saying that an order for the immediate construction of twenty submarines had been placed yesterday with the Fore River Shipbuilding Company of Quincy, Mass., and that it was understood that the order had come from some foreign Government. President Joseph W. Powell of the Fore River corporation was at the Navy Department today in connection with the opening of bids for the construction of destroyers for the United States Navy and Secretary Daniels took advantage of his presence there to ask him some questions about the Boston story.

Mr. Powell said that his concern had not received any contract for submarines from any foreign Government. One of the statements made in the Boston dispatch was that the submarines were not to be turned over to the foreign Government as completed vessels, but were to be shipped abroad in sections, and Secretary Daniels asked Mr. Powell some questions as to whether it would be proper for a neutral nation to permit such shipments to be made to a belligerent Government.

According to what was said at the Navy Department, Mr. Powell indicated that he was of the opinion that there would be no violation of neutrality if this course were followed. He did not admit, however, that his company had any intention to enter into any such arrangement with a foreign Government, belligerent or otherwise.

BROWNING WILL PROBATED.

Railroad President Left $300,000 in Trust for Son.

Special to The New York Times.

HACKENSACK, N. J., Nov. 10.—The will of John Hull Browning of Tenafly, financier and railroad President, has been probated by Surrogate Robert A. Sibbald of Hackensack.

Mr. Browning left to his executors $300,000 in trust for his son, John Hull Browning, Jr. They are to use such part of the estate as they consider good for this trust, the interest to be paid in such amounts and at such times as they deem best. In case of death of the beneficiary without issue the amount is to be equally divided among the children of his two brothers, W. C. Browning and R. F. Browning, and his niece, Eva E. Wilkinson.

All the rest of the estate of every kind goes to Eva B. Browning, widow of the testator. The executors are Eva B. Browning, James Wilkinson, the testator's brother-in-law, and William Hull Browning, his nephew. No evidence was offered as to the extent of the estate.

COLONEL LOSES APPEAL.

Order Denying Change of Venue in Barnes Suit, Is Upheld.

ALBANY, Nov. 10.—An appeal from Supreme Court Justice Chester's order denying a motion for a change of venue in the suit brought by Willian Barnes against Col. Theodore Roosevelt to recover $50,000 for alleged libel, was argued today before the Appellate Division, Third Department.

The discretionary powers of Justice Chester in denying the motion were questioned by the Roosevelt attorneys, and upheld by the legal representatives of Mr. Barnes.

URGE THAT HERRICK STAY.

Correspondents Ask the President to Retain the Ambassador.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—Although William G. Sharp of Ohio, who was nominated by President Wilson for Ambassador to France just before the outbreak of the war in Europe, was confirmed by the Senate, Myron T. Herrick of Ohio is still directing the affairs of the embassy in Paris, and a report is in circulation here that he is to be retained in office. Efforts were made at the White House today to confirm this report, but no information could be obtained tending to clear up the peculiar diplomatic tangle. Secretary Bryan declined to comment on the matter.

When Mr. Sharp is to take charge of the affairs of the embassy is a matter regarding which even the State Department does not seem to be informed fully. Mr. Sharp has voluntarily refrained from taking over the affairs of the embassy because he realizes that Mr. Herrick should not be relieved at such a critical juncture. It is believed that Mr. Sharp is not acting on instructions from Secretary Bryan.

In addition to the affairs of the United States Government, Ambassador Herrick is looking after the interests of Germany and Austria-Hungary. Mr. Sharp, it is said here, is rendering every assistance to Ambassador Herrick.

President Wilson, it is understood, has received many letters in the last few weeks urging him to retain Mr. Herrick as Ambassador to France. While the White House refused to discuss this phase of the situation, there is a strong belief here that Mr. Sharp, who before his appointment was a Representative in Congress, has acted without instructions in the course that he has pursued in Paris.

KEEP HERRICK IN PARIS.

Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt Calls Attention to the Value of His Services.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I have read with much interest the editorial in THE TIMES this morning on the work of our Ambassadors abroad, and note with particular appreciation the reference to the admirable work of Ambassador Herrick in Paris, and the urgent need for his remaining at this difficult post, the duties of which he has discharged with so much credit to the United States.

I have just returned from Paris, where I passed two months. My work in connection with the American ambulance brought me into close touch with the Ambassador, and I am able to speak with intimate knowledge of his efficiency, zeal, infinite tact, and high order of administrative capacity. It would be a pity if Mr. Herrick were taken away now at the very moment his services are of the greatest value. All who come in contact with him speak with unstinted praise of his intelligence and devotion. His conduct has been a source of pride to all Americans who have been in Paris. It cannot be expected that any other man who has not had Mr. Herrick's experience can be substituted now without grave detriment to the service.

I sincerely hope that President Wilson, whose conduct in this crisis has won the admiration not only of this nation but of the entire world, will see his way clear to grant the wish of thousands of Americans and retain Ambassador Herrick in the place in which he has served so well. To withdraw him at this juncture would mean incalculable injury to the relief work now going on. I am confident that if it were deemed proper to consult the French Government on the subject it would unhesitatingly urge the retention of Ambassador Herrick.

HAVEMEYER APPRAISEMENT.

Personal Property of Sugar Refiner's Widow Amounts to $77,817.

Special to The New York Times.

HACKENSACK, N. J., Nov. 10.—The appraisement of the personal property of Emilie de Loosey Havemeyer, widow of Theodore A. Havemeyer, who died at her home in Mahwah, near here, on May 8 last, was filed with Surrogate Robert A. Sibbald today, by the executors, William Butler Duncan of Port Washington, L. I., and Theodore A. Havemeyer of Glen Head, L. I.

The inventory shows a total appraisement of $77,817. The personal property in Mahwah, N. J., amounts to $19,182; personal property in Paris, France, $2,106; personal property in Montreux, Switzerland, $9,933; personal property in New York, $46,196, and stocks and bonds.

All the furnishings and art treasures contained in the home of Miss Emilie Havemeyer, at 244 Madison Avenue, will be sold next Monday under the auspices of the American Art Association. Some of the art treasures include a marble statue of "Sita," the consort of a Chinese room, including much carved teakwood, an enormous Chinese lantern, two large Chinese vases, and three beautiful tapestries that have been the subject of a monograph by the late Charles M. Follie. These were woven under Michael Audran, chef d'atelier in the Gobelin factory during the second quarter of the century, from the designs of Etienne Jeaurat. These are scenes from "Les Fêtes du Village." The first is a love scene with Cupid, the second a festival to Pan, and the third a magnificent outdoor banquet scene. An old Brussels tapestry is by Francis Tons, a Flemish weaver of the seventeenth century, and is signed with his name and the date, 1662.

Paintings which include Hans Makart's "Bathers Surprised," and Alfred Stevens's "The Last Resort," among others, will be sold at the American Art Galleries on Wednesday evening, Nov. 18.

AIDS TEACHER-MOTHERS.

Mayor Favors Granting Leaves of Absence to Them.

Mayor Mitchel in a letter asked President Thomas W. Churchill of the Board of Education yesterday if it was not possible to settle the teacher-mother question by allowing teachers who expect to become mothers a leave of absence without pay. This is the Mayor's letter:

Office of the Mayor, Nov. 9, 1914.

Dear President Churchill:

I have received numerous communications on the policy of the Board of Education with regard to teachers who become mothers. May I ask for a statement by you of the considerations which led to the adoption of what I am informed is your present policy, namely, that the board does not excuse absences of school teachers on account of childbirth? To many there seems an inconsistency in permitting teachers who marry to remain in the teaching service while refusing to grant leaves of absence on the ground of maternity. If teachers are permitted to marry and remain in the teaching service, why should not some arrangement be made to enable them to obtain leave of absence without pay?

Would not a simple rule providing for leave of absence in this case for a suitable period put an end to all this discussion, and instead of working injury to the schools is likely to do them a great deal of good? Sincerely yours,

JOHN PURROY MITCHEL, Mayor.

Thomas W. Churchill, Esq., President, Board of Education.

It is the first time the Mayor has discussed the subject, and his letter was taken to mean that the Board of Education may change its present policy regarding teacher-mothers.

PLANS SANITARY SHOPS.

Health Dept. Seeks Co-operation Between Employers and Workers.

Health Commissioner Goldwater said yesterday that the Health Department has made plans providing for a sanitary inspection of every factory and workshop in the city. Facts thus gathered will be turned over to employers and workers, who will then know what ought to be done to better conditions.

In outlining the plan Dr. Goldwater said: "Since it is advantageous that the work be carried on through the co-operation of employer and employes, the activities of the Health Department should be limited to initiating the movement, which has for its object the organization of a work which will accomplish the greatest good in every industry. The Department of Health is prepared to undertake the sanitary survey of any industry, trade, or group of manufacturing establishments in the city with the view of ascertaining conditions and trying to show that can be accomplished through a system of voluntary sanitary control.

"Through its Bureau of Public Health the department will be glad to assist in formulating sanitary industrial standards for the prevention of occupational diseases."

The movement is the outgrowth of the garment workers' strike of four years ago, when it was ruled that every industry shall be responsible for the sanitary conditions in that industry.

OFFICE SEEKS KINKEAD.

Jersey City Sheriff Will Hold On to Congress Seat.

Representative Eugene Kinkead, who has been elected Sheriff of Hudson County, and will take charge of the lucrative county office today, announced yesterday, after taking the oath of office and filing a bond for $50,000, that he would continue to serve in Congress without pay until the end of this term on March 4 if the House is willing that he shall be a dual officeholder. His reason for not resigning as a member, he said, is to save the State an expense of $20,000 or $30,000 for a special election to fill a vacancy for a few months. He thinks he has a legal right to fill the two places with the consent of the House of Representatives, which is the judge of the qualifications of its members.

Kinkead was appointed Postmaster of Jersey City several months ago, but did not qualify. He thought his services were needed in the House to support the measures of President Wilson when opposition to Administration bills developed in the Democratic majority. The Postmastership is still vacant, although the term of Gen. Wanser, a Republican, who holds over, expired last March. Sheriff Kinkead will receive a touring car when he enters on his new office today, the gift of several of his close political friends.

DE COPPET WILL FILED.

Sons Are to Retain Control of the Brokerage Firm.

The will of Frederick De Coppet of the New York brokerage house of De Coppet & Co., who died in Paris, France, on Oct. 18, was filed for probate yesterday. The petition recites there is a personal estate in excess of $10,000. His interest in De Coppet & Co. is to be divided into four equal parts, one of which goes outright to the widow and three parts in trust to each of the sons, L. Casimir, Ernest H., and Robert F. De Coppet. The residue goes to the widow.

The executors, William Stagg Cessen and Eugene Gerry, are authorized to keep the funds of the estate in De Coppet & Co. invested there so long as the sons L. Casimir and Ernest H. De Coppet, together with Robert F. Barclay, a partner, retain control of the firm and maintain the policy of keeping a cash capital equal to at least one-half the liabilities of the firm.

Eight Children Fatherless.

The Charity Organization Society asks for funds to help meet the rent and provide milk and food through the Winter for eight fatherless children, their widowed mother, and a helpless grandmother. The father, who died of pneumonia last year, had lost a few weeks before, and, though his employer helped him and his in the past aided the widow, she must have additional aid. The "man of the house" is a boy of 14, who is at present the only wage-earner, though in another year the second boy will be far enough advanced in school to secure working papers and help bear the burden. The church is giving $8 a week, but relatives cannot aid. The youngest baby is but 11 months old.

Gifts may be sent to the office of the society, 105 East Twenty-second Street, and will be acknowledged.

The society acknowledges, with thanks, the following contributions, received in response to previous appeals in THE TIMES for other families: Mrs. John Glass, $5; "E. M. N.," $5; Mrs. E. J. Bennett, $2; Miss Margaretta C. Walker, jr., $1; "L. L. B.," $2.

STREET CLEANING CALLED A FAILURE

Academy of Medicine Says Methods Are Antiquated and Unsatisfactory.

CONFERENCE ON REFORMS

Commissioner Fetherston Suggests a Campaign of Education in the Public Schools.

Street Cleaning Commissioner Fetherston, Police Commissioner Woods, and other city officials attended a conference in the Academy of Medicine building yesterday, at which New York's street cleaning methods were characterized as "antiquated, expensive, and unsatisfactory," by the Academy's Committee on Public Health. It has been conducting an investigation of street-cleaning conditions, and has come to the conclusion that control of the streets should be centralized under one head by a revision of the City Charter, instead of being shared as at present by the street cleaning, police, health, and highways authorities.

The conference was the beginning of the academy's campaign to put through some reforms, and the city officials were urged to lend their support. Commissioner Fetherston and Commissioner Woods, after being quizzed with regard to the defects in the present system, explained to the committee the handicaps under which their departments were working. In general, they said, they approved of the reforms the academy was seeking.

Representing the Academy were Dr. W. H. Polk, its President; Dr. Walter B. James, and Dr. Charles Loomis Dana, Chairman of the Public Health Committee. The representatives of the city, in addition to Mr. Woods and Mr. Fetherston, were E. P. Goodrich, consulting engineer in the Department of Public Works, who represented Borough President Marks; William H. Abbott, Deputy Commissioner of the Tenement House Department; R. H. Gillespie, representing Borough President Mathewson of the Bronx; Dr. Haven Emerson, Sanitary Superintendent of the Health Department; Dr. Blauvelt, Sanitary Superintendent for the Bronx; John H. Sone, representing the Borough of Richmond, and Spencer Phoenix, representing City Chamberlain Bruere.

Commissioner Woods told about his plan whereby policemen on duty are supposed to keep an eye out for general sanitary conditions, and in a way serve as health officers in their districts. Members of the Academy expressed great interest in the experiment, and accepted the Commissioner's invitation to send a committee to his department

QUAINT PLAY OPENS THE PUNCH & JUDY

New Miniature Theatre Is Launched with "The Marriage of Columbine."

HERBERT YOST EXCELS

THE MARRIAGE OF COLUMBINE, a comedy in four acts, by Harold Chapin. At the Punch and Judy Theatre.

Scaramouche	Charles Hopkins
Columbine	Mrs. Hopkins
Tommy	John E. Emery
May	By Herself
Yessus	By Itself
George Salamandro	Edward Emery
Mr. La Boiaro	Louise C. Hale
Alfred Scott	Herbert Yost
Jessie Poole	Vera Pole
Bob	Charles Hampden
Annie	Linda Bolton
Mrs. Jollings	Eleanor Carey

The Punch & Judy Theatre, the newest and one of the tiniest playhouses in New York, was thrown wide to the public last evening when the director of the enterprise, Charles Hopkins, presented as his inaugural offering a play of quaint and appropriate charm called "The Marriage of Columbine." The author is Harold Chapin and his play, a four-act comedy touched with the spirit of fantasy.

Everything in the new theatre, from the smallest, blue-frocked Elizabethan distributing playbills at the inviting entrance to the smallest detail of the carefully made production, reflects the guiding presence of a nicely discriminating taste that gives promise of good things to come under the roof of the Punch & Judy. In fact, everything is right at the new playhouse except the play. For all its considerable charm and possession of much that is sure to please, "The Marriage of Columbine" is bafflingly insufficient.

A conclusion one seems to have arrived at Mr Chapin in the writing of his piece, and the finished play has the unsatisfying quality of an unfinished sketch, as though its manuscript were still waiting for a more skilful and a more determined hand to sharpen its outlines and to distribute its values. As it stands, there is an uncertainty as to the purpose and a difficult doubt as to [illegible] It has not been painstakingly as well [illegible] riage of Columbine bears the marks of having been hazily rather than hastily written.

The story begins and ends in the household of Scaramouche, the great clown of a journeying circus that has reached the town of Dunchester in England somewhere back in the more peaceful years of the last century.

There is the simple, kindly, unworldly family is brought into conflict with one of the more trying aspects of aggressive respectability. Grief follows. Columbine has lived since her girlhood in the most blissful domesticity with Scaramouche, without realizing that she had never been properly married to him or guessing that this mattered in the least until she is introduced for the first time to repudiating society in the person of a deeply religious and actively holy young man who bears a curious but apparently adventitious relation to journalism.

What follows imports into the play, in the gently derisive manner of fantasy, some of the deep humors of one aspect of the missionary. You see the ignorance that is the bigotry of the straight and narrow mind brought to bear upon the ignorance that is the innocence of an entirely blank mind. The result is a tragi-comic disarray.

The entire blankness of Columbine's mind, which must be accepted as a necessary premise of the comedy, if it is to be accepted if the mood of fantasy were more clearly resolved, and if in addition the rôle of Columbine were intrusted to an actress whose [illegible] vance and natural manner were not so [illegible] ly at odds with all thought of a woman of ignorance and vulgar upbringing. Mrs. Hopkins, who plays Columbine, is an actress of great charm and distinction, but she is grievously miscast in the new play at the Punch & Judy.

But if the thought of the comedy goes astray at these points, the play reveals some very delightful glimpses of Scaramouche's fireside and of the strange folk gathered there, and the playing of several of the rôles is done to a perfection that in itself would quite amply reward a visit to the new playhouse.

The most distinguished performance of the evening is given by Herbert Yost, last seen here, if memory serves, as the more diminutive bridegroom in Philip Bartholomae's diverting "Overnight." That was a clever bit of farce acting that Mr. Yost did in that entertainment, but, bright as it was, it was commonplace compared with the genuinely fine work he does as the holy young man from Dunchester. He plays throughout with a complete understanding that is reflected in every slightest tone and gesture. Mr. Yost is a most gifted and intelligent comedian.

Miss Louise Closser Hale gives a delightful portrait of an old woman, wrinkled of face, but still given to a birdlike airiness in her flouncing about, who lives in the fading and distorted memories of her life as a bareback rider, and who still finds comfort in harking back to the steadily increasing grandeur of the last good-for-nought who played with her transient affections. Edward Emery is pleasing as another and more genial graduate of the ring and beneficiary of the kindliness of Scaramouche. Charles Hampden gives life and color to a tiny rôle in the comedy.

And then there is Mr. Hopkins himself, the director of the theatre, who appears in the rôle of Scaramouche. A rather trying reluctance of voice and a general absence of lightness from his touch may be part of his interpretation of the character, but one is permitted to believe that another interpretation would have sweetened the comedy, and to look forward to seeing his work in another and quite different rôle.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

"The Battle Cry" is to go on tour next week, and on Monday "The Only Girl" will move from the Thirty-ninth Street Theatre into the Lyric. The same evening "The High Cost of Loving" will move from the Republic to the Thirty-ninth Street.

The Ampersands, a dramatic organization of the Bronx, will give its next performance and reception Friday night, Nov. 20, at the McKinley Square Casino, when Bronson Howard's "The Young Mrs. Winthrop" will be produced.

When "Pilate's Daughter" is produced at what is now the Garden Theatre on Nov. 23 the name of that playhouse will be changed to the Madison Square Theatre.

A special matinee of "Under Cover" will be given at the Cort Theatre on Dec. 1 for an audience made up entirely of blind persons.

"The Traffic," a four-act play, will succeed "Panthea" at the New York Theatre next Monday night.

Singer's company of twenty midgets, now playing at Hammerstein's, were the guests of the management of that theatre at a dinner at Hotel Endicott last night.

Joseph Coyne, who has been in New York for several days, received a cable yesterday from George Tyler calling him back to England to play the part of Sandy in the London production of "The Girl from Utah."

When the Princess Theatre reopens in a few weeks one of the leading plays will be a one-act comedy, "Nellie," by George Ade.

Charles Klein, the playwright, will become an author for one performance at the Lyceum Theatre Friday at the benefit for the British War Relief Association. He will appear as Sherry with William Faversham in the third act of "The Squaw Man," which will be substituted for the tabloid version previously announced.

The Municipal Band of Havana, consisting of seventy musicians, contributed by the Cuban Government as a feature of the Tercentenary Celebration, now in progress in New York, will play a concert programme in their seats in the proscenium boxes between the acts at this afternoon's performance of "Wars of the World" at the Hippodrome.

George Fawcett, who is playing the Police Inspector in "The Law of the Land" at the Forty-eighth Street Theatre, was the guest of Inspector Faurot at Police Headquarters yesterday afternoon.

CENTURY REVIVES "AIDA."

An Excellent Production of Verdi's Work—Kingston as Rhadames.

The Century Opera Company went back to its beginnings last night, when it produced for the first time this season Verdi's "Aida," the opera with which the organization made its entry into the field last year. As on that occasion, Morgan Kingston sang the rôle of Rhadames, and Louis Kreidler that of Amonasro, while Kathleen Howard appeared as Amneris, and Lois Ewell was Aida, a part she did not come into last season until the second performance.

Last year the performance earned a favorable first opinion for the company, but last night's performance, with the improvements that have come into almost every department of the organization, was decidedly better, and more significant because it represented the general level which the company has reached. It was a production on a high level of excellence, whose principals, chorus, scenery, and costuming, in other words, whose general effectiveness, was all that could be asked for in any opera house except the few which draw the most famous singers from all parts of the earth.

The cast was familiar in the main. Among the parts of secondary importance, Alfred Kaufman was strongest as the King, while a newcomer, Janet Kaan, elevated from the chorus, it is understood, sang the notes of the High Priestess in the stage in a more impressive style than is usually brought to bear on this rôle Agide Jacchia conducted.

MISS INGALLS ENGAGED.

Daughter of Mrs. Melville E. Ingalls to Wed Frederic T. Murphy.

Mrs. Melville E. Ingalls of Hot Springs, Va., announces the engagement of her daughter, Miss Gladys Ingalls, to Frederic T. Murphy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Francis Murphy of 120 East Sixty-fifth Street, this city.

Miss Ingalls is the only daughter of the late Melville E. Ingalls, former President of the Big Four Railroad, who died last July at the Virginia Hot Springs, and who had been prominent in transportation affairs in the Middle West for two decades. She has four brothers, Melville E. Ingalls, Jr., and Fay Ingalls, who live in New York; George H. Ingalls of Chicago and Albert S. Ingalls of Cleveland, Ohio.

No date has been set for the wedding, which is to take place at the Ingalls' villa, Inglecote, at Hot Springs, some time next Spring.

Mrs. Ingalls and her daughter are to remain at the Hot Springs until next January when they will go to southern California for the remainder of the Winter. They are recovering from an automobile accident which occurred several weeks ago while they were visiting near Westfield, Mass. The artery in Mrs. Ingalls's left wrist was severed when she threw her arm through the glass door of her limousine car. Miss Ingalls suffered from shock and is still attended by a nurse.

Mr. Murphy is Vice President of the Mark Cross Company of New York and London, of which his father is President. He was graduated from Yale University, class of '08, and belongs to the Yale, Tennis and Racquet, and other clubs.

HOPE HAMILTON TO WED.

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Hamilton Engaged to H. L. Kaufman

Mr. and Mrs. William A. Hamilton of 177 East Sixty-fourth Street announce the engagement of their only daughter, Miss Hope Hamilton, to Harry Livingston Kaufman of Cleveland, Ohio, son of the late Samuel R. Kaufman of Marquette, Mich.

Miss Hamilton made her début in society during the Winter of 1913, at a dinner dance given on Jan. 8 of that year by Mrs. George J. Gould, a cousin of her mother's, at the town residence, 857 Fifth Avenue. She has taken an active part in the doings of the younger set, and spent last Summer at Newport.

Her brother is Arthur Gould Hamilton, who was married to Miss Elizabeth Van Heusen, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. Van Heusen, last January.

Mr. Kaufman is a graduate of Cornell University, and is in business in Cleveland. His brother is Louis G. Kaufman, President of the Chatham and Phenix Bank of New York, and his sister is Mrs. Edward N. Breitung, who is well known in society, and makes her home [illegible] Winter season at the St. Regis.

No date has been set for the wedding.

JUNIORS AID WAR RELIEF.

The Junior War Relief Society organized by Mrs. Walter Eyre Lambert and made up of young society girls and young married women, held its first meeting yesterday at Sherry's with an attendance of 150. There were tables seating three each, and these were being devoted to first-aid packages, bandages and dressings, under the supervision of three trained nurses from the Eye and Ear Infirmary. Other tables devoted to the preparation of work were supervised by Mrs. E. H. L. Gould.

Mrs. Allen Townsend had the table of children's dresses, Mrs. De Witt Clinton Falls the nightingale tables, Mrs. William H. Post crochet scarfs and caps, Mrs. Samuel H. Valentine, assisted by her sister, Miss Henrietta Porter, had the knitted neck scarfs, Mrs. Langdon Roper had the flannel bands and knitted wristlets, Mrs. Rufus L. Patterson had charge of the comfort bags, and Miss M. M. Kearney took charge of the boot socks table.

Mrs. Lambert is the President of the society; Mrs. J. D. Van Buren, Secretary; Mrs. Markham Marshall, Treasurer; Mrs. E. L. R. Gould is the preparer, and Mrs. James W. Lane is the purchaser of the materials.

COTTON BALL TOMORROW.

Society is interested in the cotton ball to be given under the auspices of the New York Southern Society tomorrow night at the Waldorf-Astoria, and many interesting features are promised. The object of the ball is to popularize the use of cotton and to augment a fund for the relief of Southerners in need. Cotton costumes are to be generally worn by the women who attend.

Many cotton bales and cotton bolls will be used in decorating the grand ballroom, and there will be two negro bands to provide music for the dancing which will begin at 9:30 o'clock. Two typical negro "mammies" have been brought especially from the cotton States for the occasion.

Cotton dominoes are to be provided for those who come in silks and satins and the men are to wear cotton gloves and cotton bolls as boutonnières. The officers of the army and navy who attend have been asked to wear cotton duck uniforms.

Many guests are expected to attend from Baltimore and the South, and a representative delegation from Washington, D. C., is also expected, including the Secretary of the Navy, and Mrs. Daniels, Postmaster General and Mrs. Burleson, and the Misses Adele and Lucy Burleson, Genevieve Champ Clark, and Callie Hoke Smith. Secretary of the Treasury William G. McAdoo is the Honorary Chairman, Mrs. Algernon S. Sullivan of 16 West Eleventh Street is Honorary Chairman of the Committee of Women.

Many prominent society women are among the committee members and patronesses.

Calico Ball for War Sufferers.

A calico ball for the benefit of the Committee of Mercy is to be given tomorrow night at Miss Joan Sawyer's Persian Garden, the proceeds to go for the relief of the women and children made destitute by the war. The guests have been requested to wear costumes or dominos of calico.

August Belmont is Treasurer of the Committee of Mercy, and the Ball Committee includes Mrs. Charles H. Ditson, Mrs. J. Gordon Douglas, Mrs. James R. Eustis, Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, Mrs. Ernest Iselin, Mrs. Schuyler Van Rensselaer, Miss Elsie de Wolfe, Miss Jeannette L. Gilder, James W. Barney, Williams P. Burden, Francis Crown'nshield, Bertram Cruger, Sherman Day, Cyril Hatch, Rene La Montagne, and Horace C. Stabbins.

SIBYL YOUNG, BRIDE OF LYMAN N. HINE

Ceremony in St. Thomas's, with Rev. Dr. Stires and Rev. Dr. Stoddard Officiating.

THE WEDDING ATTENDANTS

The wedding of Lyman Northrop Hine, son of Mr. and Mrs. Francis L. Hine, and Miss Sibyl E. Young, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward E. Young, formerly of Jersey City, but now of New York, took place yesterday in St. Thomas's Church at 4 o'clock.

The church was decorated with palms and huge clusters of white chrysanthemums. The officiating clergymen were the Rev. Dr. Ernest M. Stires, rector of St. Thomas's, and the Rev. Edward L. Stoddard of Jersey City.

The bride walked up the nave with her father, who gave her in marriage. She wore a white satin gown with a skirt bordered with seed pearls, and over this came an almost straight medieval slip of white satin, also bordered with seed pearls, and having a flat girdle of pearls. The short sleeves were pointed slightly and edged with pearls, that also finished the low neck of the tunic. The long tulle veil, which completely covered the long, narrow satin Court train, was suspended from the shoulders and, lined with box-plaited tulle, was carried high up on the coiffure, which was done in a high Psyche knot. The veil was held flat to the head by a band of pearls. At the left side were two long sprays of orange blossoms. She carried a round bouquet of lilies of the valley with gardenias in the centre, and wore the bridegroom's gift, a pendant of sapphires and diamonds.

Miss Natalie Smith, the maid of honor, wore a satin gown with a silver lace tunic and a satin sash with embroidered silver motifs. Her hat was a large, light, silvery brown satin. The other attendants were Mrs. F. Worthington Hine and the Misses Mary Margaret Walker of Detroit, Mich.; Mildred Orthwein and Isabel Mersman of St. Louis, and Elizabeth Stillman Kendall and Marie Cozens of New York. They were in light pink satin and silver lace. The full gathered tunics of pink satin were edged with silver and fell over lace petticoats. All of the attendants wore hats similar to the maid of honor, and carried rose tree branches covered with small and large pink roses and buds.

Mr. Hine's best man was William K. Dick, and the ushers were Albert De Silver, John T. Terry, Jr., Ethelbert Talbot, Carlton Hewett, H. Lloyd Folsom, and David H. Dows, who took the place left vacant by Harry Bingham.

The church ceremony was followed by a reception in the marble ballroom at the St. Regis, which was decorated with palms and cut flowers. Mrs. Young, the bride's mother, who received the guests, wore a black satin robe with a tunic of gold embroidered black net edged with sable and a small black hat covered with black gourah feathers. Mrs. Hine, the mother of the bridegroom, was in purple velvet, veiled with a tunic of black lace edged with monkey fur and a mauve corsage deepening into purple. Her black hat was trimmed with black feathers.

SOCIAL NOTES.

Mr. and Mrs. Snowden A. Fahnestock are being congratulated on the birth of a son yesterday morning at their home, 14 East Seventy-sixth Street. Mrs. Fahnestock was formerly Miss Elizabeth Bertron.

Mrs. Starr King Walker of 128 East Thirty-eighth Street will give a coming-out reception for her daughter, Miss Evelyn S. Walker, at her home on Saturday afternoon, Nov. 28, from 4 to 7 o'clock.

Miss Rita Boker, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carl F. Boker of 23 West Seventy-sixth Street, is to be among the season's débutantes.

Mrs. Thomas H. Barber of 18 East Seventieth Street, who is to give a tea on Nov. 28 for her niece, Miss Justine V. R. Townsend, will also give the débutante a series of dinners and a large theatre party during the season.

Mrs. Lancaster Morgan is to introduce her daughter, Miss Helen Ridgely Morgan, to society at a tea dance at Sherry's on Dec. 5, to be followed that evening by a dinner at 180 West Fifty-ninth Street. Mrs. Morgan is also to give a dinner for the débutante on Dec. 7, taking her guests afterward to the first dance of the Junior Assemblies, of which she is a patroness.

Mrs. George F. Gregory will give an informal dance for her daughter, Miss Ruth Gregory, on Friday evening, Nov. 27, at the Normandie Square Hotel. Miss Gregory will not make her début until the season of 1915-16.

The wedding of Miss Leontine Augusta Boyd and Harold Lusk Flint will take place at 4 o'clock this afternoon at the town house of the bride's father, William A. Boyd, 24 East Seventy-eighth Street. None except relatives and a few friends will be present at the ceremony, and a small reception will follow.

Mr. and Mrs. Guy Wilkinson will not return to London this year, but have taken an apartment at 515 Park Avenue, where, with their daughter, Miss Constance Wilkinson, they will spend the Winter.

Mrs. Alice T. Harbeson arrived here yesterday on the Cunarder steamer Orduna, having closed her apartment in Paris, and will spend the Winter at the Plaza.

THE KNEISEL QUARTET.

A New Composition by Zoltan Kodaly Played.

The Kneisel Quartet made its first appearance this season last evening in Aeolian Hall under circumstances long familiar, before a large audience of discriminating enthusiasts, keenly attentive and appreciative. The Quartet itself showed something of the effects of the European war. Mr. Hans Letz, the second violin, is detained in Germany, of which country he is a native, for military duty; and his place was taken by Mr. Samuel Gardner, a young player who has been heard in Mr. Kneisel's concerts before, when the employment of additional violins was made necessary by the music played.

He is a wholly competent substitute. A pupil of Mr. Kneisel's, his style of playing is naturally formed upon his teacher's. Mr. Gardner has individuality; and yet his playing is well assimilated already to that of his colleagues in the organization, so that the performance suffered nothing in respect of unity of feeling, balance, or beauty of tone. And he was put to a severe test in many ways in the new piece that appeared upon the programme, a quartet by Zoltan Kodaly, heard for the first time publicly in New York.

The composer is a Hungarian, a young man of 31 years, now a Professor of Composition at the Academie in Pesth. He is credited with a desire to free Hungarian music from the gypsy influences that have so strongly modified it as it is known to the rest of the world; and, so freed, to use it as the material for a national school of composition. His quartet is an interesting and in many ways delightful composition. While it does not seem the product of a great creative impulse, it has many traits of originality and discloses a strong hand in the moulding of its material, and in writing freely and effectively for the apparatus of the string quartet.

The national element in the music is evident in all four of the movements. It is impressed upon the listener in the very first phrase, a theme that plays a considerable part all through the work. And it is also evident that this national element is different openly from what has been so freely used by composers heretofore as Hungarian. There is, indeed, not a little of it that suggests the characteristics of Slavonic music, of Russian folk-song. But this quartet is by no means to be considered as chiefly an exposition of folk music. Its structure and development are made in a larger and more cosmopolitan sense.

The themes are not only of a strong impressiveness, but there is a true imaginative power in the composer's use of them; there are pages of poetical fancy. The composer is never at a loss for something to say, nor for a forcible and pregnant expression. The climax of the first movement is of a singularly powerful effect; and though the movement is long, perhaps too long, the total impression is seizing. There is an extensive pizzicato passage, beginning as a slow movement, of a peculiarly haunting beauty, and though this movement, too, has its lengths, its poignant melancholy is not to be denied. The presto is short, of an almost hectic vivacity.

The last movement suggests a succession of variations on the theme already noted as playing an important rôle through the composition. Kodaly is fond of the contrast of acid dissonances with fairer-favored harmonies; he cultivates the juxtaposition of minor seconds with effects sometimes startling. He is fond, too, of "ostinato" figures, oft repeated; and certain of his themes with their harmonies suggest modal rather than tonal characteristics. There are many unfamiliar and colorful effects of instrumentation in his scoring.

The new quartet engrossed the attention of the audience if it did not entirely give delight; and it was liberally applauded. It is at least not a commonplace production, and it was worth the effort Mr. Kneisel made to produce it—a very considerable effort, because of the extraordinary difficulties it presents in many passages in the matter of intonation and proper ensemble. These were admirably overcome.

The quartet was beautifully framed between Schumann's quartet in A major and Mozart's in E flat major; both works that Mr. Kneisel has many times played, as he did last night, with suave and perfect finish and a golden beauty of tone.

CHARLES L. ATTERBURY DIES

Prominent Railroad and Corporation Lawyer Was 72.

Charles Larned Atterbury, prominent as a corporation lawyer for the last forty years, died yesterday at his home at 131 East Seventieth Street. He was born in Detroit on Dec. 3, 1842, and was the son of John G. and Catherine J. Atterbury. After graduating from Yale in 1864 he studied law in Detroit, and afterward practiced in that city from 1868 to 1874. In the latter year he came to New York and entered the firm of Atterbury & Boyd. Before long he became connected with the legal department of the Erie Railway and rose to be general counsel of the company and finally Assistant President.

In 1884 Mr. Atterbury left the Erie to become general counsel of the Chicago & Atlantic Railway Company, the Pullman Palace Car Company, and the National Cordage Company. He later became consulting lawyer for the United Railroads of San Francisco, the United Railways Investment Company, the Sierra & San Francisco Power Company, the Railway and Development Power Company, the Philadelphia Company, the Pittsburgh Railway, Light and Power Company, and other corporations.

Mr. Atterbury was a member of the Bar Association and had served on its Executive Committee. He was also a member of the Century, University, and City Midday Clubs.

On Jan. 7, 1868, he was married to Miss Katherine M. Dow. Their only son is Grosvenor Atterbury, the architect. Mr. Atterbury's country house was at Shinnecock Hills, L. I., and his office at 30 Broad Street.

Miss Julia Livingston Delafield.

Miss Julia Livingston Delafield, a direct descendant of John Delafield, who came to this city in 1783, and a daughter of the late Major Joseph Delafield, died yesterday at the home of her brother, Maturin Livingston Delafield, at Fieldston, New York City, in her seventy-ninth year. Miss Delafield was born in the home of her grandfather, Maturin Livingston, at 72 Leonard Street, and devoted her life to acts of charity in connection with the Pike Street School of the Children's Aid Society for the last fifty years. She was a member of the Society of the Colonial Dames of America. Lewis Livingston Delafield, a member of the bar of this city, is another brother.

Frederick Llewellyn Goss.

Frederick Llewellyn Goss, inventor of the printing press which bears his name and Vice President of the Goss Printing Press Company of Chicago, died yesterday at his home in that city. He was born in Newport, Wales, in 1842, and came to the United States while a young man, living first in Milwaukee and then in Chicago. With his brother he organized the Goss Printing Press Company, to manufacture presses of the type which he had invented. For a number of years past he had been in charge of the company's Eastern offices at 1 Madison Avenue. He is survived by a widow, formerly Miss Jessie Foster of London, and five children by a previous marriage.

Henry J. G. Melcher Drops Dead.

Henry J. G. Melcher, for the last fifteen years manager of the Rainey Coke and Coal Company, which is owned by the late W. S. Rainey estate, of which Paul J. Rainey, the hunter and lecturer, and Roy Rainey, the attorney, are the executors, dropped dead yesterday in the building at 527 Fifth Avenue. Mr. Melcher was born in Cleveland, Ohio, and was fifty-seven years old. He had been connected with the Rainey Coal and Coke Company for thirty years, starting in its employ as a clerk. His home was in Mount Vernon, where he was a member of the German Lutheran Church. Mr. Melcher is survived by his widow, two daughters, and a son.

Corning-Beatty Engagement.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Corning of 1 Lexington Avenue have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Helen Corning, to C. Francis Beatty, son of Mrs. Theodora Drake Beatty of 125 Fort Greene Place, Brooklyn. Mr. Beatty is a graduate of Amherst College, class of '13. No date has been set for the wedding.

MRS. BELMONT STIRS WOMEN OF SOUTH

Is Sure Suffrage Has Won, for Now They Differ About Details.

SEEK DEMOCRATIC AID

Great Conference at Chattanooga Wants the Party to Declare for Votes for Women.

Special to The New York Times.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Nov. 10.—Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont of New York and Miss Christabel Pankhurst of London were the central figures at the Southern States Suffrage Conference, which opened here today. Others who divided attention with these leaders were Mrs. Harriot Stanton Blatch and Mrs. Medill McCormick of Chicago. Mrs. Belmont was the chief speaker tonight at a meeting at the Lyric Theatre.

In her address tonight Mrs. Belmont called attention to the fact that she was a native of the South, and asserted that the women of the South had given an impetus to the suffrage movement. Mrs. Belmont dwelt at some length upon the war.

"With men waging war on earth, in the air, on the sea, and beneath the waters, thereof," she said, "shelling cities and destroying everything before them, leaving women and children without a place to lay their heads, it is somewhat illogical to talk of woman's sphere as the home.

"In my opinion, the men who deliberately make war on women and children, as has been done in Belgium, are not fit to be intrusted with the ballot, for it was created as the weapon of civilization and Christianity, not of wholesale butchery. Although women are not responsible for the European war, it is most significant that the various Governments are making pathetic appeals to them to come and save their country by doing the work of the men who have gone to the front.

"There are sections in Europe where women are actually been called upon to do the voting in the absence of the men. Can it be possible that when the struggle is over and the destinies of the world decided upon the Governments will return to their time-worn and silly arguments against women in their public affairs? How will the mothers of Germany answer the Kaiser's platitudes about children, Church, and kitchen, all of which are rapidly disappearing before the guns of the destroyer?"

Mrs. Belmont said that she felt toward woman suffrage as she did about the cotton industry—both should have the undivided support of the whole United States. Discussing suffrage conditions in this country, Mrs. Belmont stirred the Southern women in her audience by saying:

"We have progressed so far that we are disagreeing about the terms on which we shall accept the vote—the inevitable premonition of victory. I have sworn allegiance to a national amendment, while the Southern Conference seems to hold to the principles of state rights. If the latter method proves effective, I shall gratefully accept the results."

This sentiment was indorsed by the half dozen other speakers, including Mrs. Blatch and Miss Laura Clay of Kentucky.

After she had delivered her address tonight Mrs. Belmont was asked to answer this question: "Should votes for women in the South include votes for negro women?"

"As for that," replied Mrs. Belmont, "I should not like to express an opinion. That is a problem that should be left entirely to the men of the South to decide. They will do what is just.

"We seek for women political rights equal to those of men. Negro women could not be disfranchised if negro men; they are disfranchised let the women share the same treatment. Our campaign is to eliminate discrimination against women and secure for them a parity with men in the matter of right to vote."

One feature of the day's programme was a symposium dealing with a resolution adopted in 1848 by the Woman's Rights Convention at Seneca Falls, N. Y., said to be the first public demand by an organized body in this country for votes for women.

"It fell like a bomb," said Mrs. Blatch. "The press poured out ridicule on the demand. But blessed be ridicule. It made known the birth of the woman's movement."

Mrs. Blatch characterized the anti-suffragist as the "isolated woman unit" and declared women were the first class to fight their battle entirely alone.

Miss Kate M. Gordon of New Orleans told the convention that the immediate object of the conference was to make the Democratic Party declare for "votes for women" in its next national platform. Miss Gordon and President Wilson had asserted that he was helpless to act, and that any expression as to suffrage for women must come from the party.

"We Southern suffragists believe," continued Miss Gordon, "that if the Democratic Party declares for woman suffrage it will mean a veritable suffrage landslide within the next five or six years. In the last year we have witnessed the Democratic caucus go out of its way to defeat the establishment of a woman suffrage committee in the House of Representatives by declaring the party's belief in suffrage as a State and not as a Federal right, thus disposing of a responsibility on a movement that has assumed a world-wide proportion.

"ELEKTRA" NOT A SUCCESS.

Oscar Hammerstein Testifies in Conductor's Suit Against Him.

Oscar Hammerstein expressed the opinion yesterday that the opera "Elektra" had never been a success, when he was cross-examined before Judge Thomas in the Federal District Court in the suit for breach of salary which Simon J. Hirsch has brought against him.

"'Elektra,'" said he, "was not a success. I did not like the opera myself, and I did not like the people in it. The success of an opera is largely dependent on the newspapers and the public, and they did not like it."

Arthur Hammerstein was more optimistic as to the success of "Elektra" than his father had been. He confirmed the fact that the only reason why the second contract was given to de Lussan was because of his assertions that the Metropolitan was about to produce the opera. A sealed verdict was returned last night.

Festival for Widowed Mothers' Fund

A festival and dance for the benefit of the Widowed Mothers' Fund Association will be given at Delmonico's this evening and will be continued through tomorrow afternoon and evening. Thirty children are to appear in Mrs. Jarley's wax works and many other attractions are to be shown, including exhibition dancing. Mrs. Harry Kraft and Miss Pauline Untermeyer are to be in charge of the dancing. Mrs. Frederick Nathan, Mrs. Daniel Guggenheim, Mrs. Joseph Schoenberg, and Mrs. Harry Fischel are to look after the melting pot. There will be candy and flower booths and a tea shop in charge of Mrs. Henry Bodenheimer, where their waffles and griddle cakes are to be made. Mrs. William Einstein is President of the association.

Emil Kuichling.

Emil Kuichling, a well-known civil engineer, died suddenly of apoplexy Monday night at his home in Irving Place. He was born in Kehl, Germany, Jan. 20, 1848, and came to this country with his parents when a year old and resided in Rochester, N. Y., where he began his professional career. Since 1887 he had been engaged in engineering work on the State canals, and as engineer on the Rochester Water Works. At one time he was sanitary engineer for the New York State Board of Health. In 1900 Mr. Kuichling moved to New York City, where he became a consulting engineer. He was a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers, the Engineers' Club of New York, and of many scientific associations. He left a widow.

PROF. CRET KILLED IN WAR.

Designer of Pan-American Union Was a French Reservist.

Paul Philippe Cret, designer of the Pan-American Union at Washington, and Professor of Architectural Design at the University of Pennsylvania, was killed in battle recently in Northeastern France, according to news received yesterday in Philadelphia. Prof. Cret was a French reservist, and with his wife, formerly Mlle. Marguerite Lahalle, was visiting friends in France last Summer when the war began. He went into the war as a private, while Mme. Cret became a Red Cross nurse.

Dr. Cret was born at Lyon, Oct. 23, 1876, and studied at the Lycée of Bourg at the Ecole des Beaux Arts at Lyon. In 1896 he won the Paris prize, and studied for the next seven years at the Ecole des Beaux Arts at the capital, receiving his diploma in 1903. During his career he won the Rougevin prize and the Grand Medal of Emulation in 1901 and second prize at the Concours Chenavard and the gold medal at the Salon des Champs Elyées in 1903. In that year he was brought to the University of Pennsylvania as professor of design. He designed the memorial arch at Valley Forge, the Pan-American Union, which has been said to combine beauty and utility better than any other public building in the United States, and public buildings in Philadelphia, Boston, Washington, Chicago, and Albany.

Dr. Cret belonged to the Municipal Art Jury in Philadelphia, and was in charge from 1904 to 1907 of architectural teaching at the Academy of Fine Arts. He was a member of the Société des Architectes Diplomés, the Society of Beaux-Arts Architects, and the T-Square Club of Philadelphia.

EX-MAYOR WHITNEY DEAD.

Old Brooklynite Passes Away In His Sleep at 95.

Ex-Mayor Daniel D. Whitney, one of the oldest and best-known of Brooklynites, died yesterday at his home, 10 Poplar Street, at the age of 95. Death came to him in sleep. When his housekeeper went to call him to breakfast she found that he had passed away during the night. He had been in Brooklyn ever since the old Fulton Ferry, day in and day out, he was to be found seated at his ancient desk in his old-fashioned grocery. He had been young with Brooklyn and he and Brooklyn had grown up together.

Mr. Whitney was born in Oyster Bay, L. I., on Jan. 31, 1819. Leaving his father's farm when 18 years old, he came to Brooklyn and obtained employment with Thomas J. Gerald, a wholesale grocer at 20 Fulton Street. He worked his way up until he became the owner of the business, and there he remained until 1865.

In his younger days Mr. Whitney took an active part in Democratic politics. In the early sixties he was four times elected to the Board of Aldermen of the old City of Brooklyn. In 1874 Mr. Whitney became Register of Arrears and served in that office for two years. The Democrats nominated Mr. Whitney for Mayor of Brooklyn in 1885, and he won in a three-cornered fight, succeeding Seth Low. His opponents were Gen. Isaac S. Catlin, Republican, and Gen. John B. Woodward, independent.

When Mr. Whitney's term as Mayor ended he returned to his grocery business, and thereafter did not figure prominently in political affairs.

CECIL RALEIGH DEAD.

Author of "The Whip" and Other Drury Lane Melodramas.

LONDON, Nov. 10.—Cecil Raleigh, the dramatic author, died today.

Cecil Raleigh, whose real name was Rowlands, was born on Jan. 27, 1856, the son of Dr. J. F. Rowlands, and his first connection with the stage was as an actor with small touring companies in England. In 1880 he appeared in London. The following year he became business manager of the Royalty Theatre in that city, but gave up that position to become dramatic critic of Vanity Fair and other papers. His first play was "The Great Pink Pearl," written with R. C. Carton and produced in 1885.

Mr. Raleigh wrote many plays and contributed many of the big melodramas to the stage of the Drury Lane Theatre, including "The Sins of Society," "The Great Ruby," and "The Whip." Many of his plays were afterward produced in America.

Mr. Raleigh also wrote the books of several musical comedies

COTTON RELIEF CHARTERED

Corporation Will Take Over and Dispose of Long Contracts.

The Cotton Trading Corporation, an organization formed in the Cotton Exchange to assist in the liquidation of outstanding contracts, has been incorporated and will be ready for business when the Exchange reopens. The officers are S. T. Hubbard, President; Henry Schaefer, Vice President, and E. P. McEnany, Treasurer. The Directors will include E. M. Weld, Carl C. Cairns, and the three officers.

The corporation has engaged to take over all contracts for "long" cotton in the December option at 9 cents a pound which cannot be carried by brokers who bought future contracts before the Exchange closed and dispose of as much of it as possible between this figure and 7½ cents. If the quotation in the open market declines to 7½ cents, the corporation will transfer the burden of the unsold cotton to a banking syndicate composed of fifteen banks and trust companies. The syndicate stands ready to supply all funds needed to carry through this arrangement.

LONDON PLANS FOR STOCKS.

Committee Makes No Decision as to Reopening of Exchange.

LONDON, Wednesday, Nov. 11.—A special committee of the Stock Exchange held a meeting yesterday, but no decision was reached concerning the reopening of the Exchange. The committee decided to open the settling room for the payment of accounts only from Nov. 12 to Nov. 18.

New emergency rules were framed to facilitate the continued holding of stocks by the payment of higher contango rates, which are tobe fixed by the committee for a period of twelve months after the conclusion of peace at the making-up prices as of July 27.

CITY BREVITIES.

A petition signed by hundreds of citizens, church organizations, rod and gun clubs, and kindred societies for a market at Forty-second Street and North River was received yesterday by Borough President Marks.

Mrs. Fanny Eckhardt, 42 years old, of 17 West 109th Street, fell from the fifth floor fire escape yesterday and was instantly killed.

Two middle-aged men and a boy knocked David Goldberg, 70 years old, unconscious in his shoe store at 350 Jamaica Avenue, Richmond Hill, yesterday and ransacked the store. They found nothing and left, forgetting to search the old man, who had $250 in his pockets.

About 600 coffinmakers, who struck two months ago, returned to work yesterday at higher wages.

Vincent O'Rourke, a motion picture actor of Long Island City, who was injured by a Packard demonstrating automobile, got $2,500 damages yesterday under an agreement.

Detective Charles Crosson and John Leidig of the anti-drug squad were transferred to uniform yesterday by Commissioner Woods for the good of the force.

Mrs. Louisa Fox, 55 years old, of East Orange, N. J., got a verdict of $2,000 in the Queens County Supreme Court yesterday for injuries received when she was thrown from a car of the Brooklyn Heights Railway and split her umbrella handle.

OPEN MARKET FOR MERCHANTS.

POLICE FIGHT DIPHTHERIA.

Jersey City Takes Heroic Measures to Prevent an Epidemic.

Dr. Frank Edsall, Superintendent of Health in Jersey City, has enlisted the aid of the police in his efforts to stamp out diphtheria in that city. There are at present nine known diphtheria cases in Jersey City, and all have been put under rigid quarantine.

Health officers are keeping a strict watch for further signs of an outbreak, and every effort is being made to avoid a recurrence of the epidemic which swept the city six months ago.

Whole families are being immunized against the disease. In every police station last night supplies of antitoxin were held in readiness for instant use, and physicians throughout the city were instructed to notify the police of every case or suspected case discovered.

Boxes containing sufficient antitoxin for a regiment were shipped to the stations after the Health Office closed at 5 P. M., and Police Sergeants were instructed to distribute antitoxin to every caller presenting a doctor's order.

Not only are patients themselves treated, but all the members of their families as well. In the nine cases already reported the houses have been fumigated, families immunized, and a police guard established at the doors to keep all visitors away. The quarantine is the strictest ever enforced in Jersey City.

While the health authorities in Jersey City were adopting such unusual methods yesterday to prevent the spread of diphtheria across the river, figures were given out by the Health Department here showing an increase in the disease in this city. There were ninety-seven cases of diphtheria in Greater New York yesterday, compared with fifty-five on the same day last year.

In Manhattan there were 31, against 26 a year ago; in Brooklyn, 31, against 19; in Queens, 5, against 3, and in the Bronx, 9, against 5. In Richmond there were two cases, the same number as on Nov. 10 last year. These figures, according to Dr. S. S. Goldwater, the Health Commissioner, do not indicate that the epidemic has reached this city.

"While there is an increase," said Dr. Goldwater last night, "there is no cause for alarm. These figures fluctuate from time to time from various causes, but there is no epidemic. On the contrary, New York's hospital population at present is unusually small."

SOCIAL WORK FOR POLICE.

Commissioner Will Have Them Look Up the Unemployed.

Police Commissioner Arthur Woods, in an address to the Harlem Board of Commerce, at Lenox Avenue and 125th Street, told last night how he intended to make a social worker of the policeman this Winter in dealing with the unemployed.

"Because of the war," he said, "the number of unemployed will probably be greater than ever and the situation is likely to become acute this Winter. One way by which I hope to better conditions is by having policemen inquire into the case of every unemployed man that comes to their attention, find out what the man can do, make notes of the facts regarding the case, and bring the man into touch with some charitable organization that will endeavor to find employment for him."

Commissioner Woods said that as soon as it was possible to obtain an appropriation for the purpose, he hoped to install green signal lamps all through the city, to be lighted by a citizen who wanted a policeman or by a Lieutenant at a station who wanted to get in touch with a policeman. Every few minutes the policeman patrolling a beat would come within sight of the lamp and the policeman patrolling a beat would be a telephone connecting with the station. Commissioner Woods said he thought this system would materially better the service.

NEW GRADES FOR CONVICTS.

Classification Hereafter Will Be Gauged by Prisoner's Conduct.

Today a new system of classification of convicts in the various penal institutions of the State goes into effect. The old system of grading the prisoners in three classes is retained, but instead of making the classification depend on a man's criminal record, with first offenders in the first class, second offenders in the second, and confirmed criminals in the third, the subdivision into which a man is now put depends on his behavior after he comes to the prison.

When a convict first comes to a prison he is left ungraded for a month or more. If he does not show himself contumacious in that time he is put in the first grade and allowed a newspaper every day, a letter every week, and a visit from friends once a month. Insubordination will cause him to be dropped to the second class, in which only two newspapers a week and two letters a month are permitted. When a man has been demoted to Class 2 it will require six months of good conduct for him to regain his former standing.

Booklets of the new rules were distributed to the convicts in all the prisons last week, and the work of grading those who were already incarcerated was carried out. Superintendent of Prisons John B. Riley is greatly interested in the new scheme.

COLLEGE GIRL HAZED.

Initiation Into Marietta Sorority Puts Her on Sick List.

Special to The New York Times.

MARIETTA, Ohio, Nov. 10.—A rigid investigation of a sorority of Marietta College is likely as a result of indignities which are alleged to have been heaped upon Miss Ethel Sweeney, daughter of an oil operator here, during her initiation into the organization a few nights ago. Miss Sweeney says she was told to go to a temperance meeting, march up in front of the speaker, and shout "Booze" in his face. When she refused to do this, she received severe treatment at the hands of the young women.

During the next session Miss Sweeney says she was taken into the attic of a Marietta home, and she was stripped of part of her clothing and severely beaten. As a result her back was rendered black and blue and in places the flesh was cut. To finish the work iodine was applied to her face in sufficient quantities to remove the skin, and then a second and third coloring followed.

Miss Sweeney is now under a physician's care.

LAMAR GETS ONE BAIL BOND.

Puts Up $10,000, but Is Still In Tombs, Lacking $20,000.

David Lamar yesterday got the $10,000 bail demanded for one of the three indictments which he is facing. He applied it to the indictment charging him with conspiring with Edward Lauterbach to impersonate Congressmen.

He is still in the Tombs, lacking $20,000 for the other two indictments. It is believed that he has given bail for the conspiracy indictment because he still hopes the fact that he has taken to the Supreme Court the question of his removal from the District of Columbia on the other indictments may prevent the District Court here from proceeding against him.

SENT A WARNING TO MRS. SULLIVAN

Cropsey Trying to Find Out Who in Sing Sing Notified Bank Wrecker's Wife of Inquiry.

SHE DISAPPEARED AT ONCE

But District Attorney Has a Record of Her Telephone Talks—Sullivan's Son Before Grand Jury.

The investigation being made by the Kings County Grand Jury into the favors enjoyed by David A. Sullivan, the Union Bank wrecker, since he has been an inmate of Sing Sing, centred yesterday in efforts made by District Attorney Cropsey to learn the whereabouts of Mrs. Sullivan, the convict's wife.

Mr. Cropsey learned that on Oct. 24, the day that Assistant District Attorney Louis Goldstein visited Sing Sing to interrogate Sullivan and failed in his mission because of the attitude of certain prison officials there, some one telephoned from Ossining to Mrs. Sullivan in Brooklyn and to Miss Burkhardt, Sullivan's former secretary, at her home in Yonkers. Now the District Attorney is trying to find out who the person was who warned the two women that he had begun his investigation, and thereby enabled them to elude his process servers.

Records of these telephone messages are now in the possession of the Kings County prosecutor. He attaches considerable significance to them, because they show that both women received the telephone communications about 7 o'clock on the evening of Oct. 24, an hour after Mr. Goldstein arrived at the prison. The telephone messages were sent from the telephone exchange in Main Street, near the Albany Post Road, which is about seven minutes' walk from the prison.

On Oct. 25 Mr. Cropsey began his search for Miss Burkhardt, fruitless until she surrendered herself. The District Attorney then learned that she and Mrs. Sullivan had been living together in a hotel in Hoboken for several days before Miss Burkhardt's appearance before the Grand Jury. The search for Mrs. Sullivan by the District Attorney's men continued yesterday without success.

It was learned yesterday that Mr. Cropsey had subpoenaed one of the keepers in Sing Sing to ascertain if possible who sent the telephone messages to Mrs. Sullivan and Miss Burkhardt. The District Attorney has traced also some of the telephone calls made by the two women while they were in the Hoboken hotel. He found that they communicated with Frederick Burkhardt, brother of Miss Burkhardt, both at his home in Yonkers and at the bank in Manhattan where he is employed; William F. Schneider, New York County Clerk, and Francis B. Mullen, attorney for Sullivan.

David A. Sullivan, Jr., whom the District Attorney's process servers were unable to find at his office on Monday, appeared voluntarily before the Grand Jury yesterday. A young woman stenographer in the office, who would not tell the District Attorney's men where Mr. Sullivan was, appeared also, having been subpoenaed under the name of Mary Doe.

Miss Burkhardt was examined before the Grand Jury for fifteen minutes yesterday. The District Attorney is understood to be accumulating information as to the missing assets of the wrecked Union Bank, and as this evidence is presented to the Grand Jury the testimony of Miss Burkhardt is needed to explain transactions which are obscure. Miss Burkhardt's bank account was examined by the District Attorney yesterday. While her account showed no large sums deposited to her credit, her income has been regular. The bank account of Mrs. Sullivan will be examined also.

The District Attorney's men struck the trail of ex-Warden Thomas J. McCormick yesterday, who is wanted as a Grand Jury witness. Mr. Cropsey learned that the missing witness was in Newark last Saturday, but whether his family was with him the District Attorney was not able to ascertain.

Special to The New York Times.

OSSINING, N. Y., Nov. 10.—There was no change today in the condition of David A. Sullivan, the bank wrecker, now in Sing Sing Prison, whose special privileges caused the dismissal of Warden McCormick and who collapsed yesterday when he heard that he was to be removed to the Clinton Prison at Dannemora, along with sixty hardened offenders. Sullivan is still in the hospital ward of the prison, and is suffering from nervous shock, and it is unlikely that he can be moved in the next day or so.

MOVES IN GROUT CASE.

Counsel Asks to Have Indictment Against ex-Controller Dropped.

Through his counsel, Stephen C. Baldwin, ex-Controller Edward M. Grout moved yesterday before Supreme Court Justice Benedict in Brooklyn to have an indictment quashed which charged Mr. Grout with making a false report to the State Banking Department while he was President of the Union Bank.

Mr. Baldwin demanded also that Mr. Grout should be tried immediately on another indictment charging him with perjury in the same connection, or that the indictment should be dismissed for lack of prosecution. Justice Benedict reserved decision. Mr. Grout was President of the Union Bank when it failed for the second time. He was indicted last December.

TWO HIT FIRST HUNTING DAY

Jersey Boy Kills Brother — Youth Shot for a Rabbit.

Two casualties were reported on the first day of the New Jersey rabbit, squirrel, and quail season, which opened yesterday and will continue until Dec. 16.

Clayton Woods, 23 years old, son of Shepard Woods of Morristown, was instantly killed when he stepped into range of a shotgun which his 17-year-old brother Percy had aimed at a rabbit. Coroner Lawrence Welsh exonerated Percy Woods of all blame.

Garret Maye, 17 years old, of Linden, was seriously wounded. He was hunting with three friends, when a rabbit ran across a field in front of the party. As it neared Maye a hunter concealed in the woods fired at it, hitting Maye in the right thigh. The police are looking for the man who fired the shot.

EDUCATION NOTES.

The boys in Grade 6A of P. S. 135, Brooklyn, have organized the Charles E. O'Neill Club, named for the Principal of the school.

City Supt. Maxwell announces that an examination of men and women applicants for license as assistant teacher of freehand drawing in high schools will be conducted at the Board of Education Hall on Feb. 8 and 9.

A temporary license as model teacher in a training school for teachers has been granted to Alma W. Campbell of P. S. 90, Brooklyn.

The Board of Superintendents has nominated Eugenia N. Schoenfeld and Elizabeth Weitman as teachers of German in the elementary schools.

President Churchill has appointed Dr. William B. Noyes as a physician to examine mentally defective children for a period not to exceed three months, during the absence of Dr. Isabelle T. Smart on account of illness.

Florence Andersen has been nominated as a teacher in P. S. 104.

J. Clarence Smith has been nominated as teacher in charge of Manual Training High School Annex, Prospect Avenue, near Reeve Place, Brooklyn.

TWO PROJECTED BUILDINGS.

One Intended for Buyers' Offices, with a Hotel Adjoining.

The Pennsylvania Railroad Company now has under consideration a plan to erect for the National Retail Dry Goods Association two buildings, one to hold the New York buying offices of the members and the organization rooms, and the other with a hotel for the patronage of the dry goods men. The latter is to be located opposite the terminal on Seventh Avenue, between Thirty-second and Thirty-third Streets, with the buyers' building adjoining on the east. The officials of the railroad have taken up the matter for the purpose of studying it, but it is certain to be some time before a decision is reached.

If both the hotel and the buyers' building are erected as now proposed, the two structures will be designed to provide for direct communication between them. From the viewpoint of the department store owners, the plan has been highly commended in several important quarters. It will be placed for approval before the convention of the National Retail Dry Goods Association to be held next February.

MAKE BIG RADIUM FIND.

Streak of Pitchblende Discovered in Colorado Mine.

Special to The New York Times.

IDAHO SPRINGS, Col., Nov. 10.—A streak of radium ore valued at many millions of dollars has been uncovered in the Jo Reynolds mine near here. This is the district in which are the mines of A. I. du Pont.

The payrock is pitchblende, the highest grade ore from which radium is extracted, and differs altogether from the carnotite deposits of Western Colorado and Utah. Pitchblende is found in considerable quantities only in Austria, in Gilpin County, and near Idaho Springs.

The Jo Reynolds vein is about 18 inches wide, and samples brought here assay very high in radium values. This mine was opened many years ago by "Diamond Jo" Reynolds, a famous Mississippi steamboat Captain, who made it one of the most profitable gold-producing properties in Colorado. It has always been owned by the Reynolds family and now is worked by a nephew, Roscoe B. Morton.

NAVY YARD BID LOWEST.

Estimate for Destroyer $200,000 Under Private Companies.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—When bids were opened at the Navy Department today for the construction of six torpedo boat destroyers it was discovered that the Government Navy Yard at Mare Island, California, had submitted an estimate of the cost of building these vessels at Mare Island that was in the neighborhood of $200,000 less for each destroyer than the bids submitted by private shipbuilding firms that took part in the competition. The Mare Island Navy Yard was not a competitor, but Secretary Daniels intimated this evening that part of the work of construction might be given to the yard on its unofficial estimate of construction cost.

The yard's proposal set forth that it would be able to build a single destroyer at a cost ranging from $626,670 to $674,917, according to the type of machinery and boilers installed. For building two destroyers, the yard estimated that the cost would be from $12,500 to $17,000 less than for one.

Heretofore it has cost more to build warships at Government navy yards than at private plants, and the estimate of the Mare Island Yard was a surprise.

Military characteristics not embodied in destroyers of the previous class have been planned for the new vessels, and by increasing their displacement twenty tons they will be enabled to carry four additional torpedo tubes and two anti-balloon guns. The new destroyers will have a displacement of 1,110 tons and speed of twenty nine and one-half knots.

REALTY MEN ASSAIL BUDGET

United Owners' Associations Also Elect Officers.

Some hundred and fifty delegates of the United Real Estate Owners' Associations of the City of New York met last night at the Hotel Astor, elected officers after a hot fight over most of the selections, and then took up the present city budget appropriations, declaring that practically every estimate could and should be reduced.

Dr. Henry W. Berger said that the Board of Education had estimated for teachers and supplies for 50,000 children who did not attend school, basing its figures on the population instead of an exact count of actual pupils. Alderman Hyman Pouker said he would lay the subject before the Board of Aldermen and expected a few reductions.

Stewart Browne, owner of 170 Broadway, was elected President; Charles W. Eldt, First Vice President; Henry F. O. Wolf, Second Vice President; Robert E. Dowling, Third Vice President; Winfred Watson, Corresponding Secretary; A. J. Muhlker, Financial Secretary, and John Becker, Treasurer.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—Pressure is high in an irregular belt extending across the middle of the country from the Atlantic to the Pacific. A depression is central north of Lake Superior, and a second depression is advancing over the Far Northwest.

No precipitation of consequence has occurred in any part of the country, and the temperature changes have been small and unimportant. Except for local rains or snows along the Great Lakes and in Northern New England, fair weather is indicated east of the Rocky Mountains.

It will be warmer in Atlantic Coast districts and colder in the lake region and Ohio Valley.

Winds along the North Atlantic Coast will be light and variable, becoming moderate south Wednesday and Thursday; Middle Atlantic Coast, light to moderate south; South Atlantic Coast, light and variable.

FORECASTS TODAY AND THURSDAY.

Eastern New York and New England—Fair in south, rain or snow in north portion Wednesday; Thursday fair, warmer.

New Jersey and Eastern Pennsylvania—Fair and warmer Wednesday; Thursday fair.

Western New York—Rain or snow and colder Wednesday; Thursday fair.

	1913.	1914.		1913.	1914.
8 A. M.	38	37	4 P. M.	44	44
6 A. M.	37	39	6 P. M.	37	41
9 A. M.	35	38	9 P. M.	34	41
12 M.	42	41	11 P. M.	32	41

This thermometer is 414 feet above the street level. The average temperature yesterday was 36; for the corresponding date last year it was 38; average on the corresponding date for the last thirty-three years, 40.

The temperature at 8 A. M. yesterday was 29; at 8 P. M. it was 41. Maximum temperature, 45 degrees at 2 P. M.; minimum, 28 degrees at 7 A. M. Humidity, 60 per cent. at 8 A. M.; 42 per cent. at 8 P. M.

The barometer at 8 A. M. yesterday registered 30.18 inches; at 8 P. M. it stood at 30.06 inches.

Trade Movements and the Money Market—Exchange Rates Recede.

Cumulative evidence of the improvement which is under way in the banking situation was presented side by side yesterday with additional information bearing on the extent to which industrial and commercial transactions have been affected by the handicaps imposed by the war accentuating other factors. The monthly statement of unfilled orders of the United States Steel Corporation showed a decrease of 326,000 tons, bringing the orders on the corporation's books to the lowest figure recorded since June, 1911. There was also made public the fortnightly statement of the American Railway Association, showing an increase of 18,000 in the number of idle freight cars.

This is the season at which there is usually large demand for freight equipment, owing to the crop movement, and a sharp contrast with this usual condition is presented by the fact that the railroads now report a total of 170,000 idle cars. There has, of course, been a large grain export movement, but the cotton movement has been greatly interfered with, and such figures as the Steel Corporation's unfilled order statement, the weekly bank clearings, and other gauges of the volume of business, suggest a falling off in the amount of general business offering to the railways. This is accepted as an inevitable result of the dislocation caused by the European war, but in such a situation much comfort is to be found in the fact that the money situation, which bears such an important relation to trade, is rapidly righting itself. Indeed, for some time interest rates have been close to rates which would be considered normal in ordinary times of active demand for money, and the tendency is still downward. People are saving, and that entails momentary trade disadvantage while promising well for the future.

Events which bear on the freedom of trade movements are important and a good deal of interest was aroused, therefore, in business circles by the news of the defeat of the German cruiser which had been so active in interfering with British commerce in the Indian Ocean. That has had direct reflection in certain business lines here. Foreign exchange rates were easier yesterday. Sterling exchange was lower, and marks sold below any figure previously quoted. It would appear that a considerable volume of goods is finding its way into Germany, through which the credits are created against which drafts are now being drawn in sufficient volume to keep the German exchange rate far below normal.

There was a good deal of discussion in the financial district yesterday of reported loans by London to New York borrowers, but the fact is that a good many borrowers here have had no difficulty in renewing loans in London since the outbreak of the war. The fact that money is plentiful in the London market is sufficiently attested by the low rates for discount and for day-to-day loans. The fact has been made doubly clear through the disinclination of some London bankers to accept advance payment of debts owed them by some of our bankers.

COMMODITY PRICES RISE.

Dun's Nov. 1 Index Number Says Advances More Than Offset Declines.

Although many articles of consumption continued to show a downward tendency last month, these declines were more than offset by advances elsewhere, and Dun's Index Number of commodity prices rose to $124.340 on Nov. 1, against $123.331 on Oct. 1, and $125.503 on Nov. 1, 1913. On the corresponding date of 1912 the total stood at $123.525.

In comparison with a month ago, increases appear only in two groups, namely, breadstuffs and dairy and garden products; but, as previously mentioned, these more than counterbalanced the declines in the greater majority of commodities.

The insistent foreign demand again brought a further sharp rise in the leading cereals, notably in wheat, which was almost 10 cents a bushel dearer than on Oct. 1. Higher prices for the dairy and garden section were due almost entirely to the advance in eggs, butter, and milk.

FUTURE STEEL ORDERS LOW.

Corporation Reports Only 3,461,097 Tons on Oct. 31.

The United States Steel Corporation reported yesterday that unfilled orders on Oct. 31 aggregated 3,461,097 tons, a decrease for the month of 326,570 tons. This was the smallest total of forward business announced since June 30, 1911, and compared with 4,213,331 tons at the end of last August, 4,158,589 tons on July 31, and 4,513,767 tons on Oct. 31 last year.

The shrinkage was not as large as occurred in September, with its falling off of 425,664 tons, but comparison of the advance tonnage of two months would not be made fairly without taking into acount the greater decline of mill operations in October than in September.

It was figured in the trade after the report was issued that incoming business had been on a basis of not more than 15,000 tons a day, against receipts in periods of active buying of about 45,000 tons a day.

RESERVE BANK ASKS HELP.

Needs Expert Men to Receive and Put Away $100,000,000 Gold.

Gov. Strong of the Reserve Bank wrote to Albert H. Wiggin, Chairman of the Clearing House Committee, yesterday, asking that the facilities of the Clearing House be extended to the Reserve Bank, and this doubtless will be done.

Arrangements were made yesterday with the principal downtown banks to furnish expert men to assist in receiving, counting and putting away the money to be paid in by the 490 member banks on Monday. The payments will amount to at least $100,000,000, and may run as high as $125,000,000. All the indications yesterday were that the member banks generally would make the payments out of their own vaults and not by drawing on their correspondent banks in this city.

Heavy Surplus of Freight Cars.

The American Railway Association reported yesterday that the number of idle freight cars the country over was greater on Nov. 1 than at that date in any previous year since records were first kept. The total surplus was 172,325, an increase of nearly 18,000 cars in the fortnight that closed with the month. Compared with Nov. 1, 1913, the surplus cars showed a gain of 134,040.

RAILROAD EARNINGS.

The railroads reporting so far for the fourth week of October show these aggregated changes in gross earnings, those reporting gains and those reporting losses being given separately:

DESCRIBES RESERVE PAPER.

Board Drafts Final Form and Will Make It Public Today.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—The Federal Reserve Board today approved in its final form the definition of commercial paper which is to govern the rediscounting operations of the Federal Reserve banks. All of the members of the board had a hand in framing the provisions of the definition, but Paul M. Warburg reduced it to writing. The definition, which contains about 3,000 words, went to the printer this evening and will be made public tomorrow.

The board had a great deal of difficulty in formulating a description of acceptable commercial paper that would fit the needs of widely varying industries represented in this country's business.

Gov. Hamlin has just completed an exhaustive work to serve as a digest of the Federal Reserve act. Every word in the new law is indexed to show its connotation. The digest is to be published soon in book form for the guidance of reserve bank officials.

CHINO COPPER PROFITS CUT.

Nearly 6,000,000 Pounds Reduction from June Quarter's Output.

The Chino Copper Company had net profits of $566,495 in the quarter ended Sept. 30, a total of $428,395 less than in the same period last year. A surplus of $133,095 was left after the payment of dividends, against $351,015 last year.

The company produced 11,491,120 pounds of copper, compared with 17,432,871 pounds in the June quarter, at a net cost of 7.71 cents a pound. The total amount of the metal on hand or in transit on Sept. 30 was 23,273,710 pounds.

Kean Succeeds Kean as Bank Head.

Special to The New York Times.

ELIZABETH, N. J., Nov. 10.—The Directors of the National State Bank elected Vice President Julian H. Kean President today to succeed his brother, the late United States Senator John Kean. Hamilton F. Kean was made a Director to succeed John W. Whelan, who becomes Vice President.

$1,000,000 Trust Co. Restrained.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Nov. 10.—The Commonwealth Trust Company, a local concern, capitalized at $1,000,000, today was restrained by Judge Heiskell in Chancery Court from doing business pending a hearing Friday on a petition for a receiver. The petition was filed by B. H. Gotthelf, a minority stockholder.

To holders of 4% Collateral Trust Bonds of Chicago Rock Island & Pacific Railroad Company.

The Committee hereby gives notice that all bonds not heretofore deposited, desiring to participate in the benefits of the plan and agreement dated October 1, 1914, must be deposited with CENTRAL TRUST COMPANY OF NEW YORK, the Depositary under the plan, on or before NOVEMBER 21, 1914. Certificates of deposit, which have been listed on the New York Stock Exchange, will be issued for all deposited bonds.

There have already been deposited or agreed to be deposited with the Committee up to the close of business October 31, 1914, $33,565,000 of bonds, which with the bonds deposited with the Dutch committee in Amsterdam, Holland, (about $7,000,000) together aggregate about $40,565,000 of bonds, or considerably more than a majority of the outstanding bonds.

If the plan is to be carried through it will require the deposit of many additional bonds, and the Committee therefore urges that undeposited bonds be deposited without delay.

EACH BANK TO ACT ALONE.

Savings Institutions to Decide as to Withdrawal Notice.

Representatives of the savings banks in Manhattan and the Bronx met at the Union Dime Savings Bank yesterday and passed resolutions approving the letter of Bank Superintendent Richards recommending that the banks use their own judgment as to the continuance of the requiremet of sixty days' notice of withdrawals.

The meeting decided that each bank should do as it saw fit in regard to the matter and it is expected that some of them will rescind the requirement while others will disregard it in practice as they have been doing recently.

To the Stockholders of the Third Avenue Railway Co.

About seven years ago the crash in local traction stocks occurred, carrying with it the old Metropolitan Street Railway and its leased company, the Third Avenue, as the direct consequence of their looting by eminent financiers.

While the press of New York had done nothing to direct public attention to this looting while in progress, and perhaps could do nothing owing to the secret methods possible in those days, as soon as the receiverships focussed public attention on the sordid history there were many editorials on the necessity of preventing such occurrences in the future.

Since then the activities of the Public Service Commission have been considered an effective bar to the repetition of such scandals and the press and the public have been lulled into what now seems to have been a false security; for it is charged by these representatives of the public interests that the same evil that wrecked the former companies is again rearing its head, and the Commission, while framing a scathing indictment as to one, at least, of such transactions, seems to have been powerless to prevent its consummation, to wit: The acquisition of the Twenty-eighth and Twenty-ninth Street Crosstown road, by the Third Avenue, at an inflated price. Pamphlet No. 1 of Volume 5 of Decisions of the Public Service Commission of this district discusses this transaction, and I invite your scrutiny of the proceedings beginning at page 22.

The present plight of the Third Avenue stockholders is indeed harrowing. The stock is widely distributed chiefly in small holdings, evidently belonging to people of moderate resources.

In the reorganization of the Company, after the receivership, they had to pay the onerous, perhaps unparalleled, assessment of $45.00 on each $100.00 of stock held, to retain their equities in the new Company. After being deprived of any income during the long years of the receivership, and waiting patiently three years longer from the formation of the new company they are now informed with cynical frankness by President Whitridge that they needn't look for any dividends for years to come as Whitridge expects to spend the dividend money for "other purposes." This in face of the fact that the Company has accumulated on its $16,000,000 of stock since January 1, 1912, probably about $2,000,000, or, say, ten or twelve per cent. of surplus—notwithstanding what appears to have been an extravagant administration of its affairs.

It now develops that these cash resources have been depleted by payments for unprofitable properties newly acquired, for having been refused permission to capitalize such purchase by the Public Service Commission they have used current earnings from Surplus Account to put the deals through.

Also in the case of the purchase of the Belt Line property instead of improving their opportunity to buy it when offered at public sale—they allowed another interest to get it at a bargain, subsequently taking it off his hands at a big profit to him or the persons whom he represented—again using dividend money to effect the deal. You will quickly perceive that the doubts about the management of this company concern not alone the stockholders. It is as vital to the community that the local transportation companies be prosperous and remunerative to the shareholders who furnish the capital that credit may be high so that needed facilities for public use can be properly and easily financed.

Efforts by an individual stockholder to obtain redress are often met by sneers

FRISCO RECEIVERS DROP $14,000,000 SUIT

Restitution Action Against Yoakum and Other Directors Withdrawn.

IN WAY OF LARGER ACTION

Contest Will Now Be Started on $26,000,000 Bond Issue — No Wilful Fraud, Receivers Say.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Nov. 10.—Suits to recover $14,000,000 from Directors and former Directors of the St. Louis & San Francisco Railroad were dismissed in the Federal Court here this afternoon.

This step is part of the plan of the receivers to disclaim liability of the Frisco Railroad on a twenty-six-million-dollar bond issue of the New Orleans, Texas & Mexico Railroad. Loomis Johnson, attorney for the receivers, announced that the dismissal would not preclude the filing of a similar suit later.

The receivers felt that to contest effectively the liability of the $26,000,000 bond issue they should dismiss the restitution suit, as, if the bond issue were illegal, there was nothing to restore to the Frisco on the part of the Directors. The attorneys for the receivers issued the following statement:

"Inasmuch as the dismissal of this action will deprive the defendants of the opportunity to meet the charges of fraud made in the petition, we deem it but just to them to say that we have made an exhaustive examination of the matters intrusted to us.

"We found that in the so-called Brownsville and Iberia deals (for the latter of which settlement has been made) there was, in our opinion, an excessive exercise of authority by the Directors, for the results of which, in the case of the Brownsville, the Directors probably could be held accountable, and that certain of them also might be held accountable for profits made out of the deal, if the courts should decide that the St. Louis and San Francisco Railroad Company is liable at all on account of the New Orleans, Texas & Mexico division bonds.

"We have failed, however, to find, and judging from the information that we have, we do not believe that any of the Directors of the St. Louis & San Francisco Railroad Company have been guilty of any actual, willful, or intentional fraud in the administration of the affairs of the company."

On Jan. 22, 1914, the receivers filed suit in the Federal District Court for more than $14,000,000 against ten men, who were Directors of the Frisco from Dec. 1, 1909, to June 1, 1910, when the Brownsville Road was purchased. The ten men sued were B. F. Yoakum, former President of the Frisco Board of Directors; James Campbell of St. Louis, Vice President of the Frisco, who has since died, and seven other former Directors; W. K. Bixby of St. Louis, A. S. Greig of St. Louis, B. L. Winchell of Chicago, E. V. R. Thayer of Boston, and C. W. Hilliard, Frank Trumbull and Hans Winterfeldt of New York.

JERSEY BANK BRANCHES OUT

Fidelity Trust Co. to Open Offices Wherever There Is Demand.

Special to The New York Times.

EAST ORANGE, N. J., Nov. 10.—The establishment of a branch in Central Avenue by the Essex County Trust Company of this city, which is controlled by the Fidelity Trust Company of Newark, brought out information today that the Newark institution plans to organize a chain of branches in the suburbs.

Heretofore the Fidelity has limited its branches to the institutions in which it controls majority stock ownership. It is now the plan to put in a branch wherever banking facilities are needed.

War Brings Piano Trade Here.

President H. B. Tremaine of the Aeolian Company yesterday announced that as a result of the war in Europe all of the pianos manufactured by the company for its South American trade will be made in this country instead of in Germany until the end of the war. If the instruments made here prove satisfactory a considerable portion of the trade probably will remain in this country.

VALLEY BANK CLOSES.

Largest in Arizona, with $2,000,000 Deposits, Fails to Open Doors.

PHOENIX, Ariz., Nov. 10.—The Valley Bank, the largest financial institution in Arizona, failed to open its doors today. The State Bank Examiner is in charge. The bank had deposits aggregating $2,000,000 but, according to statements today, had less than $30,000 on hand at the close of business yesterday.

Representatives of the other banks of the city went into conference later with Gov. Hunt and J. C. Callaghan, State Auditor, and it was announced that the Valley Bank would reopen its doors for business within four days.

The bank was surrounded by depositors all day, but the announcement issued after the conference of bankers and State officers somewhat restored their confidence.

The decision not to open the bank for business today, was the outcome of an all-night conference between officers of the bank and other bankers of the city. It was stated that the bank's distress was due to inability to realize on collateral. Its assets, however, were said to be unimpaired and the institution entirely solvent.

E. J. Bennitt, is President of the bank, and Lloyd Christy, exMayor of Phoenix, Vice President. The capitalization is $150,000.

SURGICAL INSTRUMENTS.

War Stimulates Manufacture of Them for Here and Abroad.

The European war is having a stimulating effect on the American surgical instrument industry, as large orders for these articles are being placed both for home consumption and foreign account. One of the concerns at work on a large order for serum needles is Beckton, Dickinson & Co., Rutherford, N. J. This firm's order calls for 125,000 needles a week for an extended period.

Needles of this kind for domestic use were formerly supplied chiefly from Germany. Agents representing the Russian and British Governments who are now here are understood to have placed many orders among manufacturers for a great variety of instruments to be used in the field hospitals of their respective armies. Up to the outbreak of the war the cheaper grades of surgical instruments came from Germany. It was said yesterday that these goods, while decidedly inferior to those of American make, sold at a price rendering competition impossible.

Among the purchases made for export are large quantities of all kinds of surgical instruments for the account of the Rockefeller Foundation. A domestic manufacturer said yesterday that one of the difficulties encountered in filling foreign orders was the inadequate stock in any given line.

CLAFLIN PLAN FAVORED.

Retail Store Creditors Are Turning Claims In Freely.

The office of the General Creditors' Committee in the Claflin reorganization was swamped yesterday with affirmative replies to the letters sent out late last week to the 10,000 creditors of the twenty-three subsidiary concerns involved, asking their approval to the compromise settlements effected recently and approved by the Noteholders and General Creditors' Committees.

The outlook for further deposits of merchandise and cash deposit claims against the H. B. Claflin Company is bright, and it was said yesterday that the end of the week would doubtless see claims for more than $5,500,000 of the $6,000,000 indebtedness of this kind in the hands of the committee. It was learned yesterday that the number of noteholders who have not yet deposited their claims had been reduced to seven, of whom five are out of town. The amount of the notes held by these creditors is approximately $1,000,000, which means that note claims to the amount of about $30,600,000 have been turned in.

WAR HIT LINSEED HARD.

Last Two Months of Fiscal Year Worst of the Twelve.

The American Linseed Company reports gross earnings of $1,924,948 in the year ended on Sept. 30, a decline from 1913 of $731,025. Expenses receded 303,497, and net revenue of $408,493 showed a recession of $137,529.

The annual report yesterday said that while business throughout most of the year was poor, a demoralized condition developed with the outbreak of the war and the last two months of the fiscal period, which normally are the best, were the poorest.

To Group Manufacturers.

Commencing on Jan. 1, the United Retail Merchants of America, an organization of the smaller department stores, will open an exhibition and salesroom for the benefit of out-of-town manufacturers who are desirous of maintaining a New York office at a very low cost. The offices will be situated in a loft centrally located, and the manufacturer will be afforded the advantage of several models and a general manager to help sell the merchandise on display. There will be thirty manufacturers taken in on this plan, and to each will be let out a space 12 by 14 feet.

October Hard Coal Record.

The Coal Trade Journal will say today that, with anthracite shipments in October the largest on record for any month, complaints of dullness in that branch of the coal business cannot be taken too seriously. "While it is true that the complaints have not been particularly loud," it goes on, "there has been a good deal of comment to the effect that business is not as brisk as it should be at this time of the year, and that a lot of salesmanship is required to get orders. Some of the bituminous operating companies report that their sales to middle houses have increased slightly during the last week."

French Brush Work Done Here.

Stencil work on nets, silks, and chiffon is now being done in this market according to the French idea. In the past most of the goods put through this process were imported, as the results obtained through the use of paper or cardboard stencils were not up to the standard set by the French. The air brush, employed to blow the liquid color onto the material, forced the spray under the stencil, making the outline of the design imperfect. Metal stencils brought over from Paris are used by the manufacturer here, who follows the French method, and the weight of the sheet prevents the liquid from being blown under it. The colors are fast, and the designs may be placed on goods up to 100 inches wide.

Investigating New Accounts.

Credit men in various lines of business, especially those affected by the war, are exercising more than their usual amount of care in investigating new accounts. There has been a large increase in the number of concerns that are endeavoring to obtain credit from other than their customary sources, for the reason that the houses from which they usually buy have cut down their accommodation or have sold the accounts up to the limit. Careful handling of new customers is being well repaid in immunity from failures. The manager of an association credit bureau is giving his personal attention to this detail of the organization's work, and in one case he was able to save a member $2,000 by warning him that an account seeking credit had bought to the limit in other quarters.

Silk Business Is Improving.

Despite the fact that the duplicate business now being placed on Fall silks is sub-normal, there are undeniable signs that business in this field is beginning to improve all along the line. Satins and taffetas—both plain and faille—seem to be leading the demand, the last-named silk being especially popular with the cutting-up trade. The color trend continues toward black, brown, green, and the popular blue shades. While some members of the trade have been accused of bearing the market further than was warranted by facts, better things are in sight as to prices. Some of the present figures, however, are claimed to be much lower than the raw silk prices indicate they should be. Messalines and other staple silks are said to be the worst sufferers in this respect. Collections, according to reports from the larger houses, are getting better.

War Causing Style Uncertainty.

The style uncertainty arising from the disruption of the dressmaking industry in Paris by the war is held more responsible than anything else for the limited amount of advance business that has been placed on Spring silks. While the unsettled price situation has had something to do with it, also, it is pointed out in the trade that, if the buyers knew what silks would be good, they would be forced by public demand to buy those goods regardless of the prices asked. With little, if any, authentic news coming from the French centre, the buyers are naturally at a loss to make up their minds as to just what they should cover on. There has been a definite inquiry for taffetas, but as for the other silks, in lieu of real knowledge of the subject, it is argued that those which are now in style will doubtless stay in.

A Drop in Exports.

General exports, exclusive of specie, from this port for the week ended Nov. 7, as reported yesterday at the Custom House, show a heavy falling off compared with the previous week. Last week's exports aggregated $17,980,211, against $23,321,652 in the week ended Oct. 31 and $21,897,327 the week before that. The slump last week was explained at the Custom House as due primarily to the fact that fewer ships left port than in the preceding week, and not to the lessening of buying for the allied nations or neutral countries. The unfavorable trade balance against this country exportwise in July, for example, is rapidly disappearing. Exports in the corresponding week one year ago amounted to $15,585,150. Exports from this port to date for the year are $748,906,042, compared with $735,562,927 in the same period last year. With last year's exports only $8,000,000, in round figures, ahead of the present year, customs officials expect this year's shipments to surpass those of 1913 by the middle of December, if not before.

Printcloths Sales Ease Off.

Printcloth sales were again hampered in this market yesterday by the firmness of prices and the unwillingness of many of the mills to book advance business to any extent. There was quite a little bit of "nibbling," however, and the chances are said to be bright for active trading, where business can be placed, before the week is out. There were a few sales of spot 72-76s at 5 cents yesterday, but these goods are now about all cleaned up and the market firm at 5¼ cents for any delivery. The call for 60-48s was fair, and there was business done for this and next year's delivery at 3¼ cents. The remaining run of 64-56s at 3¾ cents for any delivery is practically completed, and the mills want 3 11-16 cents for them. A fair contract business was done on sheetings, which sold on the basis of 4½ cents for 48-square four-yard goods. The printcloth quotations were:

BUSINESS NOTES.

The local office of the Boston Store of Chicago, which is now at 114 Fifth Avenue, will be removed about Dec. 12 to 44 East Twenty-third Street.

It was decided at a meeting of Paterson and New York silk manufacturers in the former city last night that it would be better not to have a silk pageant in this city early in 1915, as had been planned. The financial stringency is given as the reason for abandoning the plan, which will be revived later.

JASON TO BRING EXHIBITS.

Christmas Ship's Return Cargo Will Be for Panama Fair.

It was announced last night that Secretary Daniels, at the request of Secretary Bryan, had detailed the auxiliary Jason to bring over exhibits from European countries for the Panama-Pacific Exposition after she has discharged her Christmas gifts.

The detail of the Jason was made at the request of Thomas M. Moore, Commissioner General of the exposition.

The return trip of the Jason will be arranged by Capt. Asher C. Baker, U. S. N., who is now in Europe preparing exhibits, which will be taken directly to the exposition, via the Panama Canal, in January.

LATEST CUSTOMS RULINGS.

Decisions on Textiles, Lumber, and Pepper Among Them.

In overruling a protest by J. W. Coulston & Co., the Board of Classification of the General Appraisers held yesterday that the question of the dutiability of commissions is not a subject to be dealt with by the classification division of the board. Judge Waite holds that the importer's redress lies in an appeal to the reappraisement section of the customs tribunal. The protest is accordingly dismissed.

M. Gardner & Co. were sustained in protests relating to the rate of duty accruing on linen table covers. Duty was taken at 60 per cent. ad valorem under the present law, as drawnwork or figured articles. The claim was for a tax of 35 per cent. ad valorem as manufactures of flax.

O. G. Hempstead & Son., Philadelphia, were upheld in a controversy regarding the number of the yarn used in making colored cotton cloth. It was returned by the Appraiser as exceeding No. 80, but not exceeding No. 40, duty being taken at 20 per cent. ad valorem under the Act of 1913. Investigation disclosed that the customs officials erred in their return, as the yarn does not exceed No. 39. Judge Cooper holds that the proper duty is 15 per cent.

The Government lost again yesterday in its second effort to have the board hold beaded lumber known as novelty sidings dutiable at 15 per cent. ad valorem under the provision in the Act of 1913 for "manufactures of wood."

Alexander Murphy & Co. lost in claims for lower duty on dried red peppers, which were assessed at 25 per cent. ad valorem under the old tariff as vegetables in their natural state. The protestant asserted that the classification should be as caps.cum or red pepper, at 2½ cents a pound.

SALES AT AUCTION.

Much Interest in an Offering of Worsteds and Woolens.

A large attendance of local and out-of-town buyers, both jobbers and retailers, and good prices on the merchandise sold were the features of the sale of worsted and woolen goods for account of the American Woolen Company and other manufacturers, held by Burling & Dole yesterday in their rooms at 7 Greene Street. Most of the merchandise offered during the day was for women's wear, about 60 per cent. of the whole being made up of these goods. The entire sale involves 1,770 lots of goods and about 1,000 duplicates, of which about 850 lots and a great many duplicates were sold yesterday. The balance will be offered for sale today. Prices obtained for goods that were more or less in demand brought from 50 to 90 cents on the dollar, while less favored merchandise in some instances brought as low as 40 cents, or less. Among the out-of-town buyers present were Goldenberg Brothers of Baltimore, M. Rubin and B. Weinbaum of Boston, and M. Goldenberg of Washington.

D. Hartmann held an auction sale yesterday at 8 Greene Street, at which 1,250 dozen night dresses, 150 dozen kimonos, 125 dozen petticoats, and 150 dozen corsets were disposed of. The attendance at the sale was large, and the prices realized were good generally. The value of the merchandise offered was about $15,000.

THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Decidedly more tone was imparted to the realty market yesterday than has been noticeable for several days. On the west side a woman investor purchased a large apartment house, giving in part payment out-of-town property. Another woman investor added to her realty holdings in New York by acquiring three apartment structures in the Dyckman region, and the Bronx furnished several good deals, including a new apartment and two vacant parcels for early improvement.

The west side deal involved the purchase by a woman investor, whose name was not divulged, of the nine-story apartment known as the Paulette, at 150 to 156 West Eightieth Street, covering a plot 82 by 102.2, a few feet east of Amsterdam Avenue. It was sold by the Tourneur Realty Company, (Julius Tishman & Son,) who erected it about two years ago and have been holding it at $400,000. It carries a mortgage of $225,000, held by the Brooklyn Savings Bank. The building contains thirty-four apartments, and they are well rented.

In part payment the buyer gave an estate of thirteen acres at Ridgefield, Conn., with a large residence and garage, which figured in the deal at a valuation of $100,000. The brokers in the transaction were Pease & Elliman.

Buys Dyckman Apartments.

Mrs. Angie M. Booth has purchased from Brown Brothers the three five-story apartment houses on the northwest corner of Nagle Avenue and Arden Street, in the Dyckman section, covering a plot 130 by 129.9. They have been held at $2 0,000. Mrs. Booth is the owner of the fourteen-story commercial building on the northwest corner of Fifth Avenue and Forty-third Street, which she bought about three years ago.

Apartment Trade in East Bronx.

An important Bronx deal in the Tremont Avenue section east of Third Avenue, involving the trade of a new apartment house and a vacant plot; has just been closed by Herman Berkowitz. He has sold for Jacob Bloom the five-story apartment 1,980 Prospect Avenue, covering plot 53 by 150, between Tremont Avenue and 178th Street, recently erected by the seller. The buyer is Hyman Markavy, who gave in part payment the vacant plot 72 by 95 on the north side of 178th Street, between Prospect and Clinton Avenues, and this will be improved in the near future by Mr. Bloom with a five-story apartment. Both of these parcels were sold to their recent owners by the same broker a year ago.

Mr. Berkowitz has also sold for David Kraus a vacant plot 50 by 100 on the west side of Prospect Avenue, between 178th and 179th Streets, to Reuben & Marcus, who will improve it with a five-story apartment. Morris Berkowitz acted as attorney in both transactions.

Columbus Avenue Flat Transferred

The five-story flat at 762 Columbus Avenue, adjoining the northwest corner of Ninety-seventh Street, has been sold by Letitia K. Ketterer to Bertha Sobrank. The plot is 25.3 by 100. The new owner took title yesterday, subject to a mortgage of $25,000, and the seller took an additional mortgage of $7,000.

Avenue B Tenement Sold.

Edward N. Crosby & Co. have sold for John J. McKenna the five-story brick tenement, with stores, at 287 Avenue B, between Sixteenth and Seventeenth Streets, to a client for investment. The plot is 20 by 68.

Bronx Borough.

Louis Wimmer has purchased for occupancy through the Schoen Westchester Realty Company the private dwelling at 859 Macy Place, on plot 25 by 100, near Prospect Avenue.

The two-family house at 624 Coster Street, on plot 20 by 100, has been sold by the Nehring Company to a client. It has been held at $12,000.

Brooklyn.

The three-story building at 234 Carroll Street has been sold by R. D. Streeter for Mrs. Maxia E. Brooks to John F. McKenna.

Sales at Great Neck.

The McKnight Realty Company has sold a residence with one acre of ground at the estates of Great Neck, overlooking Little Neck Bay, to A. E. Belyea, and a house with one-half an acre of land at the same place to John Messenger. At Kensington, Great Neck, a house on Beverly Road, plot 124 by 200, has been sold to J. J. McGrath.

Sale at East Orange.

Edward P. Hamilton & Co. have sold at 50 East Park Street, East Orange, the Newman residence with about one-half an acre of land, to a client for occupancy.

Buys Residence Plot at Westport.

A plot 70 by 150 at Westport, Conn., on Church Street, has been purchased by Mark Lee Luther from Channing P. Harris. The plot overlooks the Sound and Mr. Luther is erecting a residence for occupancy. John Crawford was the broker in the sale.

Business Leases.

Pease & Elliman have leased the store and basement in the new loft building at 31 and 33 East Thirty-second Street, which the same brokers recently sold to the Meany Realty Corporation. The tenant is the Adams Manufacturing Company, now at the northeast corner of Grand and Mercer Streets, a wholesale dry goods firm, dealing in silks and linings.

Huberth & Huberth have leased the building at 689 Amsterdam Avenue for a term of fifteen years to Carl A. Bass & Co., electrical contractors, for Walter Scott Cameron, as guardian. It is between Ninety-third and Ninety-fourth Streets. The same brokers have also leased the house at 54 West 135th Street to James S. T. Thompson for use as a jewelry store.

Dwellings Leased.

Clendinning J. Ryan, son of Thomas F. Ryan, has leased from G. Owen Wingate the private dwelling at 155 East Seventy-first Street. The J. P. Whitton-Stuart Company were the brokers and they have also leased for Mrs. Walter Ward Adams, the five-story residence at 106 East Seventieth Street to Arthur H. Fowler.

J. B. English has leased for Mrs. J. C. Long the dwelling at 269 West Fifty-second Street.

Pease & Elliman have leased for Robert L. Hoguet, the four-story house at 47 East Ninety-second Street to Myron Lockman.

A. A. Hageman has leased to B. McQue the dwelling at 214 West Seventy-eighth Street.

Leases Large Apartment Suite.

James A. Blair, of the banking firm of James A. Blair & Co., has leased, fully furnished, from Mrs. S. Brinckerhoff Thorne, an apartment of seventeen rooms and five baths in the Verona, southeast corner of Madison Avenue and Sixty-fourth Street, the site recently stated to be the social centre of New York. It has been held at $12,000. Douglas L. Elliman & Co., were the brokers.

Building Increase in October.

The report of building operations for October shows that plans were filed in Manhattan for nineteen new buildings costing $3,551,075, as against thirty-six costing $2,442,100 in the same month last year. While there was a falling off of seventeen in the number of buildings there was an increase of $1,108,975, in estimated cost. The increase is in factories and hospitals only.

Realty Notes.

The West Side Taxpayers' Association will hold its regular meeting tomorrow evening at Heinebrend Hall, 267 West Thirty-fourth Street.

The Payson McL. Merrill Company represented J. Cleveland Cady, as brokers, in the sale of his property at Alpine, N. J., reported yesterday.

Peter Rinelli and Stephen Guardino were the buyers of the old bakery at 92 to 96 Elizabeth Street, sold last week by Thomas S. Ollive.

At the Brooklyn Exchange Salesroom, 189 Montague Street, today the Jere Johnson, Jr., Company will sell eight plots at Belle Harbor on the Rockaway Coast.

THE STATE IS BEHIND THIS OPPORTUNITY

Houses, Bungalows and Building Lots along the Palisades, about opposite Grant's Tomb, are being sold by order of the Supreme Court at prices that average about 50% of the sale price of former owners.

10% to 75% of the purchase price may remain on bond and mortgage.

You should by all means be among the many who are now taking advantage of the extraordinary promise of profit that these fine properties hold forth.

The State Banking Department is holding the sale to liquidate the affairs of the Industrial Savings and Loan Company.

Inspect these properties personally or apply for detailed information to

CARRANZA YIELDS ON VERA CRUZ

Tells Brazilian Minister to Inform Washington He Will Give Guarantees.

ASKS EARLY EVACUATION

MAKES EASIER CONDITIONS

Willing to Surrender Power, He Says Now, to Man Who Can Govern the North.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 10.—The Brazilian Minister went by appointment to the Foreign Office this morning and had a two hours' telegraphic conversation with Foreign Minister Favela, who is at Cordoba. Señor Favela asked Minister Cardoso to inform Washington that Gen. Carranza had issued an amnesty decree for Mexicans who have served the United States of America in a civil capacity at Vera Cruz, and a decree that forbids collection of double duties on Vera Cruz imports.

All guarantees requested by the American Government have been granted, and Minister Cardoso was asked to wire Washington, conveying the First Chief's hope of an early date for the evacuation of Vera Cruz. Minister Cardoso cabled Washington this evening.

Long personal telegrams have been exchanged between Gen. Carranza and Gen. Eulalio Gutierrez. In a message sent today the former reiterated his reasons for not resigning, and in turn asks Gen. Gutierrez to resign.

Gen. Carranza also invites Gen. Gutierrez to a personal conference at a point to be agreed on, and the First Chief expresses the belief that if they can talk alone together all questions between them can quickly be arranged.

CARRANZA CONCEDES MORE.

Says Convention's Choice Must Be Able to Control Villa.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—Tension in the State and War Departments over the Mexican outlook was measurably relaxed this afternoon when the local Constitutionalist junta gave out an authoritative dispatch from Cordoba, Mexico, which said that Gen. Carranza was ready to resign in favor of any man named by the convention at Aguascalientes for a definite time who would take over actively the command of Gen. Villa's Division of the North and govern the northern section of the country just like other sections. The dispatch added that Gen. Carranza's announcement had caused a feeling of optimism in Mexico. Carranza is at Cordoba.

Interest in the Mexican situation increased today as the hour of 8 P. M., set by the military gathering at Aguascalientes for Gen. Carranza's retirement, approached. The convention had served formal notice on the First Chief that he must express his willingness to resign his power to the convention's nominee by 6 o'clock this afternoon or be regarded as an enemy of the State. Unofficial advices received here have said that the First Chief's answer to this proposal was that unless the Chiefs at Aguascallentes returned to their normal duties by 6 o'clock this afternoon, he would oust them from office and replace them by their seconds in command.

The weight of American influence has been thrown in the direction of inducing Gen. Carranza to yield. While little is known here of Eulalio Gutierrez, the Provisional President elected by the convention, it is assumed by officials here that he will be sufficiently willing to take advice from Gen. Villa to make his policies conform to American plans as much as Gen. Villa's have done in the past. Apparently Gen. Carranza's final conference with his handful of supporting Generals convinced him that resistance to the candidate approved by Villa was hopeless.

The message received by the Junta tonight follows:

The First Chief conferred today with Gens. Obregon, Villareal, Hay, and Benavides. Carranza informed them that while he was not bound in any way to recognize the validity of the convention's actions, or desired to give them formal recognition, he was prompted by the feelings of patriotism to turn over the Executive power of the nation and the chief command of the Constitutionalist forces to any man named by the convention to govern for a definite pre-constitutional period who would actually assume a real control over the Division of the North, assuming command of the troops, and having the central Government in fact, and not merely in theory, govern that portion of the republic in a like manner as the others.

This message is being delivered to the convention and great optimism prevails that a peaceful solution of the present difficulties will yet be discovered.

Secretary of War Garrison today received a dispatch from Gen. Bliss at El Paso, announcing the complete investment of the Carranza forces under Gen. Benjamin Hill by the Villa troops under Gov. Maytorena. Gen. Bliss's dispatch consisted of the following inclosed message from Col. Hatfield, in command of American troops at Naco, just across the American line from the scene of the fighting:

"Maytorena's force has completely invested Hill's position at Naco, but has not commenced to take a position for attack. Hill's headquarters are established on the Cananea Railroad, five kilometers south of Naco. Some firing this afternoon at long range by Hill's men, but no reply. Maytorena evidently awaiting orders to make an attack."

MAYTORENA SHELLS NACO.

Villa Commander Renews Attack with Artillery.

NACO, Ariz., Nov. 10.—Gov. Maytorena's Villa troops opened the renewed siege on the Carranza garrison in Naco, Sonora, early tonight with well-directed artillery fire. For thirty minutes the attackers threw shells into the town, doing little damage, but indicating a remarkable reversal of form in gunnery.

Gen. Hill, commanding the garrison, sent out a skirmishing party in the afternoon, which was sent scurrying back to cover by Maytorena's Yaqui Indians.

Five hndred fresh troops are reported to have arrived at Nogales on their way here to reinforce Maytorena. Hill also is credited with the intention of bringing his force of 800 men in garrison at Agua Prieta for a rear attack on Maytorena.

Although Maytorena is proceeding leisurely with his preparations, the fact that the artillery opened tonight apparently to get the range is believed by Hill to presage a night attack. This was frequently practiced by the attacking force during the previous siege.

CARRANZA REMOVES GENERALS

Clash of Forces at Queretaro Is Predicted—Fighting Near Capital.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 10.—The capital is waiting for something to happen, but nothing so far has happened. It is thought improbable that Villa will really comply with the new conditions of the First Chief which eliminate Zapata from consideration, and thus matters will remain as they were. All seem at cross purposes.

Gens. Obregon, Hays, Aguirre, Benavides, and Villareal, who started for Aguascalientes before dawn today, say they are going to ask the convention to allow an extension of time within which the First Chief is expected to turn over the power to Guiterrez. But Gen. Carranza has declared that the convention as a political entity no longer exists, and that none of its acts is legal.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 10.—Generals commanding 50,000 men in this neighborhood were relieved of their commands today by Gen. Carranza because they refused to nullify their actions when they signed an agreement to abide by the decisions of the Aguascalientes Convention. Among these are Gen. Benavides, commanding 10,000 men; Gen. Antonio Villareal, Gen. Juvencio Robles, and many others.

It is reported here that Gen. Villa's advance guard, consisting of 15,000 men of all arms, is marching south of Encarnacion de Diaz on the way toward the capital, which, it is said, they have been ordered to take in the name of Eulalio Gutierrez. Between them and their goal Gen. Pablo Gonzales, who is loyal to Carranza, has 40,000 troops disposed about Queretaro City. It is expected that a clash of arms will occur there.

In the capital there are 27,000 men, according to official figures, under Gens. Blanco and Alvarado Gen. Blanco remains in Aguascalientes.

Fighting of a severe character continues in the suburbs of the capital. Persistent attacks are being made on Xochimilco and San Angel by the followers of Emiliano Zapata. During the fighting last Sunday it is reported there were 300 casualties.

Shells rushed to the front from the citadel here are said to have been loaded with sawdust instead of powder. It is reported that the Carranza forces have been victorious everywhere in the suburban fighting.

REVOLT IN CANANEA.

Garrison Under Villa Leaders Declares for Carranza.

Special to The New York Times.

EL PASO, Nov. 10.—Villa's troops in Cananea, Sonora, the big copper camp seventy miles below the border from Naco, have revolted and have declared for Carranza. They had been in command of the town since Hill was driven to the border by Maytorena and his Yaqui Indians at the start of the Carranza-Villa war in that State. No one was killed, although a little street fighting occurred when the Carranza leaders led the discontented Villa forces out of the town. It is expected that Maytorena will send a force of his men, with machine guns, to attack them.

Consul General Rafael Musquez, representing Carranza on the border, received a message from Col. Sebastian Carranza, Jr., a nephew of Gen. Carranza and cousin of the Consul General, saying that he was leaving Piedras Negras with 1,750 troops to advance on Saltillo, where reports had been received that Luis Gutierrez, a brother of the new Villista Provisional President, was at the head of a force. Saltillo has always been a Carranza stronghold.

Reports received by Villistas say that Gen. Lucio Blanco has joined Villa.

POLICE CONVICTIONS UPHELD

Court of Appeals Affirms Conspiracy Charge Against Inspectors.

ALBANY, Nov. 10.—The convictions of ex-Inspectors Dennis Sweeney, Joan J. Murtha, and James F. Thompson of the New York City police force, who were found guilty of conspiracy and served a year on Blackwell's Island, were upheld today by the Court of Appeals.

The conviction of ex-Inspector John Hussey, who stood trial with the other policemen, and who also served a year on Blackwell's Island, was set aside by the Appellate Division several months ago. Hussey is now suing for reinstatement to the force.

RACING FIRE HORSE CRASHES INTO POST

Engine Driver Swerved Team to Avoid a Careless Truck Driver.

OLD FIREFLY WAS KILLED

Driver Alfred Waganowitz of Fire Engine 23 had urged his horses to full speed as he went up Ninth Avenue at 6 o'clock last evening to a fire. At Fifty-eighth Street he saw Policeman Haslash waving him to come on. Crowds lined the sidewalks watching the racing engines, and Waganowitz's two horses were straining every muscle. The engine swayed and skidded over the pavement as an automobile skids on wet asphalt.

Waganowitz was almost on the Fifty-eighth Street crossing when he saw a two-horse truck lumbering out of the street into his path. Policeman Haslash had turned aside to wave back a woman and some children and the truckman, evidently thinking he had time to make the crossing in safety, had started ahead.

The engine driver realized that his tremendous speed and the weight of the heavy engine would crush the truck and probably kill the driver. There was a chance that he could turn between the pillars of the elevated railroad and continue on the tracks, his only hope of avoiding a collision.

Waganowitz took the chance, but the speed of the horses was too great for the sudden turn. Firefly, the big off horse, staggered as he tried to swing around, missed his footing, and crashed head-on into a pillar. He collapsed, stunned, and with both forelegs broken, while over him hurtled Waganowitz, thrown from his seat, despite the strap supposed to hold him in. From the rear platform flew the Captain and the engineer, Robert W. Grant and Joseph Conley, to land, bruised and half stunned on the pavement. But the truck was uninjured.

The firemen were on their feet almost instantly and all three turned at once to Firefly. The quickest examination showed that the animal was injured beyond recovery, and Haslash, at the request of the firemen, shot him. Then Waganowitz, almost in tears, turned on the truck driver.

"I was willing to take a chance to save you," he declared. "But you can't kill poor old Firefly and get away with it. I want him arrested," he demanded, turning to Haslash, and the policeman took the man, who said he was Sylvester Demoss of 514 West Twenty-ninth Street, on a charge of [illegible] the fire lines and causing an accident. At Night Court Magistrate McQuade fined him $10.

SLATE WILL GO THROUGH.

Only Slight Opposition at Federation of Women's Clubs Session.

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., Nov. 10.—Seven hundred delegates to the New York State Federation of Women's Clubs in session here offered little opposition to the official slate of officers reported by Mrs. J. M. Edsall, Chairman of the Nominating Committee, at the close of this afternoon's session. There will be contests for only two offices.

The official slate, which will probably be elected in entirety, is as follows:

President, Mrs. A. H. Hildreth, Syracuse; First Vice President, Miss Florence Guernsey, New York; Second Vice President, Mrs. Hamilton Ormsbee, Brooklyn; Third Vice President, Mrs. John W. Ford, Waterford; Recording Secretary, Mrs. Charles Stecker, Mount Vernon; Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. Merwin Lay, Syracuse; General Federation Secretary, Mrs. J. T. D. Blackburn, Albany; Treasurer, Mrs. George N. Hall, Binghamton; Directors for the first four districts, respectively, Mrs. J. F. Yawger, Mrs. Frank P. Whiting, Mrs. Howard Gillespie, and Mrs. F. H. Bullard.

Mrs. Henry Altman of Brooklyn will run for Second Vice President in opposition to Mrs. Ormsbee, and Mrs. Robert D. Ford of Canton will oppose Mrs. Lay for Recording Secretary.

Arrested as Poorbox Robbers.

Two Italians who, it is alleged, robbed the poorboxes in two Catholic churches were arrested yesterday in All Saints' Church, Madison Avenue and 129th Street, by detectives, who first saw them on a car while looking for pickpockets. They followed the Italians to St. Paul's Church, at Park Avenue and 117th Street. The Italians hurried away, and a few minutes later the detectives found that the poorbox had been robbed of $1 in pennies. The men were cornered in All Saints' Church after the poorbox there had been smashed. They said they were Pietro Casila, Mills Hotel, and Albert Folornini, 159 West Fourth Street.

Gifts to Women's Prison Association

The Women's Prison Association reported at its meeting yesterday two bequests, one from Emma R. Frost of $1,000, and one from Addison Brown of $500. Also it was announced that the State Farm for Women M.sdemeanants at Volotle was opened in October with six women inmates.

FIRST NEW SHIP SINCE WAR.

Orduna, Leased by Cunard Line, Arrives from Liverpool.

The first new steamship to arrive in New York since the war began was the Pacific Steam Navigation Company's liner Orduna, chartered by the Cunard Line for three months to replace the Campania, which has been sold for junk. She is commanded by Capt. Thomas M. Taylor, who has not been in New York since 1878, when he was an apprentice in the famous tea clipper Lothair, which made the run from Yokohama around Good Hope in 82 days, and then sailed from Sandy Hook to Dover in 11 days, which he said was a record.

The 831 passengers who arrived on the Orduna yesterday from Liverpool joined in saying that she was a steady vessel. She had rough weather from Queenstown to Sandy Hook and made the 2,786 miles in 7 days 23 hours and 17 minutes.

The Orduna was built to open the new service from the west coast of South America to New York via the Panama Canal, which was postponed on account of the war.

The Orduna has accommodation for 300 first, 350 second, and 450 third class passengers. She has spacious decks and cabins fitted with bedsteads, glass inclosed promenade decks, gymnasium, veranda café, and large square windows. Her gross tonnage is 15,500. She has three screws and an average speed of 17 knots. She sails for Liverpool on Saturday. The officers and engineers are all Pacific Company men.

Daughter to Christie Macdonald.

Christie Macdonald, the light-opera star, who in private life is Mrs. Henry Lloyd Gillespie, became the mother of a daughter yesterday afternoon at her home, 800 Riverside Drive. Mrs. Gillespie was last seen at the Liberty Theatre, when she appeared as Princess Bozena in "The Spring Maid." Mr. Gillespie is a manufacturer, and they were married in 1912.

CARRANZA OPENS WAR ON VILLA

Preliminary Battle Reported and Strong Forces Move Toward Each Other.

GENERALS STRIVE FOR PEACE

Ask Carranza to Resign and Urge Gutierrez to Send Villa Abroad.

UNCERTAIN AS TO VERA CRUZ

Carranza Guarantees Received in Washington, but New Developments Are Awaited.

EL PASO, Nov. 11.—War has been declared between the Carranza and Villa elements of the Constitutionalist Army, according to advices received at Juarez tonight from officials of the convention at Aguascalientes.

A preliminary battle has already occurred at Leon, between Aguascalientes and Queretaro, it was reported. Gen. Pablo Gonzales, the Carranza commander, has moved his forces from Queretaro north to Silao to meet the Villa advance. Gen. Manuel Chao, a Villa chieftain, departed today from Aguascalientes with a strong column.

A message from official sources in Mexico City, given out today by Rafael Muzquiz, the Carranza Consul General to the United States, follows:

"The First Chief is at Cordoba. A majority of the principal chiefs have declared in favor of Carranza. Villa has called on the people to take arms. All the South and East is loyal to the First Chief."

An earlier telegram from Aguascalientes said that at a meeting of the convention last night Gen. Carranza was branded a rebel by Gen. Panfilo Natera, a Vice President. He asserted that the deposed First Chief should be considered a rebel because the allotted time had expired for him to recognize the sovereignty of the assembly of chieftains.

His remark was greeted with applause, said the report. Natera had been regarded as one of Carranza's strongest supporters since his appointment as chief of a newly created central zone had precipitated the Carranza-Villa estrangement some months ago.

Sharp Fighting Near Saltillo.

Sharp fighting between a Carranza force, thought to be a part of that which left Piedras Negras for Saltillo several days ago, and a larger force from the Villa garrison at Torreon took place today at Hipolito, and the Carranzista force was driven away in disorder, according to reports received here both by the Carranza and Villa representatives. Only meagre details were received at the border of the battle, which was said to have started at daybreak this morning. Col. Esevio, commanding the Carranza force, and seventeen of his men, including two officers, were reported to have been killed.

Little, if any, support is expected by the Carranza men from the Saltillo garrison, where Luis Gutierrez, a brother of Eulalio Gutierrez, is in command. If the garrison has not already gone over to Villa by this time it is expected to do so in a few days, local Consular representatives of the Carranza Government admit.

Delayed reports from Aguascalientes report the resignation of Villa to Gutierrez, who is now vested with supreme executive power by the peace conference. As soon as Villa had presented his resignation to Gutierrez through his Acting Minister of War he was immediately appointed Commander in Chief of the entire Army of the North, comprising all of the forces not directly under command of Carranza, his brother, Jesus Carranza, or Pablo Gonzales.

Naco Again Under Fire.

NACO, Ariz., Nov. 11.—With several of his seventy-five millimeter pieces placed at a range of 3,000 yards, Gov. Maytorena reopened artillery fire on the Carranza garrison at Naco, Sonora, shortly before noon today. The garrison replied, but their shells fell short. At the same time Yaqui Indians were seen moving into positions around the town for an attack, which agents of Maytorena declared would be made tonight.

Maytorena promised Col. Hatfield, commanding the American border patrol, that he would give two hours' notice of attack, but Hatfield, not depending upon that, sent his men into position on the border line.

GENERALS STRIVE FOR PEACE.

Urge Carranza to Retire and That Villa Be Sent Abroad.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 11.—Gens. Pablo Gonzales, Lucio Blanco, Antonio Villareal, Eduardo Hay, Francisco Mariel, Andres Saucedo, Pablo de la Garza, and A. Menchaca have wired Gen. Carranza, saying they consider it "a patriotic necessity" that he resign.

At the same time the above-named Generals wired Eulalio Gutierrez, telling him they were convinced Villa had not retired from command of the northern division, and they ask Gen. Gutierrez to use his authority and that of the convention, which Villa promised to respect, by sending Villa abroad on an official commission. The Generals say if this is done they will induce Gen. Carranza also to leave the country.

Fernando Iglesias Calderon, referring to the published report of his appointment as Foreign Minister in the Cabinet of Eulalio Gutierrez, said he would refuse the offer, as he was determined not to enter any Cabinet until constitutional order was re-established.

A Cordoba telegram says that Gen.

NOTHING NOBLE IN WAR ITSELF, SAYS WILSON

But Sometimes It Develops Noble Characters—Speaks at Kearny Statue Unveiling.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—President Wilson, speaking today at the unveiling of a statue to Gen. Philip Kearny in Arlington National Cemetery, said that there was nothing noble or admirable in war itself, but that there was something very noble and admirable in some of the characters which war developed.

"If a man's character can go through the fire and come out resplendent," said the President, "then you know that it is of the true quality, of the best human stuff."

Mr. Wilson said that Gen. Kearny typified the best kind of leader produced by the United States, adding that "there has been many another man who stood alongside of him with the same qualities and the same distinction of service."

"The Government of a great people," he added, "can always count upon great services, and the beauty of our Government, the pride that we all feel in it, is that it is a Government of great people, prodigal in their gift of service, always ready to provide those things which constitute the stuff of heroism and elevate a nation in the annals of mankind."

Speaking of the habit of Gen. Kearny's soldiers of affectionately calling him "Phil," the President said he had always been sorry he did not have a "front name which admitted of shortening."

Because of the lateness of a special train bringing 300 civil war veterans from New Jersey for the unveiling ceremonies, President Wilson waited in the cold at the cemetery for more than an hour. He spent the time examining the graves of noted soldiers and sailors.

Gov. Fielder of New Jersey, Col. C. J. Hopkins, President of the Kearny Commission, and Corp. James Tanner, Recorder of Wills in the District of Columbia, who served under Gen. Kearny, were among the speakers. Gov. Fielder said:

"We pray God the United States will remain at peace as long as time lasts."

The statue was unveiled by descendants of Gen. Kearny, while a field battery from Fort Myer fired a Major General's salute of seventeen guns.

FEARS WE MAY BE INVOLVED.

Senator Burton Says Indecisive Result Might Bring Us Into War.

Special to The New York Times.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Nov. 11.—Again sounding a warning of the possibility of the United States becoming involved in war unless the present European conflict ends decisively, United States Senator Theodore E. Burton today addressed the City Club on "The Effects of the War on the Peace Movement."

German supremacy and the consequent growth of the German military machine to the disabling of the other powers in the event of a victory for the Kaiser, or a long step toward arbitration of differences if the Allies are victorious, were the Senator's predictions of the outcome.

Senator Burton approved the work of the national Administration in its peace treaties, and declared he was glad that the voice of the jingo was silent, even in the face of the great war.

He said three circumstances might serve to end the war—a decision by the belligerents that defensive action is better than offensive, sheer exhaustion or a decisive victory. An indecisive victory, he said, might involve the United States.

"Should Germany win," said Senator Burton, "and I speak on the subject with a good deal of hesitancy, because it is the duty of an American citizen to avoid any expression of partiality, I do not think it is difficult to determine what the result would be. Denmark, Holland, and Belgium would be annexed to the German Empire. An indemnity would be imposed upon Great Britain and France so severe that each country would be disabled in the future from maintaining an army or navy which could compete with those of Germany. The settlement of affairs with Russia would be a somewhat different question, but, however that might be, Germany would be the dominant power in the world."

MORE MILLS STARTING UP.

Big Revival of Steel and Wire Orders in Pittsburgh District.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 11.—Two plants of the Carnegie Steel Company at Homestead resumed operations today. These mills had been shut down for some time owing to lack of orders. With many orders booked in the last few weeks the plants now will be able to operate full turn.

At other steel mills in the Pittsburgh district activity is noted in every department. The plants at Monessen owned by the Pittsburgh Steel Company will go into operation next Monday after an idleness of some months. Four of the open-hearth furnaces at that point will be put into operation, which means that employment will be given to 3,500 men.

The plants of the Pittsburgh Products Company, also at Monessen, have been ordered to operate at full speed. The company has enough orders on its books to warrant such a move. Several other plants in the Allegheny Valley district will begin operations within the next ten days.

Wallace H. Rowe, President of the Pittsburgh Steel Company, said today that the mills of that concern were working on big barbed-wire orders, and that there was a splendid inquiry all along the line. He declared that the industrial conditions in the Pittsburgh district were very encouraging.

EXPECT MOVE BY POPE.

German Report That He Will Urge Peace Negotiations.

LONDON, Nov. 11.—Telegraphing from Copenhagen a correspondent of the Central News says:

"A dispatch received here from Cologne asserts that the Pope shortly will endeavor to initiate negotiations for peace through the medium of a pastoral letter. "The German view of this is that any such action by his Holiness would raise the question of the Pope's temporal power and force Italy into taking an attitude against the proposal."

SLAVERS' BOMBS ROCK BRONX COURT

Judge L. D. Gibbs and Marshal Hoefling the Objects of Assassins' Plot.

CONVICTED SEVEN OF GANG

First Blast as Jurist Leaves Chambers Followed by One Across Street.

REPORTS HEARD FOUR MILES

Two bombs, each more powerful than ever before had been used in Black Hand plots in the Bronx, were exploded within a few seconds just before 11 o'clock last night, one wrecking the whole lower front of the Bronx's new $1,000,000 Court House which took twelve years to construct, the other blowing in the front of City Marshal John C. Hoefling's office, across the Brook Avenue Plaza from the Court House. County Judge Louis D. Gibbs was in the Court House when the explosion occurred and Marshal Hoefling had just left his office.

Judge Gibbs had sentenced seven of a band of white slavers to long terms in State Prison and it was Marshal Hoefling who uncovered evidence against the gang when he discovered Mrs. Delia Hanson, the now celebrated "Bridgeport widow," held prisoner in a house in East 154th Street. In anonymous letters the Judge had been threatened with assassination.

Both men think, and the police agree with them, that the explosions were meant to kill or injure Judge Gibbs and Mr. Hoefling, and that the bombs were planted by members of the White Slave gang who had not been discovered and arrested. It was found that the bombs were of the kind made by anarchists.

Explosion Heard Four Miles.

The explosions were the most severe of the kind that ever occurred north of the Harlem River. The detonations were heard for four miles, and houses in a radius of a dozen blocks were shaken. In a passing Third Avenue elevated train some windows were shattered by the concussion, and panes in houses for blocks around were broken.

It was the Court House bomb which exploded first. The new building is in a triangle facing the Brook Avenue Plaza. Third Avenue is on one side of it and 161st Street on another. The entrance was a pretentious one, between two big bronze columns resting upon granite bases. Bronze doors stood ten feet in a vestibule, and over the main archway leading into this vestibule was a granite figure of Justice. The bomb apparently was placed at the base of one of these bronze columns.

The explosion blew one of the granite bases into pebbles and so wrecked the other that both bronze columns hung suspended from the main arch. The figure of Justice was cracked and its base wrecked, so that it threatened to topple over. The bronze doors were wrenched from their hinges and torn and twisted. The glass in two inner doors fifteen feet back was shattered and the marble staircase cracked. Almost every window in the Court House fell outward, sending fragments of glass flying over all three streets bounding the building.

Many in Court Knocked Down.

Judge Gibbs, who had presided at the trial of Harry Goldberg, a Fordham College medical student convicted of forgery, had just left his chambers with County Detective Harry Harris and his court attendant, Samuel Phillips. The corridors and courtroom were filled with jurors, witnesses, and idle spectators, who had waited while the jury in the Goldberg case deliberated eight hours.

There were nearly half a hundred men in the place besides the ninety-eight prisoners, twelve of them women, and their keepers, in the county jail in the basement on the 161st Street side. The concussion tossed most of them from their feet and caused a panic among the prisoners, who thought there had been an earthquake.

The Judge was flung down on the marble corridor, but was unhurt, and, jumping to his feet, with Phillips and Harris raced for the Brook Avenue entrance, shouting to others to join him. He ran into the street only a second or two after the explosion, but already hundreds of men, women, and children from neighboring apartment houses were pouring into the thoroughfares, terrified at the roar and concussion of the explosion, and there was no chance of catching the man who put the bomb in place.

Crowds Rush Into Street.

Then came the second explosion, as violent as the first. Those who had reached the street were flung down by the force of it and every one who had not run at the first crash, made a dash to get out of his home. A crowd of several thousand quickly filled the plaza and were running aimlessly about, when the reserves of the Morrisania Police Station, who had been flung from their beds in the precinct house only two blocks away, raced around into the Plaza.

They saw there a scene of ruin. The front of the Court House looked as though it had withstood the fire of German field guns. Across the plaza the long row of buildings showed dark holes where windows had been but a moment before, and the front of Hoefling's office was a wreck of broken glass and splintered wood.

From 871 to 877 Brook Avenue, a row of five-story tenements, every window was gone. Next was a row of three-story frame houses running to 887. All

VANCOUVER PREPARES FOR GERMAN ATTACK

Broughton Strait Closed to Shipping—Mines Laid Near Victoria.

OTTAWA, Ont., Nov. 11.—It was officially announced today that the western part of Broughton Strait, near Vancouver Island, had been closed to navigation and for purposes of defense. Shipping has been notified that vessels between Johnston Strait and Queen Charlotte Sound must take the Weynton passage and Black Fish Sound.

While no reason has been assigned officially for this action, it is popularly believed to be due to apprehension as to possible attack from the German fleet that defeated British warships recently off the coast of Chile.

SEATTLE, Wash., Nov. 11.—Although no German warship has yet entered the North Pacific and the British cruisers Newcastle, Swiftsure, and Rainbow and the Japanese cruiser Idzumo are patrolling the coast, the people of Victoria, Vancouver, and Prince Rupert have been extremely nervous over reports that the way was open for a German naval attack on their cities. The Strait of Juan de Fuca, near Victoria, has been mined, guns have been placed commanding the Narrows near Vancouver, and other defensive steps have been taken.

German Ships Bound North.

LIMA, Peru, Nov. 11.—A telegram from Taltal, Chile, says that a steamer arriving there reports that when off Coquimbo, Chile, she sighted four German warships steaming northward. Coquimbo is about 450 miles north of Coronel, off which the naval engagement of Nov. 1 was fought.

TRANSPORTS ALL READY FOR GERMAN INVASION

Wait at Bremen and Hamburg—Fifty Zeppelins Building for Raid With Fleet in Spring.

LONDON, Thursday, Nov. 12.—The Daily Mail prints an American's account of his visit to Bremen and Hamburg. He says:

"In Bremen the hotels are deserted, but the theatres and cafés are full. The docks at Bremerhaven are crowded with shipping, but there is no life. I was told that transports are there waiting to convey troops to England.

"At Hamburg I found the same dense lines of shipping and deserted wharves. In the harbor I saw three huge liners, transformed by a coat of gray paint and yellow funnels. Soldiers swarming over them proclaimed them to be transports, destined for the invasion of England.

"There is great activity in Hamburg. I saw eleven sheds, each said to contain a Zeppelin. There are any number of aeroplanes at the air camp. It was reported there that fifty Zeppelins are being built. A Lieutenant told me it was absurd to suppose that the Germans would waste their Zeppelins by single raids on London. The Zeppelins are being kept for the time when the fleet, accompanied by the dirigibles, would attack the British coast simultaneously. This was not the plan for the present, but for the coming Spring.

"Kiel, in contrast to Hamburg, seethed with activity, the streets swarming with sailors and marines, while in the harbor dispatch boats dashed hither and thither."

RUSHED BOAT AT MINE TO SAVE A CRUISER

Little Russian Craft When it Was Too Late to Signal Went Head on to Destruction.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 11, (Dispatch to The London Times.)—Correspondents of Finnish newspapers report the heroic sacrifice of the crew of a picket boat in order to save a Russian cruiser, which was unwittingly approaching a mine in the Gulf of Finland.

Realizing that it was too late to signal the danger, the boat deliberately rushed at the mine at full speed. A terrific explosion followed. Six of the crew of seven perished. To the survivor, who was severely wounded, was awarded the decoration of St. George.

RUSSIAN ORGAN SEES THE END IN SIGHT

Mouthpiece of the War Ministry Thinks the Conflict Won't Last a Year.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Thursday, Nov. 12.—The Russki Invalid, the organ of the Russian Ministry of War, is very optimistic concerning the progress of the campaign. It thinks the operations against Austria will be crowned with final success before the Winter sets in.

The campaign against Germany is a more serious matter, and operations probably will last all through the Winter. It is, however, considered probable that the German army will be finally defeated before next Summer.

"Therefore," declares the Russki Invalid, "if no unforeseen complications arrive, it is probable that the war will end before the anniversary of its beginning."

TIME LIMIT FOR BOERS.

Pretoria Government Allows Rebels Until Nov. 21 for Surrender.

LONDON, Thursday, Nov. 12.—It is officially announced at Pretoria that the rebels will have until Nov. 21 to surrender, according to a Reuter dispatch from that city. All thus surrendering will not be criminally prosecuted, but allowed to return to their homes on condition that they take no further part in the rebellion.

The leaders of the rebellion and those who have acted contrary to the rules of civilized warfare are excluded from the amnesty. Those refusing to surrender will be dealt with according to law.

SUBMARINE RAIDS A BRITISH PORT; SINKS GUNBOAT, BUT CREW ESCAPES; GERMAN TROOPS CAPTURE DIXMUDE

CROWDS SEE NIGER SINK

Residents of Deal Startled by Explosion as Torpedo Hits the Warship.

SHORE BOATS TO RESCUE

CAPTAIN LAST TO LEAVE HER

Stays on Deck Until Ship Is Sinking Under His Feet—All Saved, Says Admiralty.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

DEAL, England, Nov. 11, (Dispatch to The London Daily Chronicle.)—By the destruction of the British torpedo gunboat Niger, which was torpedoed and sunk by a submarine in the Downs this afternoon, the realities of war were brought home to the inhabitants of Deal and Walmer.

A loud explosion was heard from the gunboat as she lay off the Deal pier and great volumes of smoke enveloped the vessel. When the smoke cleared, the Niger was observed to be settling down forward. Men, women, and children rushed to the sea front, exclaiming that the vessel had been torpedoed or mined. They soon realized that the Niger was doomed. The Deal and Kingsdown lifeboats, as well as boats from other parts of the beach, were launched in an effort to save the sailors.

Consternation and almost panic prevailed among the hundreds who stood watching the ghastly sight from the beach. Fortunately the North Deal galley Hope, commanded by Capt. John Budd, lay at anchor near the spot waiting to land the pilot from a London steamer which was going down the channel. When the boatmen realized that the Niger had been hit by a submarine or mine, to use their own expression, they rowed like the very devil.

Gallant Rescues by Boatmen.

"We saw the sailors," said Capt. Budd, "jumping from the vessel's side in dozens. As we neared the fast disappearing vessel we came upon swarms of men struggling in the sea and heroically helping to support each other. Some were fully dressed, others only partly so. They were clinging to pieces of wreckage and deck furniture, and some were in lifeboats.

"It was a heartrending spectacle. The men were so thick in the water that they grasped at our oars as we dipped them in the sea. We rescued so many and our own boat got so choked that we could not move. With our own gunwale only just out of the water, we were in danger of sinking ourselves.

"We called to the men that we could take no more in or we should sink ourselves, but they continued to pour over the sides, and some hung to the stern of our boat. We had about fifty on board. Never had there been so many in the boat before. One burly sailor, whom we told to wait until the next boat came along, laughingly remarked while he was in the water, 'All right, Cocky, I will hold on by my eyebrows,' and he drifted to another galley. Another Deal boat then came along and relieved us of some of our men.

Captain Last to Leave Her.

"Suddenly we heard a shout, and, looking around, saw the commander of the Niger waving and beckoning to us from the stern of the sinking ship. We could not go to him because our craft was so heavily laden. Another galley then came along, and, after taking out some of our men, together with those who were hanging on to our sides, we went closer to the sinking gunboat and took off some more men, and at the Captain's special request we waited until he took a final look around to see if there were any more men left on board the vessel.

"By this time the ship was very nearly under water, and we shouted to him to hurry up as the Niger had turned over on her side and was likely to go down at any moment. That brave Captain only just managed to jump in time when the gunboat gave a lurch and sank on her side in eight fathoms of water. We were proud to rescue that Captain, for he was a true sailor."

The other boats which picked up men were the Maple Leaf, the motor boat Naru, the Annie, the May, and the Deal lifeboat.

Saw One Dead Sailor.

The rescuing party saw one dead sailor floating by.

The majority of those rescued received first aid on being landed at North Deal and then they were taken in ambulances to the Marine Hospital at Walmer.

One survivor, replying to a question as to whether the Niger was torpedoed or mined, replied:

"Torpedoed, Sir. With the exception of the watch and the gun crews

Summary of War News.

An official German bulletin reports the taking of Dixmude, Belgium, with more than 500 prisoners. It also reports the crossing of the Yser Canal and capture of the first line of the Allies' position west of Langemarck, with about 2,000 men. The Allies are also said to have been driven out of St. Eloi, south of Ypres.

The French War Office admits the loss of Dixmude to the Germans, but states that the foe's attempt to debouch from that place along the left bank of the Yser failed. The British troops are said to have stopped attacks of the enemy everywhere along the line.

The British torpedo gunboat Niger was torpedoed by a German submarine in the Harbor of Deal, England, and foundered, but all the officers and crew were saved. Two men were severely injured and two slightly hurt.

Premier Asquith, in a statement at the opening of the House of Commons, predicted that the war would not last as long as was originally expected.

The Russian General Staff contradicts German assertions of an important victory on the northern border, asserting that the Russian Army met with brilliant success there and has begun an invasion of East Prussia. To the south the Cossacks are said to be approaching Cracow, while the investment of Przemysl, from which the Russians were driven several weeks ago, is said to have been completed.

The Crown Prince is reported to have been put in supreme command of the German forces in the east. A dispatch from Amsterdam states that Austrians, with big siege guns, passed through Liége Tuesday on their way to Cracow to reinforce the Teutonic armies.

The Japanese torpedo boat 33 was sunk by a mine at the mouth of the Kiao-Chau Bay while hunting for mines. Six men were killed or wounded and three are missing.

200 OF EMDEN CREW DEAD; 30 WOUNDED

Capt. Von Muller and Officers Will be Allowed to Keep Their Swords.

LONDON, Nov. 11.—Capt. von Muller of the German cruiser Emden, which was attacked by the Australian cruiser Sydney and driven ashore at Cocos Island, where she burned, and Prince Franz Joseph of Hohenzollern, one of his officers, are prisoners of war and neither is wounded, according to an announcement by the Admiralty this afternoon. The Admiralty adds that the losses on the Emden are unofficially reported as 200 killed and thirty wounded. No further details have been received.

The Admiralty has directed that all honors of war be accorded to the survivors of the Emden, and that the Captain and his officers are not to be deprived of their swords.

The Central News has received a dispatch from Melbourne saying that the gunnery of the Emden was good in the beginning of the fight off Cocos Island but deteriorated later. The German vessel had two funnels shot away and caught on fire astern within an hour of the beginning of the engagement. She is now ashore and continues to burn.

Before the fight a landing party from the Emden had commandeered two months' supplies from the Cocos Islanders, but the people were well treated.

HONGKONG, Nov. 11.—The Australian cruiser Sydney was not damaged in her fight with the German cruiser Emden off Cocos Island, according to reports reaching Hongkong.

The Captain of the Sydney said he saw only thirty survivors of the 308 men supposed to be on board the Emden. Four officers and twenty-two men were made prisoners.

18,000,000 RESERVES FOR TEUTONIC ALLIES

Resources of Fighting Men They Can Draw Upon, According to a German Newspaper.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 11.—According to the Cologne Gazette, the combined strength of German and Austrian reserves is 18,000,000 men.

There are 2,000,000 volunteers in Germany and 240,000 in Austria, and recruits of the 1914 conscription of both countries 1,000,000 each. This makes a total of 4,250,000, but, according to the Rhenish paper, this estimate is altogether incomplete.

In Germany, as in Austria, that portion of the Landsturm which has not yet seen any service is almost as good as untouched, and, according to the best authorities, this untouched Landsturm amounts for Germany to 7,000,000 men. They are between the ages of 20 and 45. Already the vast majority of these men have been registered by the military authorities as suitable. Only a very small percentage may be regarded as hardly fit for the front, but they are capable of other military duties.

In Austria this untouched Landsturm is placed at 5,000,000, making 12,000,000 for both countries. If we deduct 2,000,000 from this total for volunteers who have already been counted we get a total of 14,250,000 as still available for active military service, and if the age limit is raised from 45 to 50 years and the limit at the other end be reduced from 20 to 18 years, we obtain an additional 3,750,000, which, added to 14,250,000, makes the grand total 18,000,000.

HEARD CANOPUS WAS SUNK.

But Chilean Admiralty Denies Rumor of British Cruiser's Fate.

VALPARAISO, Chile, Nov. 11.—A rumor has been circulated here to the effect that the British cruiser Canopus has been sunk off Coronel.

This report is officially denied by the Chilean Admiralty.

HATE CONSCRIPTION, BUT WILL WELCOME IT

English Nonconformists Will Do Their Duty Uncomplainingly, Says Sir William Nicoll.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 11.—"By the first of the year it will be determined whether we shall have conscription or not, and should it be necessary you may be sure that the Nonconformists will uncomplainingly do their duty," said Sir William Robertson Nicoll, editor of The British Weekly and a competent spokesman for the Nonconformist point of view today.

"In Lloyd George's words last night at the City Temple, 'I should like to see every town, every city, every area know what is expected of it. I should like to see every county called upon for its quota.' That foreshadows the kind of special conscription which will come first if volunteer recruiting does not produce the men necessary," Sir William continued. "I think this method of enforcing conscription is very fair, for I do not think those areas which have done their duty should be humiliated by conscription until those areas which have lagged behind in this noble race are brought up to the scratch.

Hate Defeat, More.

"We Nonconformists hate conscription, but we hate defeat more. Ours are traditions of the Pilgrim Fathers of New England and of Cromwell's Ironsides. I do not believe any form of conscription will in the end be necessary.

"I think there is some justice to the statement that the upper classes and the lower classes have been doing their duty in the present crisis and a certain element of the middle classes has not. This is partly the outgrowth of the tradition that the British Army should be officered by the upper classes and recruited in the ranks from the lower classes, which leaves the middle classes rather out of it. Then, too the middle classes, especially the Nonconformist middle classes, live in an atmosphere so foreign to war that it takes time for the military situation to be fully understood.

"The method of personal appeal by a Parliamentary recruiting committee will make the question of all the young and fit going to the front a dinner-table problem in thousands of homes, and it will have, I believe, a most stimulating effect upon the very people not as yet reached by the appeals of martial parades, signs and speeches. These are all right in their way. Even better advertising management would not hurt recruiting, but the best brass band methods will not reach the people like those personal appeals to families for their eligibles to do their duty.

Feel Their Responsibility.

"We Nonconformists feel a greater responsibility than others. We opposed armaments in the past, and now that the supreme struggle is upon our country we must come forward cheerfully to meet the situation. We have come forward creditably, and I believe that we shall come forward more creditably in the future. Many of those who have not as yet joined the colors have had urgent reasons for not doing so, but reasons which they will yield when confronted by today's crying need for men, and yet more men.

"In every stage of the war the Nonconformists look to America for approval and sympathy. We remember the Mayflower; we remember our ancestors who settled your country and fought a hard fight there for freedom, and we ask the United States to remember that we have ever been her friend, and that at the time of the American civil war we were, perhaps, the only large body of the public friendly to the Union in England."

FIND SPYING IN BASLE.

Military Shuts Rhine Valley and Frontier Is Guarded.

LONDON, Nov. 11.—The Cologne Gazette learns from Zurich, according to an Amsterdam dispatch to Reuter's Telegram Company, that communication on the frontier between Baden and Switzerland is now difficult and that the whole Rhine Valley has been closed by the military, owing to the discovery of a case of spying at Basle against Germany.

GERMANS REPORT BIG GAINS

Take 500 Prisoners and Nine Machine Guns at Dixmude.

VICTORY NEAR LANGEMARCK

Allies' Positions There Captured with 2,000 Prisoners and Six Guns, Says Berlin.

ALLIES WIN NEAR THE COAST

Reoccupy Lombaertzyde and Repulse German Attacks There—British Check Them at Ypres.

LONDON, Nov. 11.—The following German official statement, issued this afternoon, is contained in a dispatch from Berlin, transmitted by the Marconi Wireless Company:

We made good progress yesterday on the Yser branch of the Ypres and took Dixmude by storm, capturing more than 500 prisoners and nine machine guns. Further south our troops crossed the canal and west of Langemarck captured the first line of the enemy's position. About 2,000 infantry were taken prisoners and six machine guns were captured.

South of Ypres we have driven the enemy out of St. Eloi.

Despite fierce counter-attacks by the British, the dominating heights to the north of Armentières remain in our hands.

Our attack has made progress to the southwest of Lille.

The French suffered heavy losses while attempting to recapture commanding heights to the north of Vienne-le-Château in the forest of Argonne, and to the northeast and south of Verdun French attacks were everywhere repulsed.

French Admit Losing Dixmude.

PARIS, Nov. 11, 10:40 P. M.—The following French official statement was issued tonight:

The enemy has continued all day his effort of yesterday without accomplishing any new result. He has directed against Lombaertzyde a counter-attack, which has been repulsed, and has made vain attempts to debouch from Dixmude on the left bank of the Yser.

There is nothing new to report from the rest of the front.

The text of the afternoon official report follows:

On our left wing the fighting was resumed yesterday morning between Nieuport and the Lys with a very great degree of severity. Generally speaking, our front was maintained, in spite of the violence and the strength of the German attacks directed against certain of our points of support.

To the north of Nieuport we were even able to reoccupy Lombaertzyde and advance beyond this town, but toward the end of the day the Germans succeeded in taking possession of Dixmude. We still hold our positions in the approaches of this town, along the canal from Nieuport to Ypres, which has been firmly occupied. The fighting was very hot at these places.

The British troops, attacked also at several points, succeeded everywhere in stopping the enemy.

On the rest of the front the general situation shows no change, with the exception of slight progress by our forces to the north of Soissons and in the region to the west of Vailly, on the right bank of the Aisne.

Outside of these two points the state of the weather permitted only minor engagements, which resulted successfully for us. Particularly at Coincourt, 3 kilometers (about 1¾ miles) north of the forest of Parroy, we routed a detachment of the enemy.

COAST FIRING RENEWED.

Germans Shell Allies Between Nieuport and Dixmude.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ON BELGIAN FRONTIER, Tuesday, Nov. 10, (Dispatch to The London Daily Chronicle.)—A few days ago it seemed that the Germans had abandoned their attack upon the coast line and the country between Dixmude and Nieuport. There was a strange silence behind the mists, but the Allies' aeroplanes reconnoitering the German lines were able to see the movement of troops drifting southward toward the region around Ypres.

Yesterday and today there has been an awakening of the guns in places from which they seemed to be withdrawn. Dixmude, quiet in its ruins, trembled again and crumbled a little more under the vibration of the German shells fired at long range.

Here and there near Pervyse and Ramscapelle German guns not yet located fired pot shots on the chance of killing something. French and Belgian patrols, advancing cautiously, found themselves under rifle fire from the German trenches, which had previously appeared abandoned.

Something like an offensive developed again today, and at Furnes the sound of an intermittent cannonade awakened memories which seem old now, though it is only two weeks or so since this old town shook to the continual thunder of guns not very far away.

At Ypres the Germans are in heavy force, though obviously not yet ready to make the next great attack for which they are preparing.

GERMAN CRITICS ENCOURAGED.

Deduce Success from Reported "Good Advances" in the Argonne.

BERLIN, Nov. 11, (by Wireless Telegraph to Sayville, L. I.)—The latest official reports concerning the situation in the western arena of hostilities are increasingly favorable in the opinion of German critics. They draw this inference from the fact that the words "good advances" are used in referring to the conflict in the Argonne.

This is the first time such an expression has been employed in describing the fighting in this district.

DENIES RHEIMS CHARGES.

French Embassy Says Troops Did Not Use Cathedral Towers.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—Dispatches from the French Foreign Office to the embassy here today duplicated the War Office communication, announcing the capture of Dixmude by the Germans, and adding to this statement the fact that the French retired before superior numbers. The Minister of Foreign Affairs also denied reports crediting the Vicar General of Rheims with the admission that the Cathedral towers had been used as observation points by the French troops.

The telegram says:

"German agencies are spreading the rumor that the Vicar General of Rheims admits that the towers of the Cathedral were used for military purposes; as I indicated previously in recent communications, this is false."

CALLS GERMANY NETTED FISH.

"Exhausting Itself in Savage Efforts," Says a Swiss Military Critic.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov. 11.—Under the heading, "Germany's Defensive War," the Temps quotes from The Geneva Journal's Swiss military critic, Col. Feyler, who considers that the war has now definitely entered on a third phase, in which the Germans are on the defensive on both fronts.

The first was the sudden attack upon France, the second the combined Austro-German movement against Russia.

"Russian territory," says Col Feyler, "has been entirely cleared of Germans, and France is gradually expelling the invader, though the latter struggles furiously. Has the reader ever seen a salmon netted? The fish exhausts itself in savage efforts to escape the inexorable closing meshes. I consider that the salmon typifies Germany today."

FITS FRENCH BOYS TO FIGHT.

National Federation Trains 1915 and 1916 Recruits Ahead of Time.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Tuesday, Nov. 10. (Dispatch to The London Standard.)—Lord Kitchener's men could not work more ardently to prepare themselves for the front than do the boys enrolled under the flag of the National Federation for Military Preparation. This society is entirely the outcome of the war. Before the outbreak of hostilities there were some drilling clubs in existence, and likewise a few shooting clubs, dotted here and there about the country, but they have never been taken very seriously.

With the arrival of the war a group of practical patriots decided to take up the question properly, and very soon the National Federation was everywhere hard at work training the youth of the land to be soldiers. Through the efforts of the federation 3,000 lads have already gone to the front, some months before the time at which under ordinary circumstances they would have joined the colors as raw recruits, and, thanks to the federation's teachings, they have been able to take their places in the fighting line at once. Five thousand recruits due for duty in 1915 and 1916 are now under the tuition of the federation in Paris alone, and nearly 200 instructors are daily employed in teaching them the art of war.

Some of the federation's boys have already found soldiers' graves, and not a few of its recruits have had their names offered by their parents, that they may be fit as soon as possible to go off to war and avenge the deaths of brothers or other relatives. One and all ask for nothing better than to volunteer for active service as soon as the War Department will accept them.

GERMAN PRISONERS GRATEFUL

Officers and Privates Praise French for Their Kindness.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov. 11.—Apropos of Ambassador Herrick's visit to the German prisoners in camps and hospitals, The Matin gives details of the treatment of German wounded in the Poitiers military hospital. A special representative of the paper has the following voluntary statement from German officers there:

"The undersigned have much pleasure in expressing to the staff, especially the surgeons, of the Poitiers hospital their gratitude for the care received since their arrival.

"KOTTERN,
"Lieutenant Eighty-six Infantry.
"STEIN,
"DEGENER,
"PIMANN,
"Lieutenants of the Reserve."

The correspondent interrogated more than twenty wounded non-commissioned officers and privates, and a hundred prisoners who were not wounded, and all willingly signed similar statements which The Matin reproduces in full.

CIVILIANS LEAVING VERDUN.

French Mount Fortress Guns on Wheels to Aid the Field Army.

LONDON, Nov. 11.—"According to German reports, the greater part of the population has left Verdun," says a Central News dispatch from Amsterdam.

"The French, it is stated, have mounted most of the great guns of the fortress on carriages to compensate for the field army's lack of artillery."

SAYS GERMANS WASTE FOOD.

Brussels Observer Accuses Them of Throwing Commandeered Meat Away

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BRUSSELS, Nov. 8, (Dispatch to The London Standard.)—Although Maeterlinck recently said that he had unimpeachable authority for the statement that Brussels had been mined, it seems clear now that his information was quite [illegible]. The Germans may originally [illegible] the intention to mine the place, but they have been so impressed by [illegible] exasperation at their conduct at Louvain and elsewhere that they have thought it advisable to be on their best behavior in Brussels.

One charge, however, that can be brought against them is the extravagant and wasteful manner in which they commandeer provisions, especially meat. It is a common sight at the slaughter houses to see whole sides of meat thrown away because the troops could [illegible] all of them.

The presence of the American Minister and the activity which he has displayed in protecting the interests of the inhabitants as much as he could is believed to be not a little responsible for the comparative moderation displayed by the Germans.

GERMANS PUSH WORK ON ANTWERP FORTS

Mounting New and Heavier Guns on Defenses Being Repaired by Troops and Natives.

From a Staff Correspondent of THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ANTWERP, Nov. 6.—The Germans are working like beavers to repair the fortifications of Antwerp, mount new and heavier guns, and put the whole place into a state of defense. The importance attached to their almost feverish fortifying activities is indicated by the fact that Gen. von der Goltz, the Military Governor of Belgium, ran over from Brussels and made a tour of inspection of the double girdle of forts yesterday.

THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent not only had an opportunity of seeing hundreds of German prisoners as well as natives at work, but received unexpected confirmation from his Excellency, Gen. von Frankenberg, and Gen. Ludwigsdorf, personal Adjutant of the Military Governor of Antwerp, who said in the course of a cordial interview:

"We have two principal interests in our work here: That Antwerp should become a place of great military importance again, and also be prepared against attacks from the enemy, although that contingency doesn't seem very probable."

His Excellency was unwilling to hazard a guess as to how long he thought the Germans could hold Antwerp against a siege by the Allies as being too hypothetical a question, but added with a smile:

"I believe we could hold out longer against the Allies than they did against us."

Continuing, he said:

"Our interest is to revive trade and industry and the life of the city generally. When we first came here there were only soldiers and hungry dogs in the streets. Now, as you see, the dead city is coming to life in short order."

His Excellency scouted the idea that the people of Belgium had been or were on the brink of starvation as a result of the German occupation, saying:

"The very contrary is the case. Belgium is a country which cannot support itself. It produces only enough food for roughly 5,000,000 out of its 5,000,000 population, because Belgium is an industrial country and food for the remaining 2,000,000 has to be imported. Heretofore most of this food has come from Holland, whence some is still coming, but in no great quantities.

"We have taken the problem of the food supply up with the Belgian Government, as much as there is one left, namely, with the municipality, and at our suggestion an inter-communistic commission has been organized, so that everything possible can be done to help the country. This commission sits in Brussels, and when any town or village or district has no more food on hand the fact is reported and it goes from the commission what is required.

"What food supplies we found here we took charge of to prevent their being plundered, and also because we, as belligerents, had to supply our own necessities. That is the right of war. But by no means have we used up all the food supplies ourselves or set them aside for our own use. A large part has set aside for this commission, to be used for the poor, and another part will be given back in a short time for trade purposes, so that commerce can be revived again.

"There is no place in Belgium where the people have starved. Their most pressing need now would appear to be money, for many are unemployed and many others disinclined to work. At one place where we were told the people were starving we found the stores crammed full of food, but the inhabitants had no money and the shopkeepers wouldn't give credit. Everything is being done by us to revive business so that the people can again earn money.

"If America had not been so tenderhearted as to send foodstuffs, and if the food supply had run out, we would certainly have considered it our duty to bring food from Germany, for we are for the time being the government here, and it is our duty to see that the people do not starve."

LUXEMBURG'S DUCHESS THANKFUL FOR PEACE

Says Indemnity Is Promised—Populace Restive Under German Rule.

LONDON, Thursday, Nov. 12.—In the speech from the throne at the opening session of the Luxemburg Parliament Grand Duchess Marie is quoted in a Reuter dispatch, reaching here by way of Amsterdam, as follows:

"We are all deeply affected by the appalling spectacle of the murderous war in which our neighbors are lacerating one another. Our neutrality has been violated. We hurriedly lodged a protest informing the guarantee powers. The Chamber has approved the proceedings. Our rights, though violated, remain.

"Indemnity for the wrong done us is promised. We have received already indemnity for the damage caused by the passage of troops.

"I thank the people for their correct attitude, whereby disagreeable events have been prevented. God protect our dear country!"

LUXEMBURG, (via The Hague and London,) Nov. 11.—This small country, which has almost been forgotten since the beginning of the war, is beginning to show signs of unrest under the prolonged German rule.

Entirely cut off from the rest of the world and obliged to read newspapers which, under a strict German censorship, are giving exclusively pro-German information, the people show the same tendencies to fly into panics and to believe hysterical news as are familiar in Brussels, Liége, Namur, and other Belgian cities where the people are systematically kept in the dark. They are now willing to believe even the most incredible rumors.

The Luxemburgers have suffered greatly since the Germans three weeks ago stopped the iron industry, the main support of the country, by forbidding the use of dynamite. After prolonged negotiations the operation of the mines has again been allowed, but the miners are obliged to use other and less violent explosives.

Continual friction is apparent between the inhabitants and the Germans in the frontier villages. The people, who ordinarily are jovial, under pressure of the uninvited Germans, now are using French as the only means at their disposal of showing resentment, the natives say, at the invasion of their country.

ITALY'S KING 45 YEARS OLD.

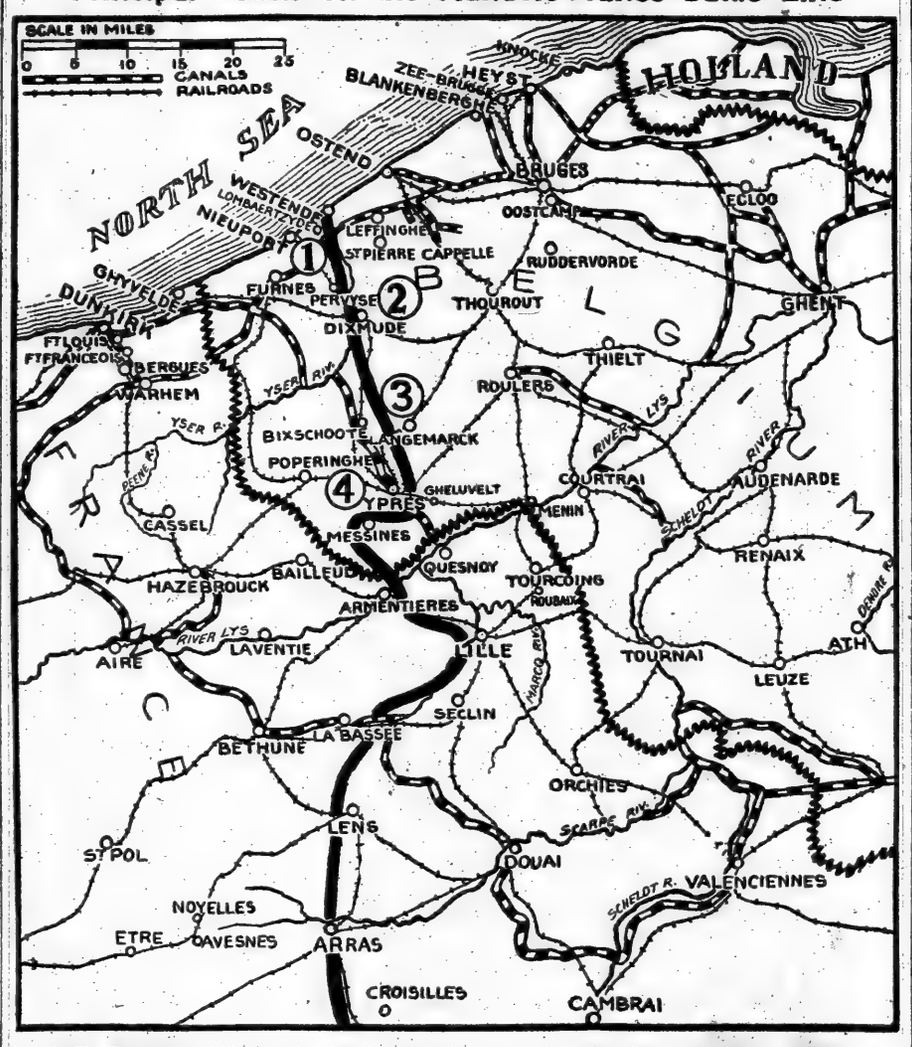
Review of Troops Occasion of a Great Patriotic Outburst.

ROME, Nov. 11.—This being the forty-fifth anniversary of the birth of King Victor Emmanuel, his Majesty, as usual, observed the day by a review of the troops.

There was a great demonstration by the public which, since the opening of hostilities, has not failed to take advantage of every opportunity to greet the soldiers with a patriotic outburst.

The regular anniversary dinner was given by the Foreign Minister, Baron Sidney Sonnino, to the Diplomatic Corps. The Minister was confronted with some difficulties, but was able to avoid unpleasant incidents between the representatives of the belligerent countries. The French Ambassador, Camille Barrère, was not present owing to an indisposition and the British Ambassador, Sir J. Rennell Rodd, absented himself because of the Court mourning for Prince Maurice of Battenberg. Also the Foreign Minister for the first time at these dinners included the women of the Diplomatic Corps among the guests.

Principal Points on the Flanders-France Battle Line



1. The French War Office reported that Lombaertzyde, reoccupied by the Allies on Tuesday, had withstood a counter-attack by the Germans.
2. Official admission was made in Paris that the Germans had occupied Dixmude on Tuesday; the German official account said that 500 prisoners had been taken.
3. Near Langemarck the Germans reported the capture of the first line of the Allies' position and of 2,000 prisoners.
4. At Ypres the French report announced the repulse of all German attacks; the Germans reported the occupation of St. Eloi, a hamlet to the south of the city.

JAPANESE VESSEL BLOWN UP BY MINE

Torpedo Boat Destroyed and Six Men Killed While Dragging Kiao-Chau Bay.

TOKIO, Nov. 11. — It is officially announced that Torpedo Boat 33 of the Japanese Navy was sunk by a mine early today at the mouth of Kiao-Chau Bay while dragging for mines. A majority of the crew was rescued.

Other torpedo boats made an attempt to tow No. 33 into shallow water, but failed. Six men on board No. 33 were killed or wounded and three are missing.

Tokio is celebrating the capitulation of Tsing-tau with a mammoth civic demonstration, attended by no fewer than 500,000 persons. Addresses were made by the diplomatic representatives of the allied powers. The streets are decorated with flags and are plentifully illuminated, and the people, marching in processions, show much enthusiasm.

PEKING, Nov 11. — The Austrian cruiser Kaiserin Elizabeth, which took refuge at Tsing-tau before that port was invested by the Japanese, lost eight members of her crew during the Japanese attack. The legation says the Kaiserin Elizabeth was sunk by her crew after the ammunition on board had become exhausted.

VANCOUVER, B. C., Nov. 11.—A message received at the navy yard at Esquimault today from the Commander in Chief of the Japanese Second Squadron, which bombarded Tsing-tau, said:

"The following vessels were found by us sunk by explosion in Kiao-Chau Bay: Jaguar, Luths, Iltis, Cormorant, Tiger, Taku, and Ruchin, which was a mine boat, and, in addition, the Kaiserin Elizabeth.

"All these ships were German except the Kaiserin Elizabeth, which was Austrian."

URGES NORTH SEA PROTEST.

Amsterdam Newspaper Says United States Should Join in It.

THE HAGUE, Nov. 11, (via London.)—In view of conditions in the North Sea, the Amsterdam Handelsblad suggested an immediate conference between representatives of Sweden, Norway, Denmark, Holland, and the United States to discuss means by which the North Sea may be kept open and neutral countries saved from famine.

"Both Germany and England," the newspaper says, "which are now fighting for possession of the North Sea, as if it were private property, should be forced to restrict their mine laying to their own territorial waters. The time has come for all neutrals to utter a strong word of protest. Otherwise, in the future the principles of international law and the freedom of the ocean will be disregarded by any nation having sufficient power to break these laws and go unpunished."

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—Denmark, Sweden, Norway, and the Netherlands already have protested formally to Germany and England against mines in the North Sea other than at harbor entrances. Diplomatic representatives of those countries also have conferred with the State Department officials in regard to the interference with transatlantic commerce in which the United States is interested, caused by the dangers to navigation.

So far no direct proposal has been made that the United States enter into a joint protest against the mine planting, the apparent purpose of the communications being rather to intimate to the United States the propriety of following the example of the neutral European States.

CANADA HAILS AUSTRALIA.

Prime Minister Sends Greetings on the Sydney's Victory.

OTTAWA, Ont., Nov. 11.—The destruction of the German commerce destroyer Emden by the Australian cruiser Sydney has made a profound impression in Canada. Sir George E. Foster, Acting Prime Minister, cabled to the Prime Minister of Australia:

"Bravo, Australia! All Canada congratulates you!"

For several years Canada has been considering in what form a naval policy should be developed. The demonstration of naval effectiveness by a sister colony is generally commented upon by the Canadian press.

HIZEN LEAVES HONOLULU.

With the Asama She Will Probably Search for German Fleet.

HONOLULU, Nov. 11.—The Japanese battleship Hizen and the cruiser Asama, which entered this port yesterday for coal and provisions, left here today without announcing their destination.

It is reported that they will join a Japanese fleet now nearing the coast of Chile in search of the German cruisers which defeated Rear Admiral Cradock's squadron.

GERMAN SUBMARINE SINKS GUNBOAT

all were below at the time. The first order we received was to close the watertight doors."

So far as I can ascertain at present only one man is missing. Four or five have been landed at Ramsgate. The crew is said to have numbered ninety-six officers and men.

The sinking of the Niger came with tragic swiftness. It was comparatively a fine, peaceful day and the people were resting on the promenade enjoying sea and fresh air. Anglers—men and women—were calmly fishing from the pier. One angler whom I interviewed this evening said:

"I had just baited my line and cast it out when I heard two loud reports, like an explosion. I looked seaward and saw the Niger, only a mile away, enveloped in smoke or steam. When it had cleared away, I said to my fellow-anglers, 'Oh, he is shutting off steam.' When I looked at her again I was startled to notice that she was lower in the water. Fortunately I had slung across my shoulder a pair of glasses, and, on looking at the vessel through them, I noticed that they were attempting to lower the boats, while the remainder of the crew stood at attention on the deck. We could see that the vessel was sinking and the lifeboats and other boats were hastening to the rescue.

"The vessel then gradually disappeared, bow first, and after about fifteen minutes not a sign of her remained."

Mysterious Warship Near By.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 11.—The London Daily Standard says that Lieut. Commander Muir, who was in command of the Niger, was interviewed at the hospital and said he saw the torpedo which sank his vessel, but he declined to make any further statement.

The torpedo is said to have struck the ship just aft of the foremast. One of the crew said that after the explosion he saw the long gray body of the submarine come to the surface some distance off on the seaward side of the ship, but it disappeared in a few moments.

Nearly a hundred ships were anchored off Deal at the time the warship was torpedoed. The Niger had been on patrol duty in the vicinity of Deal since the beginning of the war.

A great deal of comment being made at Deal on the fact that a small cruiser, flying a Dutch flag, had been lying in close proximity to the Niger for the last two days, and only put to sea this morning.

In view of the disaster local mariners very much doubt whether this vessel was Dutch or was only flying the flag of that country. They think it quite probable that this vessel was covering movements of the submarine. Neither Lloyd's agent nor any one else local y had been able to ascertain the name of this mysterious warship.

All Saved, Says Admiralty.

LONDON, Nov. 11.—The Admiralty, in announcing the loss of the Niger, says:

"The Niger, Lieut. Commander Arthur T. Muir, was torpedoed this morning in the Downs. All the officers and seventy-seven of the crew were saved. Four men were injured. It is thought that there was no loss of life.

"The Niger has been employed in semi-combatant duties."

The Niger carried a complement of eighty-five men. The gunboat was built in 1892. She had a displacement of 810 tons, and was 230 feet long. Her armament consisted of two 4.7-inch guns, four 3-pounders, one machine gun, and three 18-inch torpedo tubes. Her speed when she was first built was 10.2 knots when she was first built was 10.2 knots

HOLLAND CREATES A FOOD MONOPOLY

Contracts With Ship Line to Take Only Government Cargoes —Flour Men Protest.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—Holland has created what is practically a Government monopoly of the importation into the Netherlands of flour, foodstuffs, cereals, and cattle foods. The State Department announced tonight that the Netherlands Government had entered into a contract with the Holland-America Line, the only neutral steamship line plying regularly between ports in the United States and the Netherlands, whereby private shipments would not be accepted by that line.

Definite information as to Holland's position had been sought by American millers, who protested to the State Department that the action of Holland, if followed by other neutral countries, would demoralize the American flour trade. The following statement was issued on the subject by Counselor Robert Lansing:

The Department of State has been informed by Minister Van Dyke that the Netherlands Government has made contract with the Holland-America Line whereby ships of that line carrying cargo bought by or consigned to the Netherlands Government will not accept private consignments of contraband or conditional contraband, thereby creating a practical Governmental monopoly of embargoes on cereals and cattle foods. Shipments of flour and other foodstuffs consigned to private firms in Holland will not be barred from Dutch ports when carried in American or other neutral vessels, but Holland-America Line cannot accept such shipments. The Netherlands Government does not intend to forbid the fulfillment of private contracts for shipments of such goods made before the war, but under the existing conditions private Dutch importers having such contracts for American foodstuffs should apply to the Department of Commerce of the Netherlands Government for permission to have such goods consigned to or bought by the Dutch Government.

This information was sought and obtained at the instance of certain American flouring mills and other exporters of foodstuffs.

While State Department officials refuse to make any further comment, it is known that the American Government has no way of intertering with such a monopoly as Holland has created, such an act being entirely within the sovereign right of every nation. Germany and Austria have oil and tobacco monopol.es respectively.

Just what efforts will be made by millers to obtain ships to carry their flour to Dutch ports is not known here, but a move in that direction seems to offer a possible solution of the problem. Otherwise the effect of the monopoly will be, it is believed, to bring the Netherlands Government into the market as a purchaser of flour, with the probability that Holland will force American dealers to cut prices.

Mines Adrift in the Adriatic.

VENICE, Nov. 11.—During the recent sirocco some Austrian mines drifted from their moorings in the Adriatic. Thus far only a few have been recovered. The Italian naval authorities are doing their utmost to pick up the rest of them. The mines generally are found floating only a few inches below the surface of the water.

TERRITORIALS GAIN FAME IN FIRST FIGHT

London Scottish Battalion Is Praised for Valor in Maiden Battle in Belgium.

STANDS UP WITH REGULARS

British Report Tells of Capture of Many German Boys Who Were Sent to Front Without Training.

LONDON, Nov. 11.—The official Press Bureau issues the following descriptive account, which has been communicated by an eyewitness present with the general headquarters, and which continues and supplements the narrative published on Nov. 6 of the movements of the British force and the French armies in immediate touch with it:

"Nov. 4—Before the chronological record of the course of events is resumed, a short description will be given of the part in the battle played on Oct. 31 by the London Scottish. The occasion is not looked upon as a special one, because this battalion acquitted itself well, for that was regarded as a matter of course, nor because it has done better than the regular battalions, who have been doing as much, if not more, for weeks. It is a special event because it forms an epoch in the military history of the British Empire and marks the first time that a complete unit of our territorial army has been thrown into a fight alongside its sister units of the regular arm. Briefly, what happened was this:

"On Saturday, (Oct. 31,) being ordered to take up a section of the firing line to support some of our cavalry, and having advanced to its position under the heavy fire of field guns, howitzers, and machine guns, the battalion reached a point where further movement forward was impossible. There it maintained itself until dusk, when it proceeded to intrench.

"From 9 o'clock that night until 2 A. M. Sunday, the Germans made numerous attacks on the Scottish line, all of which were repulsed by rifle fire. At 2 A. M. they made their great effort and assaulted the front and left of the position in great force. A considerable number succeeded by a detour in getting around the flank of the regiment. A large proportion of these were engaged by the companies in support and reserve, while others penetrated between the first and second lines of trenches and assailed our firing line in the rear.

Foes in Their Rear.

"While the fighting with rifle and bayonet was going on, both in front and immediately behind the firing line, a reserve company still further behind made repeated bayonet charges against the enemy who had got round, and so prevented the entire envelopment of the battalion. Behind the firing line the scene of combat was lit up by a blazing house, which the Germans had set alight.

"At dawn it was discovered that large numbers of the enemy had, according to custom, worked round both flanks with machine guns, and a retirement was carried out. This was effected under a cross-fire from machine guns and rifles.

"Naturally in an encounter of this nature the battalion suffered a heavy loss, but, though unable to maintain its position, it acquitted itself with gallantry and coolness in a situation of peculiar difficulty, and, following the national motto of 'Nemo me impune lacessit,' inflicted far more damage on the enemy than it received.

"To turn to the general narrative: On Nov. 1 the full violence of the enemy's attack fell on our left, their main efforts still being directed slightly south of Ypres. Such was the force of the onslaught and the weight of artillery supporting it that our line was temporarily driven back. It was soon readjusted, however, and by evening the situation in this quarter was the same as it had been twenty-four hours earlier.

"That night some shells were thrown into Ypres itself. Farther to the south the Germans had, during the previous night, retaken the village of Messines and had also captured Wytschaete. By 11 A. M. our cavalry, working in cooperation with the French, drove them out of the latter place by a brilliant charge, but we did not occupy it. A few of the prisoners taken at this place were only 17 years of age and said that they had had apparently no training and little food. Some of them had never fired a rifle before.

Horse Artillery Effective.

"The fact that Messines still remained in hostile hands necessitated a slight adjustment of our front in the centre. But apart from this there was no change in this quarter, the bombardment continuing all day.

"During the action around these two villages the Germans, moving across our front, suffered very greatly from the massed fire of our horse artillery at short range, but though they fell literally in heaps, they still came on with admirable determination.

"South of the Lys some of the trenches which had been lost on the previous night were recaptured by us; otherwise the situation remained as it had been. No attacks were delivered against us, and the enemy contented itself with bombarding our trenches. A heavy battery was knocked out by our artillery fire.

"One of our prisoners, a Saxon professor, who was captured on the first day he entered the field, stated as his opinion that Germany realized that she had failed in her object, and was only fighting in order to obtain good terms. What this opinion is worth remains to be seen.

"During the afternoon a German aeroplane was captured, quite uninjured. On the 2d, on our left, the pressure was still kept up toward Ypres, and at first our line was once more forced back, but it was restored toward evening by a vigorous advance carried out in co-operation with the French, who were rendering us very timely assistance.

"The maximum efforts of the Germans on this day, however, was more to the south of Ypres, as if to drive a wedge between that town on the north and Armentières on the south, and the bombardment of our positions in this quarter of the field was especially heavy, though it was well replied to by a concentric fire from our guns and those of the French.

"The French delivered a counter-attack in the direction of Wytschaete which remained disputed ground, fiercely blazing amidst a hail of shell from both sides.

"More to the south the enemy advanced in force, but were checked. Still further toward our right a hostile attack in the neighborhood of Armentières met with the same fate. On our extreme right several assaults were repulsed, though at one or two points the Germans gained ground slightly, obtaining possession of Nueve Chapelle.

German Trenches Inundated.

"The inundation around Nieuport had by this day reached the enemy's trenches, and it is stated that two heavy guns and some field artillery had to be abandoned in the mud.

"The third was, on the whole, a comparatively uneventful day, which enabled our troops to get a much-needed rest. In front of Ypres the German infantry ceased to press, but to the south, in the neighborhood of Wytschaete and Hollebeke, they made unsuccessful attempts to get forward, effective counter attacks being delivered by the French and British. In this quarter the fighting was of a severe nature.

"South of the river there were some minor attacks against our trenches, which were beaten off. It seemed that the violence of the German efforts was abating, even the canonnade being in some places less heavy than it had been."

VANEYCK MASTERPIECE SEIZED BY GERMANS?

French Say They Have Carried the Brussels "Adam and Eve" to Berlin.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov. 11.—The Figaro says that the famous Van Eyck, "Adam and Eve," which is one of the glories of the Brussels Royal Museum, has been removed to Berlin.

The Figaro comments:

"The theft does not matter greatly. The Allies will retake it later; but Heaven send that Dr. Bode does not attempt to restore it!"

Jan Van Eyck's "Adam and Eve," painted in Bruges about 1430, was in the Gallery of Ancient Paintings in Brussels. It is about the period of "The Virgin and Child by a Fountain," which was, before the German invasion, in the Antwerp gallery.

Dr. Wilhelm Bode, the head of the Berlin Museum, and reputed to be the greatest expert on Leonardo da Vinci in the world, purchased for the Museum in 1909 a wax bust said to be by that artist. The purchase was made in London, and $40,000 was paid. English experts said that the bust was not by Leonardo, but by Richard Cockle Lucas, and examination revealed as a "form" for the base pieces of a Victorian bed quilt and some London newspaper clippings of the early 40's. Dr. Bode, however, has continued to insist that the famous Italian made the bust, and the Kaiser has decreed that Dr. Bode is right.

GERMAN BANK RESERVE UP $6,000,000 IN WEEK

Governor of Brandenburg Issues Warning of Foreign Effort to Buy German Gold.

BERLIN, Nov. 11, (By Wireless to Sayville, L. I.)—Included in the information given to the press today from official quarters is the following: During the last week the specie reserve of the German Imperial Bank increased 25,000,000 marks, ($6,750,000,) while the circulation of notes decreased 36,000,000 marks, ($21,500,000.)

BERLIN, Nov. 11, (via The Hague and London.)—The Governor of the Province of Brandenburg publicly calls attention to the fact that certain persons are trying to buy German gold for export, offering a slight premium. He appeals to the patriotism of the people to give no asistance to such efforts, and advises that they put a stop thereto by turning over "these agents of foreign countries" to the police on the spot.

EXHIBIT DUMDUM BULLETS.

Taken, with Dumdum Rifles, from British Prisoners, Germans Say.

BERLIN, Nov. 11, (By Wireless to Sayville, L. I.)—Lieut. Gen. Hellingrath, Inspector of German Military Roads, with headquarters at Cambrai, in Northern France, is making public exhibitions of dumdum bullets found on British prisoners and also of British rifles equipped with a contrivance to cut off and perforate the points of bullets.

The above information was given out officially to the press in Berlin today.

MANY AUSTRIAN DESERTERS.

Convalescent Wounded Flee to Italy —Mountain Passes Fortified.

VENICE, Nov. 11.—According to the Corriere della Sera of Milan, very few troops are left in the Tyrol. About 2,000, mostly Rumanians, are guarding the mountain frontier to prevent the passage of deserters. Nevertheless desertions continue daily. Many convalescent wounded are fleeing into Italy instead of rejoining the Austrian Army.

When the deserters are minors the Austrian authorities visit the parents, the paper says, and inquire whether they are glad that their sons have escaped. If the answer is "Yes," the parents are immediately arrested. If they reply "No" they are required to sign documents demanding that the Italian authorities send their sons back to Austria.

Work on the fortifications in the mountains along the frontier is proceeding actively and the passes are being closed. Few still remain open. Hangars for Zeppelins are being constructed at Trent and Innsbruck.

RUSSIANS ATTACK CRACOW DEFENSES

Austrian General Dankl Said to Have Refused Further Co-operation with Germans.

ENTIRE LINE IN RETREAT

Russians, Advancing in East Prussia, Again Invade the Lake Region.

WIN THREE ENGAGEMENTS

Crown Prince's Army Reported to be Concentrating for a Stand Around Czenstochowo.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 11, (Dispatch to The London Daily News.)—A communication issued from Prague admits that the Austro-German army is retreating on Cracow, and that the Russians are approaching that fortress. The fact is the Russians are already attacking the outer forts of Cracow.

Gen. Dankl, with the remainder of the Austrian Army, is now moving due south across Galicia. He has refused further co-operation with Gen. von Hindenburg or the German staff.

The bitterness between the Germans and Austrians is such that officers who are prisoners have to be separated because they are constantly fighting.

Austro-German Split Serious.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 11, (Dispatch to The London Times.)—A situation which is increasing in importance and promising developments which may have an enormous influence on events, is caused by growing hostility and lack of mutual confidence between the Austrian and German Armies.

This sentiment is now becoming more conspicuous and assuming proportions which should be watched, as, if these tendencies continue to increase with the rapidity of development which the last month has shown, it is quite conceivable that Austria may break with her ally and seek an independent peace.

While I was in Galicia a month ago there were rumors of constant friction between the armies of the two allies. A story was told to me there that when a carriageful of Austrian prisoners and three Germans captured by the Russians arrived at Lwow (Lemberg) the Germans were found strangled.

Since then the entire German policy in the campaign seems to have been to relegate the Austrian rear guards to all the worst positions in the fighting. Take the case of Kielce, for instance, which the Russians entered last Tuesday week. The Germans left the town on the previous afternoon, withdrawing in leisurely fashion with their transport. The Austrians were ordered to hold the rear while the Russian regiments were, as usual, moving rapidly on the flanks and making resistance impossible.

Nearly all the dead, wounded, and prisoners seen on all battlefields during the last few weeks were Austrians. The Germans are treating their allies with contempt and arrogance. It is becoming rapidly obvious to many Austrians that their cause is hopelessly impaired and that they are now being used by the Germans as buffers between themselves and the advancing Russians.

For three months the Austrians have been fighting fiercely, with terrible lesseats and heavy losses, but there has been no appreciation of their services. They are now being arrogantly and contemptuously used, generally as mere tools in the German campaign against Russia.

It has been noticeable in cases of the few German prisoners, who have been mingled with the Austrians, that hostility between the troops of the two allies is much greater than that between either of them and their Russian captors.

My own impressions during the past weeks are increasingly confirmed by reports in Russian quarters here of bitter quarrels between the German and Austrian co-operating officers. These quarrels are assuming such importance that there is more than a possibility of fatal friction arising between the two which ultimately may crystallize the growing discontent among the Austrians at their treatment into an open rupture.

Enormous numbers of Austrians have been captured, and many conversations which I have had personally with prisoners have convinced me that they are sick of the war and have no heart in its further prosecution.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 11, (Dispatch to The London Daily Chronicle.)—All along the fringe of Poland, from Thorn to Cracow, the Austro-German armies continue to fall back under the increasing Russian pressure.

The northern army, commanded by Gen. von Hindenburg, retired on Slupsk, north of Kalish; the southern army, commanded by the Crown Prince, apparently is concentrating around Czenstochowo, while the Austrians are being pushed back to the gates of Cracow and now are probably well within the line of their forts, which begin about two miles beyond the Russian frontier.

It is now clear what a gigantic blunder the German General Staff made in ordering the advance on Warsaw. The advance was certainly based on an underestimate of the Russian strength. The defeat near Warsaw has been a heavy blow to the Germans, while for the unfortunate Austrians who have been dragged into this ill-fated expedition it has been disastrous. The Germans could have devised no better means of finally ruining their allies.

Instead of helping the Austrians to prolong their resistance in Galicia and so protecting their own approaches to Silesia, the Germans risked the remnants of their ally's forces on the foolhardy enterprise and so destroyed whatever hope the Austrians may have had of recovering lost ground or even of effectively defending the still unconquered area in Galicia.

At the same time the Germans greatly weakened their defensive force, for the total German and Austrian losses during the brief Polish campaign probably amount to 100,000 and have cleared the ground for the Russian advance.

RUSSIAN ADVANCE GOES ON.

Germans Working Night and Day on Defenses of Thorn.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 11. — General Headquarters issued the following official announcement tonight:

In East Prussia our troops are approaching the eastern outlets of the region around Lake Masurie.

In the vicinity of Goldapp, Mlawa and Soldau engagements have occurred which have been in our favor.

In Galicia we are continuing a vigorous offensive.

PARIS, Thursday, Nov. 12.—A dispatch from Petrograd to the Havas Agency says:

"The Messager de l'Armée prints a story to the effect that the Germans are constructing various kinds of barriers to impede the Russian advance, especially in the region of Czenstochowo, Russian Poland, and are working night and day on the fortifications at Thorn.

"Martial law has been declared at Cracow, and the civil population has evacuated the city."

KAISER'S SON IS CHIEF OF EASTERN ARMIES

Appointed to Direct Entire Operations Against Russia—Another German General Captured

PARIS, Nov. 11.—The Petrograd correspondent of The Matin telegraphs the following:

"It is reported that after a council of war, presided over by the Kaiser, the Crown Prince was appointed Commander in Chief of all the German and Austrian armies operating against Russia, with Gen. von Hindenburg commanding the left wing, and Gen. Dankl the right."

LONDON, Nov. 11.—Contrary to the German report that the Russians had been checked on the frontier of East Prussia, Petrograd declares that a brilliant success in that region has been succeeded by an actual invasion of German territory.

An equal triumph is reported from the other end of the long Russian battle line; with Cossacks raiding within twenty miles of Cracow, the commandant of that fortress has ordered the civilian population of the city to leave. Przemysl is again said to be fully invested, and the reduction of this fortress is likely to precede any further advance by the Russian left wing.

From Moscow comes a report that in addition to Gen. von Liebert, who was in command at Lodz when the Russians reoccupied that city, Gen. von Mackensen, commander of the Seventeenth German Army Corps, together with members of his staff, has been captured.

Petrograd is not wholly satisfied with the scope of the victories reported against the Germans—for the belief prevails in military circles that if the Russian strategy of the Napoleonic era had been more fully followed, even to the extent of the surrender of Warsaw, the invaders never would have returned to their own country with intact fighting organizations. Others feel that political motives quite justified the Government in its determination to defend Warsaw.

BERLIN GETS NO NEWS.

Not a Line in Papers About Russian Invasion of Germany.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

COPENHAGEN, Nov. 11, (Dispatch to The London Daily News.)—Berlin is being kept absolutely in the dark as to the growing critical situation on the eastern front.

Not a line appears in the German papers about the Russian Army setting foot on German soil.

BERLIN, Nov. 11, (By Wireless to Sayville, L. I.)—Included in the information given out to the press today from official quarters is the following:

"The rout of a Russian battalion near Konin (thirty-three miles northeast of Kalisz, in Russian Poland) by a detachment of German cavalry appears to have been thorough, and while this engagement is without great importance, it shows the offensive spirit of the German troops. No other news has been received from the eastern arena.

"Special dispatches received from Czernowitz, in Bukowina, report that important movements of Russian troops are taking place in Bessarabia and East Galicia, apparently inspired by the campaign against Turkey.

"The Vienna Fremdenblatt has published a dispatch from Czernowitz, saying that the Russians on Nov. 9 threw shells into that city, but their batteries speedily were silenced. An advance guard skirmish before Czernowitz ended in a Russian retreat."

Sends Prisoners to Vladivostok.

PEKING, Nov. 11.—Reports reaching here from Harbin, Manchuria, set forth that Russia is transporting her European prisoners of war as far east as Vladivostok.

THE WAR SITUATION.

BY THE MILITARY EXPERT OF THE NEW YORK TIMES.
(An Associate Editor of The Army and Navy Journal.)

The fighting in Belgium shows two well-defined movements. Along the coast the British and Belgians are pushing forward under the protection of their gunboats in an effort to work their way around the German flank. The advance of Lombaertzyde shows a lack of German strength at this point and a tendency on the part of the Allies to assume a more aggressive rôle. Just south of Dixmude the German success near Langemarck shows an earlier reverse, since they were last reported at Bixschoote, two miles to the west. The line of the Allies in Belgium seems to have held firm from Armentières to the coast, in spite of the energy with which the German attacks have been pressed.

The close fighting of the last nine weeks in France has been very trying to the morale of the troops. In spite of the relatively small changes in the positions, the aggregate losses have been large. The constant bombardment and the tours of duty in the trenches are especially wearing on the nerves.

The opposing lines have now been pushed forward until they are within 200 or 300 yards of each other at important points. Here the combatants burrow in deep trenches and bomb-proofs for protection against the shrapnel and grenades that are used by the enemy in the effort to reach the troops behind the parapets. Whenever the opportunity offers, a surprise attack is made by night in an effort to seize the enemy's position. Every preparation is made before dark; at a signal the pioneers leap out and rush forward with wire cutters and dynamite to destroy the wire entanglements and other obstacles in front of the enemy's parapets. Close behind follow the infantry columns. If sufficient progress can be made before discovery, the charging troops get close enough to make a rush for the enemy's trenches and to drive out with the bayonet the garrison that remains for their defense. If the attack is discovered in time the enemy brings a concentrated fire to bear that causes immense loss for the assailants.

Even when the enemy's trench is captured, the advantage can seldom be carried further. The enemy maintains in the rear reserves for just such emergencies. These troops are rushed to the front, and strengthen the defense along the second or third line of trenches, and thus check the assailants' progress. Both sides then dig strenuously in the effort to hold their new positions, and to convert them into strong first line intrenchments.

This kind of fighting has been occurring over and over again all along the line. The various successes reported in the dispatches are nearly all of this character. While these smaller conflicts have little influence on the final outcome, they are an essential part of the fighting. By this means each side keeps the other busy and prevents it from concentrating its troops on one portion of the line. Such a massing of troops might result in important gains by the side that first got its movement under way.

On the south flank of the fighting in France the developments are especially encouraging to the French, although they have as yet little influence on the campaign as a whole. In their effort to protect their right flank and to prosecute a vigorous campaign against the Allies in Belgium the Germans have very much weakened their forces on their left flank. As a consequence the French have been able to push forward to the Lorraine border north of Nancy and to seize the passes through the Vosges east of St. Dié.

In Alsace, opposite Belfort, their advance has been still greater, and by the capture of Thann and Altkirch they have occupied a ten-mile strip of German territory. When the Allies are finally ready to adopt the aggressive on a large scale one of the first manifestations of this attitude will almost certainly be a rapid advance of a large army from Belfort through Alsace toward Strassburg.

The Russians' advance to Lyck and Goldapp, in East Prussia, shows the way in which the influence of their victory west of Warsaw is spreading to all parts of the eastern war zone. The defeat of the Germans in western Poland forced the latter to call in troops from East Prussia to assist in the defense of the Posen border. As a result the Germans have had to retreat at all points along the northeastern frontier, so that the fighting is now taking place on German territory all along the East Prussian border.

On the Posen line also the Germans have been forced back to within ten miles of the border at Nieschawa and Slupza. Meanwhile the Russians devote their main efforts to the principal German army along the Silesian border, between Kalisz and Czenstochowo. If this army can be forced to retreat from the strongly intrenched position that has been carefully prepared as the main line of defense against a Russian invasion, the other smaller armies will in turn have to fall back. The occupation of Miechow by the Russian army shows a further advance of five miles toward Cracow, which is the principal cause of the Austrian withdrawal from the San River. When confronted with the formidable campaign toward Cracow, which was threatening their main line of retreat, the Austrians had no choice but to fall back rapidly in order to strengthen the resistance opposed to the Russian advance.

This Russian success has already resulted in the reoccupation of Central Galicia and in the renewal of the siege of Przemysl. The Austrians have now abandoned Rzeszow, Dynow, and Lisko, thirty miles west of Przemysl, but their retreat will almost certainly have to be carried much further. It is doubtful whether they will be able to make a stand east of Tarnow and the Donajec River. In this case the Russians will once more find themselves on the lines that they had to abandon so hastily six weeks ago, when the Germans first made their rapid advance to the Vistula. As a result of this campaign and the wise course adopted by the Russians in conceding smaller successes in order to concentrate their forces at the most important point, the Germans and Austrians are now driven back to the border at every point, while the Russian armies are advancing victoriously for the occupation of the western part of Galicia. This success may be carried even farther, resulting in an invasion in force of Central Germany.

The latest fighting in Servia shows that the Austrians have again crossed the border and have advanced five miles from the Drina River. After fifteen weeks of war, then the Austrians are no further advanced in their campaign against Servia than they were during the first week after the delivery of their ultimatum on July 23. The activities of the Servian Army have helped very appreciably in decreasing the Austrian strength available for the Galician army. By taking advantage of every reduction in the opposing strength in the south, the Servians have forced Austria to maintain in this region an army of at least 300,000 men. Such a force might have been the deciding factor in the recent fighting in Poland.

ANTI-GERMAN PLOT IN CONSTANTINOPLE

Leaders of the Conspiracy Against the Young Turks and Their Advisers Shot.

ARMY SUCCESSES REPORTED

Ottoman Troops Said to Have Occupied a Fort at El-Arish, on the Palestine-Egypt Border.

LONDON, Nov. 11.—A dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company from Athens says:

"It is learned that a conspiracy has broken out at Constantinople against the Germans and Young Turks. The chief conspirators were arrested and shot.

"The population of the Ottoman capital, becoming very excited as a result of the Turkish defeats, on Sunday visited resentment on a number of German non-commissioned officers, whom they attacked."

BERLIN, Nov. 11, (by Wireless Telegraphy to Sayville, L. I.)—The Turks are meeting with considerable success in their operations in the Caucasus and on the Egyptian frontier, according to an official announcement made by the Turkish Government and given out here.

The Turks, it is stated, have occupied Sheikzar Fort at El-Arish, Egypt, on the boundary between Egypt and Palestine, and have taken four field guns from the enemy.

The Russians in the Caucasus have been forced to retire to their second lines of defense.

Another official announcement given to the press here today is as follows:

"Constantinople reports the continuation of Turkish offensive movements on the Caucasian border in spite of the snow. Other reports received here from Athens declare that the Turkish operations against Egypt are progressing, and that there is much military activity in Syria.

"The Turkish Government declares with emphasis that the report in the Paris Temps of rioting by Turkish Armenians is a flat lie.

"It is reported here from Athens that Bulgaria has refused to adopt the anti-Turkish attitude suggested by the Triple Entente powers in return for the promise of the addition of Adrianople to Bulgarian territory.

"The Bulgarian Minister at Rome has said in an interview that Bulgaria demands the restitution of the territories inhabited by Bulgarians. Bulgaria would keep neutral in the present war, the Minister declared, and under no circumstances would she fight Turkey.

"The President of the Turkish Chamber of Deputies, Halil Bey, has arrived at Bucharest, Rumania, on a special mission."

BERLIN, (via London,) Nov. 11.—The following was contained in a German official statement received by the Marconi Wireless Telegraph Company today:

"There are movements of strong Russian forces in East Galicia and in Bessarabia, (a Government of Southwestern Russia,) this apparently being in connection with the Turkish war.

"General headquarters at Constantinople report that, 'although snow is falling and in spite of a heavy atmosphere, our offensive on the Caucasian frontier is maintained.'"

PARIS, Thursday, Nov. 12.—The following dispatch has been received by the Havas Agency from Athens:

"It is announced that a British destroyer has captured two Turkish sailing ships near the Island of Tenedos."

CIVIL WAR IN ALBANIA.

Troops Sent to Avlona Disarm Citizens and Restore Turkish Flag.

PARIS, Thursday, Nov. 12.—A telegram from Athens to the Havas Agency says:

"The town of Berat, Albania, has been pillaged and completely destroyed.

"Anarchy reigns at Avlona, Albania, and that region is a prey to civil war. Partisans of Kemal Bey to the number of 1,500 forced the Government to haul down the Turkish flag and hoist the Albanian colors. Essad Pasha sent 500 soldiers to Avlona, and they disarmed the inhabitants and restored the Turkish flag."

AUSTRIANS PURSUE SERBS.

Storm Fortified Positions on the Shabats-Lesnitza Line.

VIENNA, Nov. 10, (via Amsterdam and London, Nov. 11.)—An official communication issued by army headquarters today regarding the fighting with the Servians says:

Severe fighting at the foot of a mountain on the line from Shabats to Lesnitza continued all day yesterday. Some strongly fortified positions were stormed.

South of Planina our troops further advanced in the district east of Lesnitza, Kroupani, and Ljubvoka. Some heavy skirmishes took place with the rear guard of the enemy, which was repulsed at all points. Numerous prisoners and some heavy guns were taken.

BULGARIA FRIENDLY TO ALL THE POWERS

Under No Obligations to Assist Turkey Against Triple Entente, Says Premier Radoslavoff.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ATHENS, Nov. 11, (Dispatch to The London Morning Post.)—According to telegrams from Sofia, M. Radoslavoff, the Bulgarian Premier, received the leaders of the opposition in private audience and explained to them the policy of Bulgaria. Bulgaria, he said, enjoyed the sympathies of all the great powers and did not intend to take part in the war on either side. Her relations with Turkey were friendly, but she was under no obligation to assist the Porte against the Triple Entente. Bulgaria hoped for the support of the powers for a solution of the Balkan questions in such a manner as to establish a lasting peace in the Balkans.

In conversation with a correspondent of the Berliner Tageblatt M. Radoslavoff is reported to have made use of less honeyed language. Hitherto, he said, Bulgaria had been able to preserve neutrality toward all her neighbors. As regarded the future, however, no one could tell what might happen.

The Volja, addressing Greece in a leading article, emphasizes the diplomatic successes gained under the skilful guidance of M. Venizelos, who, despite the obstinacy of Turkey, succeeded in holding his ground over the islands in question, reoccupying Epirus with the approval of all the powers.

Greek interests, says The Volja, which coincide with Bulgarian interests, impose upon her the duty of maintaining rigid neutrality in view of the new complications caused by the action of Turkey. If she does this Bulgaria ought to do the same.

No further news has been received today regarding the progress of the efforts that are understood to be still proceeding to bring about a Balkan understanding. It is believed at this moment that the chief difficulty is not between Bulgaria and Servia, but between Bulgaria and Rumania.

Says Ill-Treatment Kills Prisoners.

BERLIN, Nov. 11, (By Wireless to Sayville, L. I.)—One of the German prisoners of war in England has written a letter to the Frankfurter Zeitung in which he asserts that, as a result of bad treatment, bad food, and of being housed in cold barracks, 46 of 709 German prisoners died within one week of pneumonia and typhoid fever. There were no wounded men among these prisoners.

REPORT CHRISTIANS IN PERIL IN TURKEY

Views of Refugees Now in Petrograd—All Men Forced Into the Army.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 11, (Dispatch to The London Morning Post.)—Refugees who have arrived here from Constantinople report that the state of things there and in Turkey generally is appalling.

Brigandage, murder, and atrocities are committed, Armenians being the chief victims, but all Christians and foreigners are in great danger.

One refugee, a Greek, tells me he ran away to escape forced military service, leaving his wife and his mother behind. According to his account the Turkish authorities are forcing every man possible into the ranks of the army.

The fighting on Saturday and Sunday at Koprikos was not renewed on Monday, but the day was spent in a vigorous artillery duel, apparently without result. In the meantime Russian columns are marching up in two directions to reinforce each other for an attack on Erzerum.

Several strategic points of the utmost importance are already in the hands of the Russians.

ASQUITH DOUBTS PROLONGED WAR

End Will Not Come Soon, He Says, but May Be Sooner Than Predicted.

KAISER'S PLANS FOILED

First Designs Absolutely Defeated by Britain and Her Allies.

KING OPENS PARLIAMENT

Many Members of House of Commons Absent on War Service—Brilliant Scene in Upper House.

LONDON, Nov. 11.—King George opened Parliament today. Immense crowds greeted the King and Queen on their way from Buckingham Palace to the Houses of Parliament.

Owing to the war the procession to Westminster was less gorgeous than usual, but inside the House of Lords, when the King read his speech from the Throne, the scene was as brilliant as ever.

In a speech in the House of Commons, after the opening of Parliament, Premier Asquith said that he doubted whether the war would last as long as some people originally predicted, but that it would last long was certain.

"However, the longer it lasts," continued the Premier, "the more the great resources and strength which the empire possesses will be available to fill the gaps to replace the losses, and to maintain our position.

"The empire is on trial and the experiences of the last three months have inspired us with the confident hope that the longer the trial lasts the more clearly will we emerge from it as the champions of a just cause."

Mr. Asquith expressed warm appreciation of the support which the Government had received from all parties.

"England is engaged in an unprecedented contest," he said, "and regarding the justice of her share in this contest there is no difference of opinion in any part of the empire. The country has gone through much, has learned much, has seen her troops hold a position of difficulty and danger." The Premier added:

"Today we see them in a position in which, in conjunction with our allies, France and Belgium, they have frustrated absolutely and defeated the first designs of the German Emperor."

Regarding the sending of British marines to Antwerp just before the fall of that city, as to which a question had been asked, the Premier intimated that Winston Spencer Churchill, the First Lord of the Admiralty, would subsequently make a more detailed statement, but he said at once that the responsibility for the expedition was shared by the Government as a whole. Earl Kitchener, Secretary of State for War, had been consulted, everything was done with his knowledge and approval, and the expedition was a material and most useful factor in the conduct of the campaign.

The Premier pointed out that the number of men authorized by the three votes of the present year for the regular army, not including the territorials, was 1,186,000. Of that total all but 100,000 were, he said, already in the service of the Crown.

A Committee of Inquiry, composed of all parties, would, said Mr. Asquith, be appointed to consider allowances to those dependent upon soldiers.

On Monday next, said Mr. Asquith, David Lloyd George, Chancellor of the Exchequer, would lay before the House of Commons his financial proposals, including the question of a loan, for which the Government would ask the authority of the House on Tuesday. There would be a vote of credit of considerable dimensions, and an additional vote for men.

This statement by the Premier indicates that the Government intends to go beyond the 1,000,000 men asked for by Earl Kitchener, and that the recruiting will continue until the war is concluded. Already there has been a big improvement in the number of men enlisting, and it is expected that there will be another big boom when Winter brings about an increase in unemployment.

Opposition Promises Support.

Speaking on the Address in Reply to the Speech from the Throne, A. Bonar Law, the leader of the Opposition, promised the Government the unflinching support of the Opposition in prosecuting the war to the end. He said:

"We stand in a better position now than at the outbreak of the war. The only chance for victory of Germany was that she should win before the resources of the Allies were available. She has failed, and failed on both fronts."

Mr. Bonar Law emphasized the importance of the financial position, and said that already the economic effects were being felt in Germany. This was shown by the rate of exchange, and would become more evident as time progressed. As soon as Germany realized that she must be beaten, he declared, economic forces would work with a pressure of which there was no conception.

It was in reply to questions put by Mr. Bonar Law that some statements by Mr. Asquith were made today. The Leader of the Opposition wished to know why a British naval force went to Antwerp, why First Lord of the Admiralty Churchill accompanied a military expedition instead of Lord Kitchener, and something more about the naval disaster off the Chilean coast.

Viscount Bryce, in seconding the address in reply to the speech from the throne in the House of Lords, referred appreciatively to the attitude of public opinion in the United States, which, he declared, was a country able to judge wisely the questions at issue. It was upon moral grounds that its support was given, and this was, therefore, the more highly prized.

The war, said Lord Bryce, had become a struggle of ideals—the ideal of a military State resolved to dominate all the neighboring countries, and the ideal of peaceful communities dwelling in tranquillity under the protection of treaties. In the conflict of principles there could be no end until one or the other triumphed.

There could be no talk of peace at present, said Lord Bryce. A peace patched up now would be merely a hollow truce, during which the contending nations would begin to prepare for a renewal of the struggle. Europe in the meanwhile would be living in continual suspense and alarm.

The Earl of Crawford (Unionist) urged more strenuous methods to get rid of German spies. He asserted that in the vicinity of the great naval base of Rosyth, Scotland, they had a well-organized system by means of which they signaled to ships at night. There had also been discovered, he said, an admirably equipped private post system between Fife and ports of Germany.

The King's Speech.

The Speech from the Throne delivered by King George today was as follows:

My Lords and Gentlemen—The energies and sympathies of my subjects in every part of the Empire are concentrated on the prosecution to a victorious issue of the war in which we are engaged. I have summoned you now in order that, sharing as I am aware you do, my conviction that this is a duty of paramount and supreme importance, you should take whatever steps are needed for its adequate discharge. Since I last addressed you the area of the war has been enlarged by the participation in the struggle of the Ottoman Empire. In conjunction with my Allies and in spite of repeated and continuous provocations I strove to preserve in regard to Turkey a friendly neutrality. Bad councils and alien influence have driven her into a policy of wanton and defiant aggression, and a state of war now exists between us. My Mussulman subjects know well that my future with Turkey has been forced upon me against my will, and I recognize with appreciation and gratitude the proofs which they have hastened to give of their loyal devotion and support.

My navy and army continue throughout the area of conflict to maintain in full measure their glorious traditions. We watch and follow their steadfastness and valor with thankfulness and pride, and there is throughout my Empire a fixed determination to secure at whatever sacrifice the triumph of our arms and vindication of our cause.

You will be asked to make due financial provision for the effective conduct of the war, and the only measures which will be submitted to you at this stage of the session are such as seem necessary to my advisors for the attainment of the great purpose upon which the efforts of the Empire are set. I confidently commend them to your patriotism and loyalty and I pray that the Almighty will give His blessing to your counsels.

The Address in Reply to the Speech from the Throne was moved in the House of Lords by Field Marshal Lord Methuen and seconded by Viscount Bryce. In the lower house the address was moved by Sir Robert Price and seconded by William Middlebrook.

A War Session.

The session of Parliament opened today will probably be devoted entirely to the war, though this does not mean that controversial matters will not arise for discussion. Indeed, a number of questions in regard to the conduct of various phases of the war have already been listed. Labor Party leaders, especially, are primed with questions in regard to pay for the soldiers, allowances for their dependents, and pensions.

Reginald McKenna, the Home Secretary, will, it is believed, make a report in the situation in regard to alien enemies in England and the extent of the spy peril, but no additional legislation in this direction is expected.

The most immediate business before the House of Commons will be to provide sinews of war in men and money. The recruiting situation may lead to some steps toward compulsory service, and the £500,000,000 granted in August having been practically spent, a further credit of a like amount will probably be proposed under the special War Loan act passed at the last session.

One hundred and five Unionist members of Parliament were missing from their seats today, being absent in various capacities in connection with the war, while thirty-two Ministerialists are actually at the front, and many others are absent on Government business.

GREAT CROWDS CHEER KING.

Largest Since Victoria's Jubilee—Khaki Prevalent Color.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 11.—The grimness of war hung heavy over the royal procession to the opening of Parliament this afternoon, but it did not dim the Briton's love of kingly splendor, and all along the route from Buckingham Palace to Westminster the King and Queen met with continuous acclamation.

As at the Lord Mayor's Show two days ago, the prevalence of khaki uniforms was the most striking indication of the war. The dull brown monotone of the troops lining the Mall, the Horse Guards Parade, and Whitehall nevertheless seemed far more appropriate than the scarlet and gold of the Life Guards who provided the escort for the King. The spectators evidently considered that the colorful grandeur of these were out of place, for cheering was withheld until the royal coach itself appeared.

Then the outburst of enthusiasm became simply tremendous, coming, as it did, from the greatest multitude which has assembled to witness such a spectacle since Queen Victoria's diamond jubilee.

Another sign of the times was the absence of the sight of cream-colored Hanoverian horses, which usually draw the royal coach on such occasions. The horses are still in the royal mews, but the cohort of footmen required to walk at their heads have gone to the front, and so the royal carriage was drawn by six black steeds of less illustrious pedigree. It was preceded by five carriages containing members of the royal household.

The Queen in Mourning.

There being no attendants on foot, the procession moved faster than usual, and the crowds caught only a brief glimpse of the sovereign and his consort. The King wore a gray frock coat and the Queen a black gown, a symbol of mourning for Prince Maurice of Battenberg, who was killed in battle in France.

The whole way to the Houses of Parliament they were kept bowing repeatedly in acknowledgment of their subject's salutations. Bands stationed at various points along the route played "God Save the King," and the men spectators unanimously removed their hats.

The members of the American Embassy, with the exception of Ambassador Page and Secretary Laughlin, who were in the Ambassadors' Gallery of the House of Lords, witnessed the spectacle from the broad terrace of the German Embassy overlooking the Mall as guests of E. J. Lowry, who was delegated by the State Department to look after Germany's diplomatic interests here.

Brilliant Scene in the Lords.

The King's entry into the House of Lords was as brilliant as ever, there being no such curtailment of the magnificence of the scene as in the parade. The Royal Gallery, which leads to the House of Lords ante-room, was crowded, every available inch of space being taken.

In one specially reserved corner were six wounded Belgian officers. One had an armless sleeve. Another sat on the floor, his back against the wall, until the royal procession arrived. Then he rose to his feet, and with much interest watched the proceedings. A pretty Red Cross nurse in uniform attended these Belgian victims of the war.

The broad passage between the rising tiers of seats on either side for the spectators was a glaring blaze of red, with Gentlemen at Arms with their scarlet coats, Yeomen of the Guard, in scarlet from their tunics to the rosettes on their shoes; the Heralds, with their knee-breeches and gold-incrusted scarlet capes, and members of the Life Guards, making a riot of brilliant color. All bore arms of one kind or another. The Life Guards had bared sabres the Gentlemen at Arms and Yeomanry had halberds and pikes.

The entry from the robing room was heralded only by a single blare from a trumpet, whereupon the doors were flung open and the procession started. There was no demonstration—such is not the custom—but as the King and Queen passed slowly along the men spectators bowed, while the women curtsied low as they passed. turning to right and left, acknowledging the greetings with bows.

SCHWAB STARTS HOME.

Steel Man Completes His Negotiations with British War Office.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 11.—Having concluded secret but undoubtedly fruitful negotiations with the British War Office, Charles M. Schwab left England today aboard the Adriatic.

The vessel also had on board Mr. and Mrs. John R. Drexel, Mr. and Mrs. David Jayne Hill, Mr. and Mrs. Horace Binney, Mr. and Mrs. W Rathbone Bacon, Col. and Mrs. Max Fleischmann, Mrs. Claude Grahame-White, whose husband has a commission in the Royal Flying Corps and who is making a hurried visit to her parents in New York; Mark Fenhouse, John H. Hannan, Mr. and Mrs. John Magee, Mr. and Mrs. C A. Munn and children, E. Alexander Powell, and Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius Tiers.

AMERICANS FEAR ZEPPELINS.

Seek Inconspicuous Hotels in London—Shun North Sea Trips.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 11.—Fear of a Zeppelin invasion appears to be stronger among Americans, just arriving here, than among Londoners themselves. E. J. Price of New York, who is stopping at the Ritz, said he went to that hotel instead of to one on the Thames embankment, at which he usually stops, because he had been informed that danger from aerial bombs was greater in the vicinity of the river than on Piccadilly.

Hotels near palaces and Government buildings are faring far worse nowadays than those in less conspicuous parts of the city.

Americans are also avoiding the North Sea. Two men, whose business calls them to Norway, have decided to travel thither through France, Switzerland, and Germany rather than run the gauntlet of British and German mines.

COMPLAINS OF ESPIONAGE.

American in London Appeals to Our Embassy for Protection.

LONDON, Nov. 11.—John William Southack of New York City complained today to the American Embassy of systematic espionage by the British Secret Service, since his arrival in London from Brussels on Saturday.

Southack bears a striking physical resemblance to Carl Hans Lody, who was executed as a German spy. He lives at the hotel where the German stayed and believes that this was responsible for his trouble.

Southack says that when he was in Brussels he was threatened with arrest by the Germans, who examined him very closely, but his innocence was established through the intervention of the American Minister to Belgium, Brand Whitlock. Southack has an American passport and in addition he has papers written in German by American Consuls in Germany. He thinks that the possession of these documents strengthened British suspicion of him. Southack said that he was born in New York and was the grandson of an English Bishop.

DOUBT AN EMBARGO ON BELGIAN RELIEF

Secretary Bryan and Count von Bernstorff Fail to Verify Reports of German Threat.

PLAN TO ENCOURAGE WORK

Rockefeller Foundation Considers Proposal to Get Refugees to Return by Financing Their Needs.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—In the absence of information on the subject the State Department is inclined to discredit the reports from Brussels that the German military Governor of Belgium has served notice that unless the Belgian people resume their ordinary occupations the distribution of relief supplies by charitable organizations would be forbidden. Secretary Bryan indicated today that the forwarding of relief supplies from the United States to Belgium would be continued as usual.

Count von Bernstorff, the German Ambassador, who returned to Washington from New York today, called on Secretary Bryan and told him that no information concerning the reported action of the German Governor of Belgium had been received at the embassy. The Ambassador seemed to be of the opinion that there was no truth in the report. One view held at the State Department was that if any such policy had been announced authoritatively the department would have heard of it through diplomatic sources or the American Belgian Relief Committee in London.

Walter Hines Page, the American Ambassador in London, has suggested to the State Department that a Central Relief Committee should be formed in the United States for forwarding and distributing relief supplies intended for the distressed people in Belgium. Secretary Bryan is giving consideration to the suggestion.

Officials at the Belgian Legation here do not believe Germany is planning to stop the food supplies. They pointed out that Germany herself was sending food. The Belgian Minister, Mr. Havenith, is in New York arranging for the sailing of five supply ships being outfitted for Belgians by the various relief committees in this country. Work is under way in Minneapolis to provide an entire cargo of flour from that city.

The subject of enforced labor in Belgium was discussed by officials here with the managers of the Rockefeller Foundation Relief Expedition, and one plan contemplated selection of agents in each district, not only to indicate precisely the cases where charity was really necessary, but also to get in touch with those who fled to Holland, France, or England and induce them to return to work, the Foundation to supply such refugees with provisions and clothing, farm and shop tools, horses, and other livestock, but all conditional upon their again becoming producers.

BARS AMERICAN EVIDENCE.

But Judge Grants Further Adjournment in Marconi Shares Case.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 11.—The High Court of Justice ruled today that no evidence from New York could be admitted in the Marconi shares case, now before the court.

Yesterday there was an unexpected development. When the case was adjourned last week there were many references to blackmail, which arose out of alleged pressure on the part of Samuel Segar, who claims $43,000 from Godfrey Isaacs, Managing Director of the Marconi Wireless Telegraph Company, which sum he says, represents losses suffered in the purchase of shares in the English and American Marconi companies. Mr. Segar says Mr. Isaacs agreed verbally to recoup him for his loss.

The action stood adjourned until yesterday for the final stages of counsels' speeches and the court's judgment. When the case was called, however, Leslie Scott startled the court by asking that the trial be reopened in order that he might produce evidence on suggestions of blackmail against Mr. Segar and Sir Thomas H. D. Berridge, his lawyer. The case was adjourned until today, when Mr. Segar's counsel renewed his application for the reopening of the trial for the purpose of calling rebutting evidence in regard to the suggestion of blackmail made on behalf of Mr. Isaacs.

Mr. Isaacs's counsel strongly protested, remarking that, as it would be embarking upon an entirely new case, it would be a hardship upon the Marconi company's Managing Director. The court, however, eventually agreed to an adjournment of the case until tomorrow week, the Judge saying that he declined to allow Mr. Isaacs to be harassed longer than that by the action hanging over his head. He added that he agreed to the suggestion only with the utmost reluctance.

The plaintiff's counsel in pressing for a longer adjournment, indicated that he required time to obtain additional evidence from New York. Justice Ballhache replied that as the particular American evidence which counsel required to introduce had not been given in the earlier proceedings he refused to allow it to be introduced now. No evidence which might be brought from New York in the interval between now and Nov. 19 would be listened to.

The particular testimony which the plaintiff's counsel was endeavoring to bring in refers to the market prices of American Marconi shares in New York just prior to the time when Mr. Isaacs visited America for the purpose of placing shares there.

Eventually Mr. Segar was allowed by the court to introduce new evidence relating to questions of alleged instigation of misrepresentation and breach of duty on the part of Mr. Isaacs and in rebuttal of the allegation of blackmail.

GERMAN SOCIALISTS AT ODDS OVER WAR

Liebknecht and Others Issue a Manifesto Disagreeing With Those Who Favor It.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 11.—The Swiss Socialist paper Volksrecht publishes the following statement, signed by Karl Liebknecht, Rosa Luxemburg, Franz Mehring, and Clara Zetkin.

"In the Socialist press of the neutral countries of Sweden, Italy, and Switzerland Comrades Dr. Südekum and Richard Fischer have attempted to portray the attitude of the German Social Democrats toward the present war in the light of their own ideas. We feel ourselves forced by this to explain in the same place that we, and certainly many other German Social Democrats, look on the war, its causes and its character, as well as on the rôle of Social Democrats at the present time, from a standpoint which in no way corresponds to that of Dr. Südekum and Herr Fischer. At the present time the state of martial law makes it impossible for us to give public expression to our views."

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

COPENHAGEN, Nov. 11, (Dispatch to The London Daily News.)—It is announced here that the Socialist Peace Congress, which meets Dec. 6, will discuss peace overtures. Representatives of all the neutral countries have been invited.

STILL AWAITING NEWS OF NORTH CAROLINA

Navy Department Cannot Confirm Norfolk Rumor That the Cruiser Is Safe.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—Up to a late hour tonight the Navy Department had not heard from the armored cruiser North Carolina, which last reported from Beirut, Turkey, on Nov. 2.

The failure to get in communication with the warship has increased the department's worry, which began yesterday when a rumor was in circulation that the North Carolina had been blown up at Beirut.

It is now nine days since the Navy Department has had any news of the North Carolina.

NEW AIRSHIP BOMBS KILL 4 VICTIMS BY SHOCK

French Aviator Says the Explosion Flattens Everything in its Way.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Thursday, Nov. 12.—The Daily Mail's Paris correspondent reports an interview with a French airman on the new French air bomb.

"I have used both the dynamite bomb and the new bombs," said the aviator. "The two are very similar in size and weight, but the effect as seen from above is very different.

"When a dynamite bomb falls upon a body of men you can see the bodies leap up in air. It is like a small volcano in action. When the new bomb bursts it simply lays everything out flat within the area of its explosion. It seems to exert the whole of its force in waves like the ripples made when a large stone is thrown into a pond. The men go down like ninepins; buildings collapse like houses of playing cards; guns are turned over as if by some unseen hand.

"The explosion raises practically no dust or smoke. Even the earth disturbed by the case of the bomb striking the ground is instantly flattened out by the same extraordinary waves of force. Extreme cold is produced at the moment of the explosion. It is so intense that I felt it myself when I dropped my first bomb at a height of about 800 feet.

"I was taking great chances in flying so low, but I wished to see the effect of the bomb. It fell on a section of Germans bivouacking in a field. I estimate that at least thirty men were killed within the area of the explosion. Death from these bombs comes instantly from intense cold and concussion."

DROPS BOMB NEAR POINCARE

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

NORTH OF FRANCE, Nov. 14, (Dispatch to The London Times.)—The Germans appear to be intent on doing personal injury to the French President.

After returning with M. Millerand from Dunkirk and Furnes, President Poincaré visited the military hospital at St. Pol. A German airman at once flew over the town and dropped a bomb on the Rue des Procureurs.

A number of aeroplanes, however, chased the intruder well away toward the German lines.

WOMEN HELPING ENGLAND.

Miss Pankhurst Cites War as Instance of Injustice to Suffragettes.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Nov. 11.—Citing the European war as "an instance of the danger and injustice of depriving women of the ballot," Miss Christabel Pankhurst, the English militant suffragette, aroused the closing session of the Southern State Suffrage Conference to an enthusiastic demonstration here tonight.

"But notwithstanding the suffragettes' differences with the men's Government in England," said the speaker, "the women now are concentrating their efforts to helping their country in its time of trial and peril."

At its closing business session earlier in the day the conference elected Miss Kate M. Gordon of New Orleans President, and Miss Laura Clay of Kentucky Vice President at large. Honorary Vice Presidents elected were Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, Miss Mary Johnston, and Mrs. Helen Gardner.

TALES OF THE TRENCHES.

French Officer Writes of Baths and Barber Shop, Cafe and Concert Hall.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov. 11, (Dispatch to The London Standard.)—The French have apparently learned to outdo the enemy in the art of trench making. An officer writes that not only have his men fitted up a cooking range in their trenches, but have half a dozen bathrooms properly tiled, screened off, fitted with hot and cold water and showers. Better still, a regular system of drainage is to be installed.

Next to the baths, he says, is a shaving saloon, and the soldiers are now at work on a café and concert hall. All these are underground, warmed and lighted, and somewhat less than half a mile from the German lines.

Jesus Carranza with a strong command has departed for the Isthmus of Tehauntepec.

LAREDO, Nov. 11.—Advices here tonight from Mexico City say a joint manifesto was issued there today stating that if Villa failed to retire from the command of the D'vision of the North all Generals would fight against him.

The manifesto is signed jointly by Gens. Obregon, Hay, Lucio Blanco, Villareal, and others.

WARNS OF INTERVENTION.

Obregon Tells Villa to Resign to Prevent Immediate Hostilities.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 11.—Gen. Obregon today sent a message to Gen. Villa warning him that failure to resign would cause the breaking out of immediate hostilities on a large scale. Gen. Obregon also sent a dispatch to each of Gen. Villa's division commanders, saying:

"Unless you can persuade Gen. Villa to cease his southward advance, anarchy and possibly intervention will ensue."

Later Gen. Obregon said he would be ready to fight tomorrow if Gen. Villa did not answer his message.

Minister of War Pesquiera declared tonight that if a struggle comes it will not be between Gen. Villa and Gen. Carranza, but between Gen. Villa and the entire country. Gen. Gonzales has sent a message expressing the same sentiment to Gen. Eulalio Gutierrez, recently chosen Provisional President by the Aguascalientes peace convention.

PUTS VERA CRUZ IN DOUBT.

Civil War Greatly Complicates Washington's Problem.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—A critical turn to the situation in Mexico, indicating a resumption of civil war in that country, brought about a long conference at the White House tonight between President Wilson and Secretary Bryan at which, among other things, the advisability of withdrawing the United States forces from Vera Cruz was discussed. No decision was reached on the question of withdrawal. It was decided to await further advices from Mexico.

A strong sentiment exists among certain influential members of the Administration in favor of the evacuation of Vera Cruz. Whether President Wilson shares this sentiment is not known. While Gen. Carranza has formally furnished some of the guarantees asked by the United States, he has ignored others that were requested. It is probable that efforts are being made to have him give the additional guarantees, and pending advices as to his attitude decision as to whether the American troops shall be withdrawn from Mexico will be deferred.

The Government is far from satisfied with Carranza's response to its request for guarantees. One of the problems confronting the Administration in its consideration of the question of the evacuation is that the civil war should be continued with Carranza at the head of affairs at Mexico City and Gen. Gutierrez claiming to be the legitimate Provisional President of the republic, it will be practically impossible to determine what authority should take over the control of affairs at Vera Cruz when the American troops were withdrawn. Something in the neighborhood of $2,000,000 has been collected by the United States military authorities at Vera Cruz for customs duties and local taxes, and it is known that this Government hesitates to surrender this money until it is satisfied that it will go into the Mexican Treasury. In these circumstances the dispute as to what faction is in authority in Mexico serves to complicate the situation.

As conditions upon which the United States would withdraw from Vera Cruz this Government asked Carranza to give assurances that the Mexican Government would not reimpose the customs duties and other taxes that had been collected at Vera Cruz during the occupation of the port by the American forces since April 21 last. Carranza, in one of the decrees issued, agreed to this condition. He was asked, also, to furnish guarantees that Mexican citizens who were employed by the American authorities at Vera Cruz would not be punished. Another decree gives this promise desired by the United States.

Carranza failed, however, to issue decrees furnishing guarantees for the protection of all Mexicans and aliens who had taken refuge in Vera Cruz under American protection. On that account the action taken by Carranza is unsatisfactory to this Government. The Government was particularly solicitous in regard to the safety of the priests and nuns of alien citizenship who took refuge in Vera Cruz and desire to remain in Mexico. Carranza's failure to include aliens in his promises of amnesty is regarded here as particularly significant.

Unofficial assurances have been given by Gen. Gutierrez that when he assumed the provisional Presidency of Mexico he would furnish the guarantees asked for by the United States. But the reported resumption of hostilities has created a chaotic situation, and this Government is unable to determine whether assurances given either by Carransa or the convention faction would be carried out.

The Aguascalientes Convention in notifying Carranza that he must resign from office by 6 o'clock last evening informed him that if he did not comply with the convention's demand force would be used to assert the authority of the convention.

CONFIDENT OF EVACUATION.

Carranza Reports That Funston Has So Informed His General.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 11.—El Liberal has just got out an extra containing a telegram from Gen. Carranza to the effect that Gen. Funston has informed Gen. Candido Aguilar of Washington's decision to evacuate Vera Cruz.

GUTIERREZ IS FIRM, TOO.

Calls on Carranza to Resign—Zapata Attacks Increase.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 11.—In a last effort to maintain peace, Gen. Venustiano Carranza and Gen. Eulalio Gutierrez, who recently was elected Provisional President of Mexico by the Aguascalientes Peace Convention, exchanged views by telegraph last night. The full text of the messages was made public today.

Gen. Gutierrez informed Gen. Carranza that he will hold power indefinitely, disregarding the stipulation limiting his tenure of office to twenty days, unless the convention orders otherwise. He calls on Gen. Carranza to resign in the interest of unity and peace, saying that Gen. Villa will deliver over his power upon being informed of Gen. Carranza's resignation.

Gen. Carranza in his reply says that he does not recognize the validity of Gen. Gutierrez's election, because the convention was not empowered to name a President. He says he never will resign until he is assured that he can turn over the power to some stable Government. He warns Gen. Gutierrez that the latter is being used as the tool of Gen. Villa, and asks Gen. Gutierrez to meet him at a place to be agreed on to discuss the question.

The attacks being made by followers of Zapata on the outskirts of the city are growing in intensity, but the Constitutionalist forces are repulsing each attack.

AUSTRIANS WITH GUNS HURRY FROM BELGIUM

To Take Part in Defense of Cracow—Three "Jack Johnsons" Smashed by British Shells.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 11.—Nearly 1,000 Austrian artillerymen with eight twelve-inch guns passed through Liége yesterday for Cracow, having been withdrawn from the Belgian battlefield to strengthen the endeavor to stem the Russian avalanche. Four thousand Germans arrived yesterday, having been severely wounded in the fighting in Flanders, while three 16½-inch guns which had been smashed by British artillery fire are in town on the way to Germany for repairs.

Preparations for the swift transport of troops from the west are being proceeded with. The road from Alost to Brussels is marked with red poles, and on the road from Brussels to Liége all the trees are whitewashed, the quickest route to Germany being thus plainly indicated.

GIFTS TO GERMAN PRISONERS.

Miss Morgan Cables for Information About Camps in England.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 11.—Miss Anne Morgan has cabled Mrs. Lewis Harcourt asking for information about the German concentration camps in England in order that the pro-German people of America can send gifts and supplies to them.

ROCKEFELLER FUND INVESTIGATORS SAIL

Expect to be in Holland in Time to Distribute Food Cargo Shipped Last Week.

BELGIAN FUND GAINS $16,905

Committee Replies to Page Letter—Tells How to Send Funds and Supplies.

The commission appointed by the Rockefeller Foundation to go to Europe to investigate conditions among noncombatants sailed for England on the Red Star liner Lapland yesterday. The members of the commission are Dr. Wickliffe Rose of Washington, a member of the International Health Commission; Ernest P. Bicknell, National Director of the American Red Cross, and Henry James, Jr., of the Rockefeller Institute. Collin Hearle, who has been doing Red Cross work in China and who will act as secretary of the Commission, also went on the Lapland.

Dr. Rose said the commission would go first to London, then to Rotterdam. The permanent base of the foundation will be established in Holland. They expect to be in Rotterdam in time to direct the distribution of the $275,000 cargo of food shipped by the foundation on the Massapequa last week.

The Belgian Relief Committee issued a statement yesterday in reply to the letter from Ambassador Page to Norman Hapgood of the Committee of Mercy, published in THE TIMES of yesterday. In that letter Mr. Page suggested that better results in Belgian relief would probably be accomplished if there was a central committee in this country to handle the money and supplies. In the reply the Belgian Relief Committee points out that its work and that of the Rockefeller Foundation are already co-ordinated so far as Belgian relief is concerned. The statement says that money can best be given by sending it direct to the Belgian Relief Committee, 10 Bridge Street, New York City, because the concentration of money contributions in the hands of the New York committee will avoid competition in the purchase of supplies and the consequent increase in prices.

As to gifts of food, the committee say they may be made thus:

By shipping any of the following articles, charges prepaid, preferably in carload lots: Wheat, flour, rice, coffee, (one-fourth chicory,) peas, beans, canned goods, cured or salted meats. Perishable goods, such as potatoes, apples, or other fresh fruits cannot be accepted. All shipments should be consigned to the Belgian Relief Committee, Bush Terminal, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Belgian Fund Gifts $16,905.

Distribution in Belgium, it says, will be made by the American Committee in London, of which Ambassador Page is Chairman.

Contributions to the Belgian Fund yesterday totaled $16,905, which brought the fund to $437,349.35. Contributions should be sent to J. P. Morgan & Co., 23 Wall Street, or the Belgian Relief Committee, 8 and 10 Bridge Street. Yesterday's subscribers, cents omitted, were:

The Committee of the British War Relief Fund of 200 Fifth Avenue has shipped to Europe in ten days more than 2,000 pairs of socks, 700 shirts, 1,000 suits of underwear, 1,600 packages of plug tobacco, 7,000 packages of cigarettes, a large consignment of hospital supplies and drugs, and 300 mufflers. Consignments are now being forwarded to the British Committee in London every week. All money donated to this committee is used in the purchase of hospital supplies and garments. All of the garments conform to the British War Office regulations.

A conference of Jewish organizations in New York, including unions, lodges, synagogues, mutual benefit societies, and other organizations, for the purpose of organizing for the relief of destitute Jews in the war zones of Europe, will be held at the Hebrew Technical School for Girls, Second Avenue and Fifteenth Street, next Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock. The conference is called under the joint auspices of the Kehilla, of which Dr. J. L. Magnes is the Chairman, and of the American Jewish Relief Committee.

ENGLAND MODIFIES RULING ON COPPER

Will Not Interfere with a Normal Supply of Metal Going to Neutrals.

BUT WANTS GUARANTEES

American Shippers Still Dissatisfied—Insist on Right to Send "Order" Consignments.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—What was construed at the State Department as a further modification of the British Government's attitude toward exports of copper from the United States to European countries was communicated to the department today by the British Embassy. A paraphrase of the British note on the subject was given out as follows:

"A supply of copper sufficient for normal consumption in neutral countries will not be interfered with, provided adequate guarantees are given that the copper will not be trans-shipped to enemy countries."

This notice does not appear to make any change, however, in the policy of Great Britain announced yesterday, with particular reference to shipments of copper to Italy. The Italian Government had assured Great Britain that copper consigned to persons in Italy will not be permitted to leave the country for Germany, but had not agreed to stop copper in transit or consigned "to order."

Senator Hughes of New Jersey laid before the State Department today a protest from several big copper companies of his State against the attitude of Great Britain on the shipments of copper to neutral countries.

The petition sets forth that Great Britain has no right to interfere with cargoes between neutral countries, and that restrictions such as Great Britain has placed on commerce will seriously injure the copper industry of the United States.

Ambassador Page has reported from London that Great Britain for the present is unwilling to modify the embargo on the exportation of wool from Australia. Wool dealers, however, are hoping, through the State Department, to continue negotiations so as to enable them to participate in the auction sales soon to be held in Australia.

The British Government is understood to have replied to Ambassador Page that for the present the mother country would use all the wool raised in Australia, though when it became apparent that there would be a surplus, some arrangement might be made whereby American firms could obtain part of the product. The only condition under which they could get any wool, however, would be with guarantees that the product be used only in manufacturing goods contracted for by Great Britain.

COPPER MEN NOT SATISFIED.

Say the British Ruling Does Not Give Them Relief.

The announcement by the British Ambassador that copper consigned to Italy for Italian use will not be subject to seizure, but copper consigned to a belligerent country or "to order" would be suspect, does not remove the objections of the copper interests that are protesting over the action of Great Britain in interfering with shipments to neutral countries.

Their contention is that the United States, as a neutral country, is free to make shipments to another neutral country, and that Great Britain has no justification for holding up such shipments on the ground that they will be passed along to Germany or Austria. Great Britain's proper recourse, they maintain, is to Italy, if American copper received in Italy is being exported from Italy to belligerent nations.

They are extremely skeptical of any shipments having been consigned to Germany at any time, as such a course would be inviting trouble if there were no other reasons against it. The effect of the new ruling, it was said yesterday, was to leave shipments made by American producers to their own order abroad subject to interference as heretofore, and this would prevent their carrying on their business according to custom.

They had always made a practice, it was explained, of carrying large stocks of copper in the principal European cities from which to fill orders promptly. The United Metals Selling Company, for instance, was said to have had 16,000,000 pounds of copper stored in various parts of Europe when the war began.

"From these stores," said one of those interested yesterday, "we fill the orders as they arise. We can't afford to hunt up the individual purchaser of a few tons of copper before we make a shipment, taking a month or six weeks for it to get to him. We ship the copper to our own order in anticipation of orders we will receive in the normal course of trade."

A different view was expressed by Phelps, Dodge & Co., who are not among the protestants. James McLean, who has general charge of the export business, said they had had no trouble over shipments at any time, except that one of only twenty-five tons was held up and subsequently released.

"Under the new ruling and under that preceding as well," said Mr. McLean, "I can see no reason why any American producers should have any trouble over shipments to neutral countries. All that is necessary is to let the name of the purchaser be known, and if he is a bona fide consumer no question is raised."

Phelps, Dodge & Co., however, Mr. McLean said, never had followed the practice of shipping to their own order, so that the rulings as to such shipments would not apply to that firm as

PROF. CRET NOT AT FRONT.

Report That He Was Killed in Action Believed to be a Mistake.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 11.—The possibility that the name of Prof. Paul Cret, the designer of the Pan-American Union Building at Washington and Professor of Agricultural Design at the University, has been confused with that of a relative of the same name, who was recently wounded in the war, is indicated by a letter received from Mrs. Cret two days ago by Mrs. Edward Robbins, wife of the secretary of the Board of Trustees of the University of Pennsylvania. Mrs. Cret's letter is dated Oct. 24, and is sent from Lyons, where she is aiding in the care of wounded soldiers. The letter reads, in part:

"We don't know how long this dreadful calamity will last; meanwhile we will do our duty in the best way possible. I am lucky enough to be able to devote a good deal of my time to the wounded soldiers taken care of at the hospitals here.

"One of my husband's cousins is among them, and so far he is the only member of our family who was wounded. I wish that you will never suffer such anguish, but the love of France seems to me worth it."

Mrs. Robbins suggests that Prof. Cret's wounded relative might have died since the writing of this letter. So far as was known here, Prof. Cret had not yet gone to the front, although he was enlisted in the French Army. The report of his death is believed by his friends here to have been a mistake.

One Million Packs Fine Playing Cards at 1-2 Price on Sale in UNITED CIGAR STORES

The American Bank Note Co. had on hand 1,086,336 packs of playing cards when it decided to go out of that branch of engraving and printing.

We made a "quick asset" of the lot by taking every pack at a lump sum which allows us to cut in half the prices at which these cards sell everywhere.

Only the United Cigar Stores could have undertaken such a sale—a market accessible only through hundreds of stores.

These cards are the American Bank Note Co.'s choicest productions.

The sale starts to-day in all United Cigar Stores in Greater New York, (including Suburban cities) and New Jersey.

A MOUNTAIN OF PLAYING CARDS

On display in the "cowcatcher" of the Flatiron Building, (Broadway, Fifth Avenue and 23rd Street) a full assortment of all grades.

A sight worth seeing.

CLUBS, SOCIETIES, LODGES, ETC.

Participate in this sale. Never again in all probability will high grade cards be sold at such prices.

Buy for future wants.

MAIL ORDERS

Mail orders filled. Orders for two dozen packs or more sent postage or express prepaid. Smaller orders express collect. Money must accompany orders. Address UNITED CIGAR STORES CO., (Mail Order Service) Flatiron Bldg., New York City.

THE STORY IN A NUTSHELL

Largely the lot we bought was of the seven popular sizes and styles described below in the American Bank Note Co.'s Price List issued to dealers, January 1st, 1914.

As noted we have crossed off the prices in that list and made our own.

Standard 25c. cards at 2 Packs for 25c.

No. 616—Standard size; 48 cards; highly enameled stock. Special steel engraved design. Smooth or Fabric Finish ~~35c~~ 2 packs for 25c

In the clubs and by card experts Grade Nos. 251, 414, 616 and 636 are known by those numbers. These cards are favored on account of their durability and wonderful "slip." The American Bank Note Co., had a business of millions of packs in these grades.

Other Styles, Regularly 35c. and 50c., at Half Price

Of many styles of Bridge and Pinochle cards included in this sale we have lots of less than 10,000 packs and cannot therefore promise them, except to early purchasers.

These cards have always sold at 50 and 35 cents a pack.

It will pay to get these cards while they last.

All the fine art in playing cards that the world calls best.

Paintings in miniature by famed artists, other backs by the greatest designers—gold edges—a feast of pictorial and decorative workmanship.

Every man or woman who uses playing cards should take advantage of this once-in-a-century deal.

Every pack guaranteed. Money back if not satisfactory.

JUSTICE BENEDICT REBUKES CROPSEY

Prosecutor's Attack on Jurists as Unfair Is Called False and Malicious.

"SLANDERING" THE BENCH

Delay in Grout Case "Essence of Injustice"—Matter Sent Back to County Court.

Justice Russell Benedict, in the Supreme Court in Brooklyn, yesterday ordered the two indictments against Edward M. Grout, who was President of the Union Bank at the time of its failure, stricken from the calendar of the Supreme Court and sent back to the County Court for disposition. After giving his decision Justice Benedict read a memorandum in which he rebuked District Attorney James C. Cropsey for a criticism of the Supreme Court and its Justices. At the annual dinner of the Fulton Street Board of Trade on Oct. 22 the District Attorney said that for Mr. Grout's trial he was "trying to get a Judge who is not handpicked and one who is not a bosom or rather lap friend of the man who is to be tried, and a Judge who would at least give the people a fair trial."

Mr. Cropsey, who was in court, appeared to be very uncomfortable while Justice Benedict admonished him. The courtroom was crowded, and at the end of the Justice's remarks there was a ripple of applause that was silenced by the Justice.

Stephen C. Baldwin made an application on Tuesday to have one indictment against Mr. Grout dismissed, and a second indictment dismissed or placed on the calendar for trial immediately. Justice Benedict announced he would give a decision yesterday. The first indictment charged Mr. Grout with having made a false report to the State Banking Department in regard to the assets of the Union Bank. The other charged him with having committed perjury in swearing to the statement.

Cites Cropsey's Speech.

Justice Benedict denied both these motions, and then read a memorandum to "Mr. District Attorney," in which he said:

"I hold in my hand copies of two tracts of some remarks purporting to have been made by you on Oct. 22, 1914, at a public function in this borough at which you were a guest. Ordinarily the Justices of the court suffer to pass in silence popular criticism of the official acts, relying on the American spirit of fairness to recognise and resent unjustifiable attacks upon their courts, and to appreciate the fact that the Justices are honestly striving to the utmost of their ability to serve the people who have elevated them to the high office which they occupy.

"But the Justices of this court are at least entitled to the same measure of protection against false and malicious aspersions upon their integrity as the law affords to any other citizens. Is it too much to expect that the members of the bar will refrain from slandering the court Can the court retain either the respect of the people or its own self-respect if it permit willfully false statements as to the integrity of its members to pass unnoticed?

"You, Sir, the holder of the most responsible office outside of the court itself, connected with the administration of criminal law in this county and a prominent member of the bar of this court, have seen fit to make a public attack upon the judicial integrity of every member of this court in this district. The attack was not made under the excitement of a trial, for which condition allowance is always to be made. It manifests no motive more worthy than that which would arise from demagogic intemperance. As a member of this court, I feel reluctantly compelled to take notice of your attack upon the court and to rebuke you openly for your speech, for which, I regret to say, no apology or retraction has been made.

"I venture to say that you know as well as I do that there is not one member of this court who would favor this defendant as against the State or favor the State as against this defendant upon this trial.

"Essence of Injustice."

"If the defendant be in fact guilty, you are greatly to be blamed for not having brought him to the bar of justice within the three years which have almost expired since you entered upon your office. If he be innocent, you are using the powers of your great office oppressively in keeping him under indictments, which you might have long since brought, but which you have not seen fit to bring, to trial. In either case it is of the essence of injustice to delay his trial.

"The Appellate Division has appointed many terms of this court for the trial of criminal causes during the past three years since the finding of the first indictment and during the year which has almost elapsed since the finding of the second, at any one of which you were at liberty to move the trial of this defendant. Instead, however, you have moved the trial of many ball cases of minor importance which should have been disposed of in the County Court of this county.

"While we know that a trial fair and impartial to both the people and to this defendant can be had in our Supreme Court, yet, as you have asserted to the contrary, it will be more proper to try these indictments in another court, and if the defendant be there acquitted, you will not be able to assert that such acquittal was due to any influence such as you have falsely charged may be exerted in the Supreme Court."

When Justice Benedict had finished, Mr. Cropsey arose and said:

"Your Honor probably does not know that this case was transferred from the County Court over the motion of the District Attorney."

"I do not care to hear you further," said Justice Benedict. "You had a very lengthy hearing yesterday."

Mr. Cropsey would make no statement in reply to Justice Benedict.

CONVICT IN SULLIVAN INQUIRY.

New Witness to Tell About ex-Banker's Treatment.

District Attorney Cropsey, who is conducting the investigation before the Kings County Grand Jury of the conditions at Sing Sing Prison relating to the life there of David A. Sullivan, has decided to accept the offer of John Conway, a convict in Auburn Prison, transferred from Sing Sing, to testify. He is to be sent back to Sing Sing for convenience.

George Deeley, Head Keeper of Sing Sing, was a witness before the Grand Jury yesterday. He is said to be the man whom Sullivan sent to find out what was going on in the room where Assistant District Attorney Goldstein was trying to interview Sullivan and Warden McCormick.

The District Attorney wanted also to question Deeley about the source of the telephone calls sent to Mrs. Sullivan at her home in Brooklyn and to Miss Louise D. Burkhardt, former confidential secretary to Sullivan, at her residence in Yonkers, an hour after Assistant District Attorney Goldstein arrived at the jail. Mr. Cropsey is working on the theory that these calls served as a warning so that the two women could elude process servers. Miss Burkhardt testified again, and also is to appear again today.

Thomas J. Sharkey Arrested.

Thomas J. Sharkey, the ex-pugilist, was arrested yesterday on the complaint of Isaac and Max Roth, contractors, who accused him of inducing them to fit up a saloon at 723 Seventh Avenue at a cost of $880 by saying he had already spent $10,000 on the place. In supplementary proceedings Sharkey testified that he did not own the property He furnished $500 bail.

HARTMAN TO ACCUSE ANOTHER OF FRAUDS

Counsel Says He Will Name Man Who Stole Fortune of Mrs. Mackenzie.

PRISONER FAILS TO GET BAIL

Record of His Stock and Bond Transactions to be Produced bythe Prosecution.

Failing in his efforts to obtain a $25,000 bail bond, Richard J. Hartman, the former President of Tyson & Co., who was charged by Mrs. Charlotte L. Mackenzie with having stolen her fortune of nearly $700,000, remained in a cell in the Tombs yesterday and last night. Harford T. Marshall of 34 Nassau Street, Hartman's attorney, sought to obtain bail for his client from several surety companies, but was unsuccessful, as were several of Hartman's friends also.

Mr. Marshall said that he saw no hope at present for the prisoner's release on bail. The lawyer seemed certain, however, that Hartman would be released by the first jury that heard his case. He said he would seek to have his client tried at the earliest possible time.

"Hartman is not guilty of the larceny charged by Mrs. Mackenzie," Mr. Marshall said. "He never had the power of attorney for her and he never hypothecated a single share of stock. He had some of her stock years ago, but returned it to her intact. As long as he had it it was with her full consent. If the lady has suffered any loss some one other than Hartman is responsible and should be made to take the consequences.

"It is perfectly true that Mrs. Mackenzie invested some of her money in the Dustroy Company, with which Hartman was connected, but she did so with full knowledge of what she was doing and of her own free will. She simply believed in the success of the company, as Hartman did, and saw fit to buy stock in it. Hartman was not to blame if the prospects for the company were not realized.

Denies Hartman Misrepresented.

"Regarding the two diamond rings that Mrs. Mackenzie intimated Hartman took, I can say that Hartman never heard of them until yesterday. He never had a key to Mrs. Mackenzie's safety deposit box and never had any of her jewelry. Also I have heard it said that Hartman was introduced to Mrs. Mackenzie in London as 'Judge Hartman' and represented himself as an English Justice of the Peace. This is untrue. Hartman never was introduced to Mrs. Mackenzie as a Judge and he did not try to conceal his identity from her. He was Mrs. Mackenzie's friend and nothing more, and when nothing was done I concluded that there was no basis of action. Especially was I reassured when at about that time I learned that Mrs. Mackenzie had taken her case to a law firm in the city and had been told that she had no valid complaint. Later her case was accepted by the firm that turned it over to the District Attorney's office."

The defense of Hartman, as indicated in what his counsel says, will be that Mrs. Mackenzie was robbed by some one other than Hartman. An effort will be made to show that another man, whose name has not been made public in the case, really held the power of attorney for Mrs. Mackenzie and not he, not Hartman, used her stock for his own advantage and lost it in his own ventures. Mr. Marshall said that he could name this man and would do so.

Assistant District Attorney Walter S. Deuel, who has had charge of the Hartman case, appeared to feel as certain of Hartman's ultimate conviction as Mr. Marshall did of his acquittal.

"I believe," said Mr. Deuel, "that we could convict Hartman, even if Mrs. Mackenzie did not testify against him. We have strong evidence in the indisputable record of his stock and bond transactions."

It became known that the witnesses who testified before the Grand Jury that indicted Hartman were Mrs. Mackenzie, Guthrie B. Plante of the law firm of Morris & Plante, to whom Mrs. Mackenzie went before her case was given to the District Attorney, and William S. McGuire. It was said that Mr. McGuire was counsel for Hartman some time ago. This was denied by Mr. Marshall, who said that Mr. McGuire had been Mrs. Mackenzie's counsel, but never Hartman's.

Data on Stock Deals.

Mr. McGuire told Assistant District Attorney Deuel, it was understood, that he had sold some stock for Hartman which he believed at the time to be Hartman's by every legal right. He was brought into the case, it was said, when Morris & Plante began investigating Hartman's transactions. His purpose before the Grand Jury, according to report, was merely to furnish data on stock deals Hartman had conducted through him.

Mrs. Mackenzie kept herself hidden all day, efforts to find her being fruitless. It was said by those who knew her that she wished to avoid publicity as much as possible. The extent of her financial ruin was more appreciated when it became known that she had been forced to sell her country home at Glen Spey, Sullivan County, N. Y., her days of prosperity, it was said, she spent much of her time on this country place, and her annual expenditures were $40,000 a year. A large part of this was spent in traveling.

Hartman's case will come up for pleading in the Court of General Sessions on Tuesday. At that time Mr. Marshall will ask for an inspection of the Grand Jury minutes upon which Hartman was indicted.

HARTMAN'S SUITS IN JERSEY.

Foreclosure on Home and Other Judgments Against Him.

Special to The New York Times.

HACKENSACK, N. J., Nov. 11.—Richard J. Hartman, whose residence is at Tenafly, five miles from here, has had troubles in this vicinity as well as in New York. He has been a defendant in civil courts of this county, and judgments and dispossess orders have been served on him by Sheriff Robert N. Heath. Two years ago he purchased the Van Antwerp residence in Maple Avenue, Tenafly, for about $25,000, of which he paid $10,000 in cash, giving a mortgage of $15,000. The New York Life Insurance Company foreclosed the mortgage and sold the property on Sept. 9 last. An order directing Hartman to vacate thte premises was issued at the time by the Court of Chancery, but to date he has not obeyed the order.

In the April term of the Circuit Court, Edward F. Craigin, a New York stockbroker, obtained a judgment against Hartman for $3,438 on a loan. An execution against Hartman's furniture was obtained. His wife blocked the execution by filing a claim to the property, the ownership of which will be decided in the courts this week. Several suits have been filed against Hartman by grocers, butchers and other tradesmen.

Hartman's limousine and two touring cars have disappeared, and his residence is now without a telephone.

CALLS ITALY UNFAIR TO AMERICAN SHIPS

P. A. S. Franklin Protests to Secretary Bryan Against Immigration Rules.

HEAVY PENALTIES IMPOSED

Bond of $4,000 and of $20 Each for Steerage Passengers Required for License.

P. A. S. Franklin, Vice President and General Manager of the International Mercantile Marine Company, sent a telegram last night to the State Department calling the attention of Secretary Bryan to the discrimination being made by the Italian Government against American vessels in the immigrant traffic between New York and Italian ports.

According to the Italian laws every foreign vessel carrying steerage passengers to or from Italy must have an Italian license, which is obtained from the Consul in New York after the severe requirements have been met. Any foreign vessel landing more than fifty steerage passengers at an Italian port without this license is liable to a fine of $20 for each one in excess of the number.

When R. H. Farley, General Manager of the third-class passenger department of the International Mercantile Marine, applied to the Italian Consul for a license for the Finland to leave New York for Naples on Nov. 21 the Consulate replied that in future a bond of $4,000 for the ship and $20 for each passenger in the steerage would have to be deposited here with the Banca di Napoli before the vessel could be licensed.

"This meant," Mr. Farley said, "that the company would have to deposit $80,000 at the Italian bank before the Finland of the Red Star Line, flying the American flag, could get a license to carry her complement of 1,500 in the steerage, which at $20 a head would total $26,000.

"Before the war started the Italian Government, which shows a paternal interest in its immigrants, demonstrated that there was a tendency to confine the immigrant traffic to the Italian and German steamship lines, and freeze out the American and British lines. In September the Cunarder Carpathia arrived at Naples without an Italian license, and the authorities fined the vessel $24,000 for 1,200 steerage passengers, or $20 a head. I do not know whether the fine was paid or remitted."

Mr. Farley added that the Italian liners came into the port of New York as free as an American vessel, and he did not see why the Italian Government should be permitted to put up bars against American ships trading to Naples, Palermo, and Genoa.

WHITRIDGE HECKLED BY STOCKHOLDERS

Demand Made for Cut in $60,000 Salary of Third Avenue Line Head.

ANNUAL MEETING IN UPROAR

Proxies Give President an Investigation Committee of His Own Choosing—Re-elect Old Directors.

For nearly three hours yesterday certain stockholders of the Third Avenue Railway Company, at the annual meeting of the company at its office, 129th Street and Third Avenue, attacked Frederick W. Whitridge, the President, because the company has not yet paid a dividend, and demanded that he allow his $60,000 salary to be reduced. Then the proxies, which were held by Edward Mahar, General Manager and Vice President, came into play, the committee of investigation, which had been demanded, was made up entirely of Mr. Whitridge's nominees, and the old Directors were re-elected.

Mr. Whitridge showed no desire to avoid the battle. As soon as the minutes had been read, looking at Alonzo E. Cottier, the leader of the protestant stockholders, he remarked:

"Let's postpone all formalities. I'm ready for the bomb. Mr. Cottier has the floor."

Mr. Cottier also was prepared. He read off a list of all the Directors except Harry Bronner and including Mr. Whitridge, and asked if it were not true that their total stockholdings were 113 shares of the value of $3,300.

"Go ahead," said Mr. Whitridge, "I'll reply to everything at once."

Then Mr. Cottier took up the purchase of the old Twenty-eighth Street line and, amid cheers, asked what justification there was for laying out $400,000 on a company which was losing $10,000 a year on an $80,000 business.

In answer, Mr. Whitridge outlined the reorganization, which followed the foreclosure proceedings of the old Third Avenue Railroad Company, and laid emphasis on the fact that the stockholders who had been wiped out were permitted to come in on payment of a $45 assessment.

"I have always considered," he said, "that my job was to look after the bondholders, the real owners of the road, who have supplied all the money. I have had two ambitions, to see that every 4 per cent. bondholder gets his money out of the company and to pay a dividend to the stockholders. I have never prophesied when we should resume paying dividends. There seems a wizardry about the market movements of the Third Avenue stock that I cannot foresee. Ever since a woman came and wept in my office for a quarter of an hour because she had lost $2,000, I have made up my mind that no one should ever say he had lost money through any statements of mine."

Clason Point Line.

Then taking up the purchase of the New York City Interborough Company, one of the acquisitions criticized, Mr. Whitridge explained that in order to build a line to Clason Point, which migh, he thought, be developed into a revenue-producing resort, he had himself advanced the money for its construction, and in order to purchase the New York City Interborough he had borrowed on his notes from W. A. Reed & Co., and carried for two years $1,350,000. The venture, he said, had been a complete success.

As for the Twenty-eighth Street line, Mr. Whitridge said, he had begun to operate it when it was derelict, in order to try out the electric storage battery car he was developing. He then detailed the way in which the Public Service Commission had authorized the Third Avenue to issue $187,000 bonds to purchase the line, and how it had issued $250,000 notes to make up the rest of the price asked for it.

"I may have made a mistake," said Mr. Whitridge. "It is too early to say yet."

"A pretty bad mistake for a $60,000 President," sneered Mr. Cottier.

"It was not a bad mistake for any one," shot back Mr. Whitridge.

"If you persist in such mistakes," shouted Peter F. Mayer, a stockholder, "how long before we are like the New Haven?"

"About twice as long as if we followed your policy," said Mr. Whitridge.

"I've been out of my interest for seven years," shouted Mr. Mayer.

"You may have to go on being out, as long as I am here."

"Why don't you be philanthropic and take no salary as long as we get no dividends? We have to be philanthropic to the traveling public."

"If there is any considerable number of stockholders who want it," shouted Mr. Whitridge, "I am willing to get out."

While this colloquy was in progress the meeting had been getting more and more excited. The objectors seemed in the majority and cheered every hit at Mr. Whitridge, but he had a considerable number of supporters. From the back of the benches one stockholder, Stephen V. Collins, kept moving that Mr. Whitridge's resignation be forthwith accepted, but no one paid any attention to him, and the Chairman only restored order by calling Mr. Cottier to go on with his charges.

He then contended that the effect of the Whitridge policy was to reduce excessively the ratio which the capitalization bore to the value of the property, and that too great a proportion of the gross earnings was being laid aside for the depreciation fund.

In his reply Mr. Whitridge said it would be a good job to diminish the relative capitalization of the company, although he could not see what this had to do with it.

"My experience of over 30 years," he said, "is that railroads pay out in dividends just about as much as they raise in new capital. This is, of course, ruinous. What do you want me to do?"

Whitridge Defines Policy.

"Give up your $60,000 a year," cried a stockholder.

Mr. Whitridge paid no attention to him, and gained a cheer as he said he was trying to accumulate a fund sufficient to replace all property as it wore out, so that the Third Avenue would not have to go through the mill again. He defined his policy as a determination not to pay a dividend unless there was money in the bank without prior lien which could be used for the purpose and not to issue more bonds except to buy income-bearing property.

Marshall Winchester, a stockholder, intervened here with a fervent tribute to Mr. Whitridge's achievements for the company and an expression of opinion that he had well earned his $60,000 a year.

Mr. Cottier then formally moved the reduction of the President's salary to $25,000 until 4 per cent. dividends were paid, and its gradual increase by $5,000 for every additional 1 per cent. of dividend.

It was, however, pointed out that all the meeting could do would be to recommend this cut to the Directors, and the motion was lost sight of when the question of the annual report was brought up. Mr. Cottier wanted to know why it had not been distributed before the meeting. Mr. Whitridge replied that, as he had an independent firm of auditors go through the books, he did not get a report from them before Sept. 25.

A motion to adjourn the meeting so as to give the stockholders time to read the report before they voted upon it was followed immediately by another by Alexander C. Lassen for the appointment of a committee of three to be selected from those present to investigate the affairs of the company.

Mr. Lassen and William K. Burns, who held a proxy for Horace J. Gunn, pressed this vigorously, because they said it would represent the smaller stockholders. They protested as Mr. Whitridge mentioned some of his friends in the meeting, and drew from him the retort that he had to pick these because he needed "intelligent people" on such a body.

It was Mr. Mahar, however, who stepped in at this stage and defeated the plans of the malcontents. With a bulky envelope of proxies in his hand he demanded that the committee should be chosen from those represented by proxy as well as personally, and declared that he would never agree to the idea that those who had sent their proxies had no rights.

This action of his was held by the objectors to be the steam roller at work. They saw themselves hopelessly outvoted by the proxies, and the meeting fell into the utmost disorder.

The motion for the committee was lost by about 98,000 shares to 6,000, and then Mr. Whitridge himself apointed E. A. Manice, Edward Maas, L. F. Strauss, and H. Block as a committee to confer with himself and the Directors on the condition of the company.

The disorder came to an end with the call for the election of Directors. This involved keeping the polls open for one hour, and by the end of that time only two or three stockholders remained to hear Mr. Mahar declare the old board re-elected. They are Frank L. Babcock, Harry Brenner, George W. Davison, Milton Ferguson, Adrian Iselin, Edward A. Maher, John W. Platten, W. Emlen Roosevelt, Albert W. Scholle, Joseph H. Seaman, Frederick H. Shipman, James N. Wallace, and Frederick W. Whitridge.

$5,000 GIFT TO WIDOWS.

The Widowed Mothers' Fund Association, which opened a benefit festival and dance at Delmonico's last evening, started in with $5,000 which was donated in cash. "For Our Sufferers" is a large sign in the centre of the room where the bazaar, which is an important part of the festival, is held, to show that this charity is doing work at home.

There are many interesting features of the festival, which continues this afternoon and evening. There is a mystic caldron draped in black, filled with black-wrapped packages, which are sold at 50 cents each; there is a melting pot to receive contributions of old gold and silver, and in the tea room waffles and griddle cakes are served hot off the griddle. Toys, fancy articles, candy, and flowers are for sale. Secretary of the State Board of Charities Robert W. Hebbard and Dr. Sigmond Goldwater of the Health Department were present last evening. Thirty children from the families of the women working for the festival will give a miniature "Mme. Jarley's Wax Works" this afternoon at 4 o'clock.

The women who arranged the festival are Mrs. William Einstein, Mrs. Samuel Floersheimer, Mrs. Charles J. Oppenheim, Mrs. Samuel Elkeles, Mrs. Edward Goodman, Mrs. Daniel Guggenheim, Mrs. Adolph Herman Dan, Mrs. Leon Kamaiky, Mrs. Harry Kraft, Mrs. Adolph Lewisohn, Mrs. Gus M. Minzesheimer, Mrs. Joseph Mittelman, Mrs. Max Phillips, Mrs. Herman Rosenbaum, and Mrs. Henry Zuckerman.

SINGER MEETS ARONSON.

Mme. Kutscherra Finds Impresario Through The Times.

Rudolf Aronson, the impresario, was much surprised when he read in THE NEW YORK TIMES on Tuesday that Mme. Elise de Nys Kutscherra, the Belgian opera singer, had supposed he was dead or very ill, and that she had come all the way to New York from Paris to find out whether he was still alive. Mr. Aronson maintained yesterday that, as in Mark Twain's case, if Mme. Kutscherra had heard any such reports they were very much exaggerated.

When he learned from THE TIMES that Mme. Kutscherra was at the Claridge Mr. Aronson lost no time in calling her up. Owing to the difficulty in communicating in war time, their letters between Paris and New York seem to have gone astray. Anyhow, Mme. Kutscherra was delighted that Mr. Aronson was alive and in good health, and so easily found through the medium of THE TIMES, and she and her impresario both said yesterday that the tour whose cancellation the war had threatened would now be undertaken, and that it is already being laid out.

Mme. Kutscherra, who sang in opera here about nineteen years ago, is "Court singer" in both Saxony and Coburg-Gotha. She created several leading roles in German opera at the Paris Opera and has made her home in the French capital for many years.

LONG ISLAND HERD HAS CATTLE PLAGUE

New Outbreak of Foot and Mouth Disease at Woodhaven Dairy Farm.

STATE WILL ISSUE BONDS

Gov. Glynn Authorizes Expenditure of $25,000 in Combating Disease —More Prize Stock Stricken.

The foot and mouth disease was found yesterday in a herd of 184 cattle on a farm of the Kings County Dairy Company near Woodhaven, L. I. Dr. C. E. Corwin, a veterinarian of Union Course, reported that there were suspicious cases in the herd and Dr. H. D. Gill, representing the State Department of Agriculture, at once inspected the cattle and found more than a dozen of them infected.

Dr. Gill ordered the farm quarantined and the entire herd will be slaughtered after authorization has been received from the United States Department of Agriculture. In the meantime, neither Frank Goldstein, who is in charge of the farm, nor any of the employes will be permitted to leave it.

The disease, it is believed, was brought to this farm either by cattle received from Cincinnati or by cattle which had been shipped from Buffalo.

Poultry is being received in this city as usual. The United States Department of Agriculture has issued no orders forbidding its shipment from quarantined States. The order issued by the New York State Department of Agriculture prohibits the shipment only from farms where the presence of the disease is suspected and will have no appreciable effect on the poultry supply of this city.

Dr. Robert Mudings of the Department of Agriculture at Washington directed yesterday the slaughter of all the cows, hogs, dogs, cats, and pigeons on the farm of Theodore Weber, on the Paterson Plank Road, near North Bergen, N. J., where an outbreak of the foot and mouth disease was discovered. In all eighteen cows, twenty-five hogs, four dogs, three cats, and about 300 pigeons were killed and buried in a ditch 50 feet long.

Dr. Mullings was accompanied by Dr. Lindsay and Dr. Peterson and several officials of New Jersey. All of the officials wore outer garments of rubber, and when they left the farm walked through a ditch in which there was a disinfectant.

Mr. Weber, his family and all of his employes have been placed in quarantine on the farm and the New Jersey authorities have issued instructions that the Weber place must not be cultivated for a year.

It was reported yesterday that cases of the disease had been found on farms in the southern and western parts of New Jersey. These reports will be investigated immediately.

ALBANY, Nov. 11.—Gov. Glynn tonight directed William Sohmer, State Controller, to issue bonds to the amount of $25,000, the money to be used in the fight against the foot and mouth disease in the State. In his letter authorizing the issuance of the bonds the Governor asserts that it is necessary to stamp out the disease at once, and as no money now is available for the work, the bonds must be issued.

The discovery of the outbreak of the disease at Woodhaven, caused Commissioner Huson of the State Department of Agriculture to issue tonight an order prohibiting shipments of cattle, sheep and swine in Kings and Queens Counties. The quarantine will become effective tomorrow.

Until this outbreak was reported department officials were contemplating lightening the state quarantine, except in Erie, Seneca and Wayne Counties, so that cattle might be shipped to the East Buffalo Stock Yards and business resumed there next Monday. Today's discovery may alter the plans, Mr. Huson said.

To relieve conditions in Erie, Seneca and Wayne Counties, where the movement of farm produce as well as live stock has been restricted, Mr. Huson today said that produce could be shipped in the future, except from the neighborhoods where the disease existed, upon authorization of departments at the Seneca Falls temporary headquarters.

CHICAGO, Nov. 11.—The foot and mouth disease has spread alarmingly among the 836 prize dairy cattle under quarantine at the Chicago Union Stock Yards. The cattle are valued at $2,500,000. Dr. S. E. Bennett said today that forty new cases had been discovered. The newly infected cows were taken to the veterinary hospital where fifty-two other cases from the Dairy Show stock are under treatment.

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 11.—It was announced that 300 cows of one of the finest dairy herds in Westmoreland County, had developed the foot and mouth disease, and seven dairy herds in other parts of Western Pennsylvania were under suspicion. Some apprehension for the milk supply of Pittsburgh is felt.

BOSTON, Nov. 11.—Twenty-one new cases of foot and mouth disease were discovered in various parts of this State today. Eighteen infected animals were found in Worcester County, the milk producing centre of the State, and single cases were reported from Swansea, Bellingham, and in the municipal herds on Deer and Long Islands in Boston Harbor.

F. F. Walker, Commissioner of Animal Industry, announced tonight that on Friday there would begin a slaughter of all cattle in the State afflicted with the foot and mouth disease. Mr. Walker added that he had no doubt that the next Legislature would appropriate money to reimburse the farmers for at least 50 per cent. of losses incurred.

MINISTER DENIES KISSING.

"Astonished" When Mrs. Brashears Took His Arm in Night Walk.

The Rev. Hudson Baker's version of what took place during the visits to his room in the Portland (Ore.) boarding house of Mrs. Marion W. Brashears was read yesterday in the form of a deposition at the hearing of the slander suit which Mrs. Brashears has brought against Mrs. Susan W. Smith of Shelbyville, Ky., in the Federal District Court before Judge Noble Island.

The young clergyman explained that he was unmarried at the time of the incidents in dispute, and that he occupied the third floor front room of the boarding house, while Mrs. Brashears had the third floor rear room. She used to come to see him sometimes in the evening, and they spent the time reading Dante's Inferno, but he never had to ask her to leave. Mrs. Brashears at that time had been converted to New Thought and they also discussed that.

"Did she ever attempt to kiss you?" the clergyman was asked.

"No, Sir," he replied. "The nearest that she ever came to embracing me was when we were out for a walk, and she took my arm."

The walk took place in a secluded path in a park. When Mrs. Brashears took Mr. Baker's arm it might have been admitted because the path was rather steep, but he rather thought that there was something caressing about it.

"What was your impression at the time?" he was asked.

"Astonishment," he answered.

Another deposition came from George K. Rogers, who also roomed at the same boarding house, and, like Mrs. Brashears, was connected with the Favary Tire and Cushion Company. He admitted that he suspected that the plaintiff had felt rather tender toward himself, and told how his wife had interposed a firm veto on Mrs. Brashears helping in his office when his own bookkeeper was ill.

After a number of other depositions had been read, Mrs. Brashears was recalled to deny there had been anything indiscreet in her relations with Mr. Baker or to discover that she had ever been alone with Ethelbert Favary.

Counsel for both sides summed up yesterday, and this morning Judge Noble Hand will charge the jury:

Dr. Hibben Sees Militarism's End.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Nov. 11.—That the time is not far off when the forces of militarism will be destroyed and the world will be ruled by more civilized and enlightened rules was the optimistic view taken this afternoon by President Hibben of Princeton University in commenting on the probable results of the European war, in his address on "The Higher Patriotism" at the Chart Day exercises of Rutgers College.

the windows there were broken also, and the plate glass in a saloon at Brook Avenue and 161st Street, more than 100 feet from the explosion, lay a mass of fragments in the street. There were stores in the lower floors of all these buildings and the glass in all was destroyed. In Third Avenue windows were smashed in the two-story frame tenements from 3,148 to 3,156.

Capt. Richard O'Connor of the Morrisania Station sent in a call for more help, and Inspector Lahey arrived with the reserves from the Alexander Avenue Station. The crowds finally were quieted, and one by one they were persuaded to return to their homes. When the plaza had been cleared the pavement was a mass of broken glass, and in this debris the police found parts of the bomb.

Most of these bits of evidence were found near the Courthouse. Nothing remained in front of Hoefling's office to show what had exploded there.

Evidence of Anarchists.

From fragments of the bomb found in front of the Court House, Inspector Owen Eagan of the Bureau of Combustibles decided it had been made of an iron pipe three feet long and three inches in diameter, loaded with leaden slugs, and discharged by a mixture of antimony and potash set off by a time fuse. He said that while ordinary Black Handers make use at times of such chemical bombs, they most often employed dynamite or gunpowder, while the former sort of bomb was typical of the Anarchist.

Judge Gibbs said he felt sure the bomb was of anarchist origin. He recalled that last night was the anniversary of the Haymarket riots in Chicago, and said also that since he began sentencing the White Slavers he had received twenty-four threatening letters, some of them containing anarchistic statements, and one threatening him with the death "which King Humbert received."

Hoefling, too, had received threatening letters, and two months ago a bomb was mailed to his office which failed to explode when the Marshal opened the package. A piece of an Italian anarchist magazine was found in the plaza.

The police were convinced the bomb was set to go off at the time Judge Gibbs might be expected to leave the building. All the Bronx knew that the Goldberg trial was on last night and that the jury was out from early afternoon with apparently little chance of agreeing. Friends of the white slavers would have had ample time to make their plans for catching the Judge. Then, too, the bomb at Hoefling's office exploded scarcely a minute after he had left the place.

The Marshal had taken in a prisoner in a civil case, and after placing him in the county jail had gone across the plaza to his office, and glanced through the window to assure himself that everything was all right for the night. He saw no sign of the bomb, which apparently had been placed beneath the sill of the show window, and turned toward Third Avenue. He had reached the corner just as the first bomb exploded.

Saw Automobile Racing Away.

There was one man who gave the police a slight clue. He was Alexander Robinson of 1,182 Broadwsy, who had accompanied Hoefling to the county jail with his prisoner. He said that as he walked away from the Court House he saw an automobile start off at high speed and disappear down Third Avenue. An instant later the first explosion occurred.

Hoefling said he was sure there had been no one in the plaza when he took his prisoner across it, and a few moments later when he crossed to his own office, yet the bombs must have been in place at that time.

Thinking of Judge Gibbs who, he knew, was still in court, Hoefling raced across to the Courthouse after the second explosion. He found the place in an uproar. The prisoners in the county jail below were shrieking and screaming demands to be let out before the building toppled in on them, and Sheriff James O'Brien and Chief Keeper John Minogue had their hands full quieting them, especially the women.

Judge Gibbs, after such investigation as could be made on the spot, gave orders that no one should be admitted to the court building until this morning. He said he had received threatening letters for his activity in the white slave cases. He has sent away seven of the band for terms, most of them of twenty years, and six more were awaiting trial. Hoefling, too, said he had received threats through the mail for the part he played in the exposure of the gang.

LAST RITES FOR HARBURGER

Prominent Men in Crowd at Funeral of Ex-Sheriff.

The funeral of ex-Sheriff Julius Harburger, who died Monday night, took place yesterday from his home, 46 St. Mark's Place, and was attended by men from many walks of life, including jurists, politicians, actors, and pugilists. Capt. Sweeney and twenty policemen from the Fifth Street Station managed a crowd of 2,000 persons.

After a eulogy by the Rev. Dr. Rudolph Grossman, rabbi of the Temple Rodelph Sholom, the coffin was borne to an automobile hearse between the lines of seventy-five members of the Masonic order. The honorary pallbearers were John R. Voorhis, Commissioner of Elections; Thomas F. McAvoy, William Dalton, Deputy Commissioner of Elections; William Sohmer, State Controller; Senator George W. Plunkitt, Col. Asa Bird Gardiner, Justice Benjamin Hoffman of the Municipal Court; Philip F. Donohue, Charles W. Culkin, Deputy Commissioner of Records; Senator Christopher D. Sullivan, and Congressman Henry M. Goldfogle.

The funeral procession was led by the members of the Masonic Lodge, followed by a delegation of seventy-five members of the Tenth Assembly District Democratic Club, to which Mr. Harburger belonged for many years, and twenty-five automobiles containing relatives and friends. The cortege went past the clubhouse at 42 Second Avenue and south on the Bowery to the Staten Island Ferry. Interment was at the Baron De Hirsch Cemetery, Staten Island, and services were held at the grave.

Telegrams poured into the Harburger home all morning from men in public life. One was from Charles F. Murphy, leader of Tammany Hall, now in Hot Springs. Among those who attended the services were Justices Erlanger, Newburger, and Giegerich, Dr. S. Goldenkranz, and Commissioner Edward E. McCall.

PRALL TO HELP STATE

Confidential Siegel Employe, Prosecuter Asserts, Will Tell the "Whole Miserable Story."

Special to The New York Times.

GENESEO, N. Y., Nov. 11.—Several important lines of the defense of Henry Siegel, formerly head of the Siegel department stores in New York and Boston, and the Siegel-Vogel private bank were disclosed this afternoon in the examination of the first witness, H. P. Howell, one of the Vice Presidents of the National Bank of Commerce. Siegel is accused of having obtained $684.05 from that institution on June 14, 1913, by submitting a false credit statement.

Just before the adjournment of court Ross M. Lovell, a partner in the Elmira law office of John B. Stanchfield, chief counsel for Mr. Siegel, obtained from Mr. Howell an admission that Mr. Siegel had obtained a loan of $25,000 from the National Bank of Commerce more than a month before the credit statement was submitted.

The defense will try to show that the loan was not obtained on a false statement, but that the statement was submitted simply to obtain a renewal of the loan. The prosecution is confident it will overcome this contention.

As a matter of fact, Assistant District Attorney Arthur C. Train will submit evidence tending to prove that the defendants Siegel and Vogel, prepared false statements of their financial condition for many years. Mr. Train, at the conclusion of his opening speech in the morning, asserted that Mr. Siegel began ten years ago to prepare to stave off criminal prosecution.

"Finally, when he knew he could obtain no more loans," said Mr. Train, "and when he knew that an investigation of his business methods would bring him to this trial, he called in his confidential secretary, Robert G. McMeekin, who is here and will tell the whole story to you." Siegel said to Mr McMeekin: Go over to the Public Library and find out what countries in the world there are to which I can go and cannot be brought back—what countries there are with which the United States has no extradition treaties.'"

When the cross-examination of Mr. Howell was begun Attorney Lovell caused no little speculation on the part of persons familiar with the case when he asked the witness if J. P. Morgan, Jr., H. P. Davison, G. L. Hine, Charles A. Peabody, Albert H. Wiggin, J. S. Alexander, George F. Baker, and finally John Claflin were not Directors of that institution. Mr. Howell said that Mr. Baker was not, and explained that Mr. Claflin had resigned this year. After adjournment Mr. Lovell said he simply wanted to show that in making the loan to the Siegel-Vogel enterprises the National Bank of Commerce had advantage of the best financial advice.

Mr. Howell testified that he had been associated with the National Bank of Commerce since Jan. 2, 1913, when he took charge of loans to commercial houses. He said he first saw the late Frank E. Vogel on March 12, 1913, after having received a letter from him dated Feb. 14, 1913, containing a statement of the condition of the Fourteenth Street Store as of Feb. 1, 1913. Mr. Vogel was taken into the office of James S. Alexander, President of the bank, where the credit statement of the Fourteenth Street Store was discussed in the presence of Mr. Howell.

Mr. Vogel represented to the bank's President and Vice President that the mercantile house was doing a business of $5,000,000, according to Mr. Howell, and led them to believe that it was a profitable concern. The witness testified that he again saw Mr. Vogel on March 29, 1913, when the latter was advised that the bank wanted to see an amalgamation of the Fourteenth Street Store and the Rothenberg store, which Mr. Vogel explained was to be purchased. Mr. Howell said he also told Mr. Vogel that the bank desired to have a statement of the financial condition of the department store.

Told Vogel of Rumors.

Following a telephone conversation with Mr. Vogel, Mr. Howell said he saw Mr. Vogel on March 24, when he told Mr. Siegel's partner that rumors were current that their institutions were in a distressed condition and was assured by Mr. Vogel that such was not the case. He advised Mr. Vogel, however, that if they were in as good condition as represented he had better inform the commercial agencies.

Mr. Howell testified that the credit statement of Feb. 1, 1913, was the subject of discussion when Mr. Siegel went to the bank about April 9, 1913, as was also a statement of Feb. 3, 1913, signed by Mr. Vogel as President, and a letter signed by Oscar A. Prall, treasurer, showing the condition of the Fourteenth Street Store. Mr. Siegel, he said, informed the bank that the Fourteenth Street Store was doing a satisfactory business.

Mr. Alexander, according to the witness, then informed Mr. Siegel that the various Siegel-Vogel concerns were so inter-related that he thought he ought to have statements of the financial condition of all. Siegel promised to send them.

The prosecution than introduced a letter of April 11, 1913, signed by Mr. Siegel, who wrote to the National Bank of Commerce, saying that none of the installment or charge accounts of the Fourteenth Street Store was pledged, and ended the letter by informing the bank that he would be pleased to send the required statements as soon as Mr. Vogel returned from Chicago.

A letter from Oscar A. Prall, dated April 12, 1913, was placed in evidence, with attached statements showing the condition of the Simpson-Crawford Company and the Henry Siegel Company. Mr. Howell said that he saw Mr. Vogel again on April 22, and agreed then to discount a note falling due on April 29 on the strength of these statements. A statement of the condition of the Fourteenth Street Store on Feb. 1, 1913, by comparison with the statement of the year before, showed that a profit of $23,000 had been made, and by comparison with the statements of the previous year these profits and losses were set forth:

	Profit.
1912	$19,000
1911	20,000
1910, (signed by Siegel)	75,000
1909	81,000
1908	54,000
1907	9,000
1906	Loss 90,000
1905	65,045

The credit statement of the Simpson-Crawford Company showed 1913, $77,000 profit; 1912, $84,000 profit; 1911, $102,000 profit.

Didn't Know of Private Bank.

"Were you aware that Henry Siegel and Frank E. Vogel were conducting a banking business under the name of Henry Siegel & Co., bankers, in the Fourteenth Street Store?" asked Mr. Train.

"I was not."

"Did the statements show any loan by the bank to any of the various Siegel stores, or any loans of the Siegel enterprises to each other?"

"None, except that of the Henry Siegel Company of Boston, which indicated the amount and the dividends due the depositors."

"If you had known that Henry Siegel & Co., bankers, or Henry Siegel and Frank E. Vogel individually had loaned $1,400,000 to the various Siegel stores, would you have discounted the note of the Fourteenth Street Store of April 29, 1913, for $25,000?"

"I would not."

"If you had known that the Fourteenth Street Store had more than $500,000 due and outstanding, would you have discounted the note of April 29, 1913?"

"No."

"If you had known that the Henry Siegel Company of Boston had $377,000 still outstanding, would you have discounted that note?"

"No."

"If you had known that those loans not disclosed amounted to $1,000,000 would you have made that loan?"

"No."

"If you had known that any liabilities were concealed sufficient to wipe out the $177,000 surplus; or if you had known that instead of earning $23,000 as shown in the statement of Feb. 1, 1913, they had lost $233,000 would you have made the loan?"

"I would not," answered Mr. Howell.

The cross-examination of Mr. Howell will be continued at tomorrow morning's session.

Mr. Train's Speech.

Mr. Train's speech at the opening of court in the morning went into all the details of the case. As far back as 1905, he said, Siegel and Vogel, with Oscar A. Prall and other persons, entered into a conspiracy to obtain money from banking institutions by fraudulently misrepresenting the condition of their enterprises, and it was in pursuance of this scheme that $100,000 was obtained from the National Bank of Commerce.

"One of these conspirators," he continued, "Oscar A. Prall, confidential financial man of Siegel, an officer in all these companies will testify to the acts evidencing the existence of the conspiracy. He will tell you how Siegel instructed him as early as 1904 to pad the merchandise account to the extent of $125,000 and kept him working for forty-eight hours on a stretch, locked in an office, faking the inventories to correspond with the ledger upon which the merchandise account had been entered.

"Beginning with that date, the merchandise account in the Simpson-Crawford store never ceased to be padded, and this padding grew greater and greater in amount until in 1913 it was practically $500,000. The inflation of this merchandise account was done by Siegel himself in his private office. The merchandise account in its inflated form appeared upon every credit statement for the Simpson-Crawford Company up to the time of the collapse."

The Fourteenth Street Store, he said, had lost money from the start in 1904; yet Siegel and Vogel borrowed money right and left and sold its notes on the strength of credit statements signed by Siegel showing that it was making money.

The Boston store, he said, lost almost its entire capital in the first year, 1905, yet the defendant Siegel signed statements showing that the store was being operated at a profit, and on at least one occasion altered the merchandise inventory with his own hand. He said Vogel attended to the practical details of constructing the fraudulent credit statements by which loans were obtained from banks and falsifying books, giving directions to Prall for that purpose.

"Prall, their creature and accomplice," said Mr Train, "will tell you the whole miserable story of his own guilt and how he was practically forced by these two men to carry out their general design. I can prove that Vogel was a crook and that Siegel was a crook, but I want to prove a conspiracy."

Two Sets of Books.

He said there were two sets of books, one showing actual conditions, which Siegel and Vogel kept in their own vault and which was for their private information. The other was opened for the public at large and for creditors who demanded to see their books.

"We have both sets of books here in the courtroom," he said, "and we shall show you these accounts. In the second set of books they would arbitrarily add thousands of dollars to the amount of merchandise on hand."

"Under the laws of Massachusetts every corporation is obliged to have an annual audit of its books, so each year Siegel and Vogel would have a stockholders' meeting of the Boston company, with Siegel in the chair, and attended by only one or two of the officers. And each year, in accordance with the law, Siegel would appoint as auditing committee, of which he was also the Chairman, and this Auditing Committee would solemnly appoint Oscar A. Prall of New York as auditor of the books, which he himself had faked a week or so before. And Prall would go over from New York and look over the books and say that they were O. K. and that a business which had lost $3,500,000 and was losing $250,000 a year was making money and doing fine."

"The only way these scamps could have been kept afloat was through the money procured from the bank of Henry Siegel & Co., bankers. This money, composed of the savings of their depositors, Siegel and Vogel distributed to the three stores. And the stores lent it to each other and to Siegel and Vogel, who in turn loaned the money back again and in and out and this way and that way until finally in one way or another the money reached the Boston store and disappeared forever.

"The private bank of Henry Siegel & Co. had over $2,700,000 in deposits. It was all loaned without security to these corporations. That money had all been lost, although it was still owed. Yet they concealed the fact from the bankers from whom they sought to borrow.

"What was Siegel's motive for this crime? His enterprises were stock companies, owned or controlled by these two defendants. Prosperity for these stores meant prosperity for them, for they owned most of the stock of all of them. Their interest in keeping these companies growing also grew out of the fact that they paid themselves huge salaries as officers. Siegel got nearly $40,000 in salaries, and Vogel about $30,000 during 1913. They were engaged in a colossal and hazardous business speculation. They had put their own fortunes into these underlying companies, and if these companies went to the wall they would lose those fortunes and would be bankrupts.

"I shall also offer evidence to prove that for years these men and their associates had been engaged in a conspiracy to make the world think their enterprises were successful so that they could get credit for these enterprises, and to do this they had for years faked their books, forged false entries, declared unearned dividends out of capital, filed false returns of conditions with the Federal Government and with the State Governments of Massachusetts and New York, and each year borrowed enormous sums of money by means of false and fraudulent lying statements of their condition.

"They saw that if any of these sources failed their crimes would be disclosed by any investigation that might ensue. They had to be exposed or keep on in criminals. To keep going so that these crimes would not be disclosed they went on committing others, for one of which they are here on trial. They feared the larceny committed by them against the banks which loaned them money would be discovered, together with the dental perjuries.

"Siegel desired to get this loan for the Fourteenth Street Store for the same reason he desired to get all the credit he could, and in order to get this credit he lied about the condition of his enterprises; because he hoped to get back the money he had already lost; because so long as he and Vogel could keep going they could pay themselves $100,000 a year in salaries, and because if he did not borrow money and keep going State's prison stared him in the face.

"And what he feared has happened. In spite of their frauds they were forced to ask for a receivership. The accountants came in and examined their books, and here Siegel is at the bar of Justice—just as he expected."

West Indies' Archbishop Sails.

Widow of Whitelaw Reid Reduces Her Holdings in Newspaper.

Mrs. Elisabeth Mills Reid, widow of Whitelaw Reid, is gradually reducing her holdings in The Tribune, which her husband owned. In her first accounting as executrix of Mr. Reid's estate, which she filed yesterday with Surrogate Sawyer in White Plains, Mrs. Reid noted the sale of securities of the Tribune Association amounting to $205,000.

The personal property Mrs. Reid inherited amounted to $1,131,196. This was partly made up of 139 shares of Tribune Association 5 per cent. gold bonds worth $130,000; 150 shares of Mergenthaler Linotype Company worth $230,500, and shares of Tribune stock worth $107,500.

The SIX that gets the Second Look—

Too many cars are on the streets nowadays for any but the most striking to get even a passing glance. And yet somehow, even in the afternoon press of Fifth Avenue, the Studebaker SIX always gets the tribute of a SECOND look.

Sweeping in lines, massive yet graceful and finished like a Royal carriage of state, this handsome car stands up beside Sixes at treble its price— "—because it's a Studebaker."

And yet it is not only on the "show" drives where cars are judged by looks, that you find Studebaker getting that SECOND look of appreciation—BUT on the roads and on the hills where performance is the thing that counts.

A motor of rare flexibility in a SIX that is the LIGHTEST of all Light Sixes—FULL-floating Rear Axle—Timken Bearings everywhere, even in the transmission—balance and alignment that make driving EASY and upkeep low—these are but a few of the scores of Studebaker touches that have made this SIX the service-giving, pleasure-heightening car

And you'll find it time well-spent to come in today, if you can, and see this SIX that gets the SECOND look

MRS. WAGNER PUT UNDER SUSPENSION

FOR COMMITTEE OF INQUIRY

One to be Appointed to Determine Future Policy on Problem—Churchill Answers Mitchel.

The Board of Education for fully two hours and a half yesterday afternoon wrestled with the case of Mrs. Lora M. Wagner, the teacher-mother in the Curtis High School. First, it decided by a vote of 28 to 8 against the report of its Committee on High Schools granting her a leave of absence from Nov. 3, 1914, to Sept. 10, 1915, for the purpose of rearing her child. Then by a vote of 23 to 8 and despite the vigorous protest of City Supt. Maxwell it instructed District Supt. Bardwell to prefer charges of neglect of duty against her and to suspend her from duty. Finally it adopted a resolution authorizing a special committee of seven members to confer with the By-laws Committee and report as to what should be the future policy of the board on the teacher-mother problem. The various resolutions offered on the subject, including that of Isidore M. Levy, granting leave of absence to a teacher-mother and permitting her return to the service under certain conditions, were referred to this committee.

Motion for Suspension.

When Mrs. Wagner's case was reached on the calendar, William G. Willcox, one of the two members from Staten Island, where her school is situated, declared that he saw no good reason for making an exception in Mrs. Wagner's favor. He moved, therefore, to lay the report on the table, and to instruct Dist. Supt. Bardwell to suspend Mrs. Wagner.

Joseph Barondess wanted to know if the board was afraid to discuss the question.

"We are again face to face with this problem," said Dr. Ira S. Wile, "but with the issue entirely different from that in any of the other cases. The board is not now able to take advantage of a technicality. Apparently we are not acting honestly with the mother-teachers. If we employ a married teacher until she becomes a mother and then dismiss her, we are not consistent. The opponents of the mother-teacher have failed to prove that maternity makes her less efficient. There should be one rule for all. Only a few months ago we granted a year's leave of absence to a teacher to go West to tend a sick foster father. If we have a neurasthenic teacher we cannot get rid of her, but we take advantage of a technicality against the mother-teacher. Is it a crime to have children?"

"I love my mother, respect my children, and love my wife," said Mr. Barondess, "and I would not be worth the salt I destroy nor the space I occupy if I did not express my utter indignation at a thing of this kind. It is a humane issue; it has nothing to do with parties. I am willing to stand up and be counted with my mother, children, and wife. If it be a crime for married teachers to bear children we should bar women from our schools."

Fourteen Cases Now Pending.

"Every one of us," said George J. Gillespie, "has respect for motherhood. There are now fourteen mother-teacher cases pending before the Elementary Schools Committee. Every one of them has been suspended from duty. Each and every one of these cases viewed from any standpoint is as meritorious as the one we are discussing, and I might add even more meritorious. Mrs. Wagner's case is essentially the same as that of Mrs. Edgell, the high school teacher whose request for leave of absence to bear and rear a child was denied. We are awaiting the decision of Dr. Finley in Mrs. Palsotto's case. Until we get it the board will be in a state of suspense. Until we receive Dr. Finley's decision all teachers should be treated alike.

Egerton L. Winthrop, former President of the board, said:

"The decision of the State Superintendent of Education will not affect my vote one way or the other; whatever he decides this board may change its policy. Public opinion of the country is against us in this matter."

There were five women members present. On the vote to adopt the committee's report only Miss Martha Lipsoln Derper and Miss Olivia Leventritt voted yes. Mrs. Reba C. Bamberger, Mrs. Alice Lee Post, and Mrs. Christine Towns voted no.

When Morton Stein offered a resolution that District Superintendent Bardwell be instructed to prefer charges of neglect of duty against Mrs. Wagner and then suspend her, Dr. Maxwell said to do so within two weeks of the birth of her child would be a cruel and inhuman act. If the board insisted on it, the charges and suspension should be made by itself. Gen. Wingate said that Mrs. Wagner's conduct was not such as to commend her to the consideration of the board, John Martin said that she was a reckless woman who had jeopardized the life of herself and child acting under the advice of women agitators. Mrs. Wagner's letter saying that she would report for duty on Monday was read before the order to suspend her was adopted.

President Churchill's answer to Mayor Mitchel's letter on the mother-teacher issue was made public yesterday. In it he says:

> The suggestion of leaves of absence is before the board, and representatives of the board now in the West have at my request, been investigating the procedure there with regard to the question at issue. At my direction, the division of reference and research of this department is making an inquiry into the procedure in many other large cities. The facts reported will be presented to the board.
>
> It is not for me to say what considerations impelled the members of the Board of Education to sustain the policy of so many years. I should be reluctant to analyze the motives of the members. I hazard the belief, however, that the paramount consideration has been the efficiency of the teacher.

In commenting upon his letter to President Churchill, Mayor Mitchel said:

"My letter to Mr. Churchill indicates my present frame of mind, but it must not be construed as meaning that I am unalterably in favor of leaves of absence. My conclusions are not final. I am still open to argument."

LONGER HOURS FOR JURISTS

Supreme Court Justices to Sit from 10 A. M. to 5 P. M.

The Appellate Division of the Supreme Court yesterday handed down an order amending the rules of practice in New York and Bronx Counties, changing the bench hours of the Justices sitting in trial and special terms so that they will be from 10 A. M. to 5 P. M. instead of 10:30 A. M. to 4 P. M. The order was to be effective yesterday, but owing to the late hour at which it was filed in the County Clerk's office there was not sufficient time in which to give due notice to the Justices assigned to the various parts.

The order follows the action of the lower court Justices, who adopted a resolution at a meeting a few nights ago in which they agreed to sit until 5 P. M. in trial parts, but not applying the rule to special terms. This resolution was to go into effect on Monday. On Oct. 1 7,251 new cases were added to the jury calendar, an increase of 20 per cent. over that of the same period last year. The special term calendar this year shows only a slight increase.

Justice Ford, sitting in a trial part, when asked for an opinion on the change said:

"I am in favor of it. The Justices are of the opinion that they ought to sit longer hours owing to the increase in the jury cases, and for that reason adopted the 5 o'clock resolution. I did not know the Appellate Division had taken any action."

IGNORE INFANTICIDE IN CORONERS' WORK

Dr. Ewing Says Child Murder May Be Carried On Here with Impunity.

FEW AUTOPSIES ARE HELD

Health Department Officials Say "Cause of Death" Given Is Often Mere Guesswork.

Testifying under oath at a public hearing yesterday in the investigation of the Board of Coroners by Commissioner of Accounts Wallstein, Dr. George B. Ewing, Professor of Pathology at the Cornell Medical School, gave as his opinion that the Coroners of New York have failed to do their work properly and have made little or no attempt to detect and punish persons guilty of infanticide.

Dr. Ewing was told by Mr. Wallstein that only one case of infanticide was reported in Manhattan in 1913. He replied that he thought the actual number of cases was much greater. Then he added:

"As far as the activities of the Coroner's office, as you have detailed them to me, are concerned, infanticide might be carried on with impunity in New York."

Commissioner Wallstein asked the expert if he considered the term "infantile convulsions," which was found on many of the certificates of death filed with the Board of Health by Coroners, as sufficient, unless an autopsy was performed. He asserted emphatically that he did not, as poison such as strychnine, which was readily obtainable in this city, might have caused the convulsions. "It was absolutely necessary," he thought, in order to guard against the increase of infanticide, to carefully investigate the cases brought to the attention of the Coroners.

Dr. Ewing was then told that, although 3,749 deaths of infants and adults had been reported to the Coroners of Manhattan in 1913, in only 742 cases were post-mortem examinations considered necessary. The witness said that, in his opinion, there shou'd have been many more autopsies. Asked whether his answers were influenced by the fact that there was a scarcity of autopsy material, he replied:

Deplores Lack of Autopsies.

"It is a fact that there is a comparative scarcity of autopsy material for all sorts of educational purposes. I can go to Vienna, and for 15 florins a month I can see Koliske perform his medical legal autopsies for the State and hear his exposition of them, and I can, for the same or a less fee, see eight or ten autopsies a day in several hospitals in that city. There is no such opportunity in America, and, as a university man, I regret the absence of this means of teaching the fundamentals of internal medicine.

"The opinions that I have expressed, however, on these questions are the result of twenty years' experience and contact with the inadequacy of the medical legal work done in this city. I feel that New York gets along practically without any aid from the science of legal medicine, and my statements made to you today are made wholly from that point of view and they are not colored in any respect whatever by my duties as a teacher of pathology. I may say, further, that my views, I believe, are shared by my colleagues in pathology, not only in this city, but in other cities in this country and in other countries of the world."

Dr. Ewing expressed the opinion that the Coroners' office lacked organization. To properly perform their duties, he said, men were needed who were specially trained in clinical medicine, gross pathology, and microscopical structure.

Dr. William H. Guilfoy, Registrar of Records in the Health Department, testified that in many cases, including accidents, homicides, and suicides, the exciting cause of death was not reported, and that in cases reported to him of death by natural causes, the cause given was often a mere guess on the part of the Coroners and their physicians.

"This guess work should stop," he said. "There should be more autopsies."

Dr. Guilfoy said that from the certificates filed he was led to believe there was very little effort on the part of the Coroners to ascertain in cases of asphyxia, due to illuminating gas or drowning, whether death was by accident or suicide. He had repeatedly called the attention of the Coroners' physicians to the insufficiency of the certificates, he said, and had found it necessary to detail a clerk to go to the Coroners' office every month in order to obtain the information which enabled him to properly classify the causes of death.

Coroner's Records Misleading.

Dr. Haven Emerson, Deputy Commissioner of Health, said that in the examination of 800 inquisition papers he had found that 40 per cent. contained statements of causes of death which were not sufficiently verified before the certificates were signed. He said such records were misleading. He said life insurance premiums were based on statistics of causes of death, which must be substantially affected by the returns of the Coroners' office, and he said that correct medical diagnosis was also vital to the administration of criminal justice.

Coroner Patrick D. Riordan on the stand said he had no intention of trying to block the inquiry, but would answer all questions frankly and honestly. He made this statement:

"It is the duty of the Board of Health to fix the rules and demand these reports. If they have not demanded them it is their fault. When I came into office in the beginning of the year every report was demanded. If they are not demanded I don't suppose it is necessary to furnish them."

Coroner Israel L. Feinberg was represented at the hearing by an attorney, but he made no objections to the questions asked. He said the law called for a Coroner's jury in all cases where there was suspicion of homicide, negligence, or suicide. He had summoned juries in all such cases, he said, except in a few where it was evident beyond a doubt that the case was one of suicide. He did not think it objectionable to have physicians or experts in various professions on a jury, and had frequently subpoenaed them. He will be recalled as a witness today.

R. H. DAVIS REPLIES TO GERMAN CRITICS

ASSAILS KAISER'S OFFICERS

Author Says They Are War Mad, and Poison Is the Only Thing for Them.

An editorial in The New York Staats-Zeitung yesterday characterizing Richard Harding Davis as a "contemptible poison monger" writing with a poisoned pen, brought forth a prompt reply from his home in Mount Kisco. The attack on Mr. Davis grew out of his letter of Nov. 8 in THE NEW YORK TIMES, in which he declared that the alleged confession of Col. W. E. Gordon, V. C., of the Gordon Highlanders, concerning dumdum bullets was a German forgery and offered to bet the German Ambassador at Washington $100 to one penny that Col. Gordon did not write the letter. Mr. Davis insists he stands by his bet despite what The Staats-Zeitung says about him.

A fac simile of the supposed confession was reproduced with the editorial. The document is supposed to be in the Colonel's own handwriting. His name is signed to it as "Ade" to the King. The names of two German officers also appear at the bottom, testifying that the statement was written in their presence. After telling how flat-nosed bullets were given out to the Colonel for revolver ammunition, the confession says:

> The revolver ammunition was of the same pattern as issued to me and the other officers of the Gordon Highlanders in June last at their annual revolver course.

"The fact that a fac simile of the supposed confession is printed does not prove anything," said Mr. Davis yesterday. "I do not know Col. Gordon, and I would not know his handwriting if I saw it, but I do know his record. It will be found in any 'Who's Who.' And that is why I call this document a forgery. Col. Gordon is not the sort of a man who would write such a thing. They couldn't make him do it.

"The letter is cleverly worded, but the German of it crops out. For instance, it speaks of 'their annual revolver course.' An Englishman would not say that. He would say 'annual target practice.' And certainly Col. Gordon would not speak of 'their' target practice when he means the officers of his own regiment, himself included. He would say 'our.'

"As for The Staats-Zeitung's charge that I am poisoning public opinion, I can only say that I'm glad of it, if that means turning public opinion against the German Army officers. For these are the people that are mad—war mad—and poison is the only thing for them, just as it is used for mad dogs."

Mr. Davis said that one possible explanation had occurred to him for the stories about the British troops using dumdum bullets. In target practice, he said, soft-nosed bullets frequently were used because they were cheaper and did not do so much damage to the target. It was possible, Mr. Davis thought, that some of these bullets had been distributed in the early haste to rush men to the front.

The Staats-Zeitung declared that Mr. Davis did not know what he was talking about and that his "poisoned pen" was slandering not merely the German officers whose names appeared as witnesses to the document but Col. Gordon by suggesting that the Englishman would deny authorship of the confession when he was released from prison.

PLEDGES ASSEMBLY TO NEW GOVERNOR

Speaker Sweet Says Whitman Can Have Any Legislation He Wants.

TO CUT OFF TAMMANY JOBS

Efficiency and Economy Commissioner and Fire Marshal to be Legislated Out of Office.

Speaker Thaddeus C. Sweet of the Assembly, who is a candidate for re-election, came to this city yesterday to tell Governor-elect Whitman that if chosen again he would do all in his power to bring about such a blissful state of harmony between the Governor and the Republican Assembly that "Gov. Whitman could have anything he wants in the way of legislation." Mr. Sweet is anxious to have the backing of the Governor-elect in his fight for the Speakership.

What Speaker Sweet intended to say became known to the Governor-elect some time before the Speaker had an opportunity to tell him last night. When Mr. Whitman heard of the Speaker's promise he smiled and said:

"Does the Speaker mean to say that he is going to cast one ballot for the entire Assembly? If he does, that is just as it ought to be. Of course I am glad to have the Speaker's assurances of support, and I hope the Legislature will give its whole-hearted support in the work of the coming administration at Albany."

Speaker Sweet had a talk with State Chairman Tanner before he sought out the Governor-elect at his headquarters at 37 Madison Avenue. It was after his conference with Chairman Tanner that Speaker Sweet made his statement.

"I do not believe there will be any 'ripper' legislation at Albany during the coming session," he said. "I do believe that there will be a continuous process of conservative reduction in the number of office holders and of elimination of departments and commissions that clearly are superfluous. I think something of that kind will be undertaken the moment the Legislature gets together. I am informed that bills will be introduced immediately to abolish the Efficiency and Economy Department and the Fire Marshal's office, both of which are absolutely useless except to provide easy berths for Tammany retainers. The present Republican Assembly voted to abolish both, but was balked in that purpose by the Tammany-ruled Senate. This time they will go, and there will be no departments created to take their place either."

Mr. Whitman said last night that as yet he had not decided finally upon any of his appointments. He intimated that he would announce his choice for Adjutant General within the next fortnight. The name of Lewis William Stotesbury, a Republican who at present is Inspector General of the First Brigade, is being mentioned. Ranulf Compton of Saratoga, Captain of Company L, Second Regiment, has been recommended to the Governor for Military Secretary by ex-Senator Edgar Truman Brackett.

George A. Glynn of Syracuse, a newspaperman, who was secretary to Gov. Horace White and William A. Hayward, former secretary of the Republican National Committee, are among those being considered as candidates for secretary to the Governor. Frederick C. Stevens, who was State Superintendent of Public Works under Gov. Hughes; N. V. V. Franchot, who held the same position under the late Gov. Higgins, and Winslow W. Mead, who was Deputy Superintendent of Public Works in both the Franchot and the Stevens administrations, are being mentioned in connection with the same office in the Whitman Administration. This is one of the appointments the Governor-elect will be free to make immediately upon taking office.

Mr. Whitman was asked yesterday regarding reports that he would appoint Frederick C. Tanner, his former campaign manager, who now is Chairman of the Republican State Committee, as his successor in the District Attorney's office.

"No decision has been reached in the matter," said Mr. Whitman. "Mr. Tanner is big enough for almost any position, and I certainly hope that I shall be able to secure his service to the people, but whether it will be as District Attorney or in some other position I cannot tell."

Mr. Whitman yesterday received a letter from Bainbridge Colby, the defeated Bull Moose candidate for United States Senator, warmly congratulating him upon his election. Mr. Whitman exclaimed that he and Mr. Colby were old friends. As yet Mr. Whitman has not received either from Col. Roosevelt or from Frederick M. Davenport, his Progressive rival for the Governorship, any message of felicitation upon his election.

TWO CROSSES FOR GLYNN.

Aldermen Begin Canvass of the City Vote to Last a Week.

The Aldermen sitting as a Board of County Canvassers began yesterday the tabulation of the vote cast in the five boroughs of the city at the last election. The Alderman from each district, with the assistance of expert tabulators, will canvass the vote of his own district, and it is expected the entire canvass will be completed within a week. The first three Assembly Districts of Manhattan were completed yesterday.

It was found that some voters had voted for the office of Governor under both the Democratic and the Independence League emblems on the same ballot. In these cases, under a ruling of the Attorney General, one vote will be counted for Governor, but neither party will get the credit for the vote.

WADSWORTH SPENT $9,086.

Senator-Elect Kept Campaign Expenses Well Within Receipts.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—James W. Wadsworth, Jr., Senator-elect from New York, reported to the Secretary of the Senate today that in his campaign for the nomination and election he received in contributions $14,290 and that his expenditures amounted to $9,086.38. The largest contributors to the fund were Clarence H. Mackay and O. H. Payne, who gave $5,000 each. Mr. Wadsworth's father, ex-Representative James W. Wadsworth of Geneseo, gave $3,000. Other contributors were James Speyer, $200; Mortimer Schiff, $250, and W. W. Cook, $250.

No statement has been filed by Ambassador James W. Gerard, the Democratic Senatorial nominee. Under the law Mr. Gerard has until Dec. 3 to file his statement.

Representative Lathrop Brown of the First Congressional District of New York, who, it is asserted, was re-elected to Congress by a plurality of one vote, reports expenditures of $3,325.60 in the campaign. His Republican opponent, Frederick C. Hicks of Port Washington, L. I., spent $2,714.08. In the Seventh District Representative John J. Fitzgerald, Chairman of the House Committee on Appropriations, reports expenditures of $993.50, while his Republican opponent, Charles G. F. Wilcox, spent $5,425. Representative H. M. Goldfogle of the Twelfth District, who was defeated by Meyer London, Socialist, spent $50, while Mr. London reports expenses of $100. Representative Thomas G. Patten of the Eighteenth District was re-elected without spending any money. Representative Jacob A. Cantor of the Twentieth District, who also had no expenditures, was defeated by Isaac Siegel, Republican, who spent $384.80 for postage and other necessary expenses.

In the Forty-third District M. M. Wyvell, private secretary to Mr. Bryan, spent $73.37 in an unsuccessful effort to defeat Representative Charles M. Hamilton, Republican. George W. Loft of the Thirteenth District spent only $18 for his re-election, while his Republican opponent, James E. March, reports expenditures of $1,140.

LOFT DEMANDS INQUIRY.

Campaign Chairman Says He Didn't Solicit Federal Employes.

Through his counsel, Beekman, Menken & Griscom, Congressman George W. Loft yesterday made a formal demand on United States District Attorney H. Snowden Marshall for an immediate investigation by the Federal Grand Jury of a newspaper story which said he sent out letters asking campaign contributions from Federal employes in the Surveyor's Department.

In a letter to Mr. Marshall, Mr. Loft, through his counsel, demanded that he be called as a witness before the Federal Grand Jury, and offered to waive immunity "in such form as you deem proper."

Mr. Loft said yesterday through his counsel that he had never signed any dunning letter, that he had no knowledge of the sending out of any such letter, and that before accepting the position as Chairman of the Tammany Campaign Committee he had specifically directed that the committee should at no time send any notice of any character to any Federal, State, or city employe. It was also said on behalf of Mr. Loft that at the time the letter was being sent out he was ill and absent from the city.

District Attorney Marshall has assigned Assistant District Attorneys Roosa and Auchincloss to investigate the complaint of Mr. Loft and of Surveyor Thomas E. Rush against the newspaper story.

Prepare Data for Convention.

The commission created by the Legislature to compile data for the Constitutional Convention met yesterday in the office of Morgan J. O'Brien. Those attending were Mr. O'Brien, Lieut. Gov. Wagner, Speaker Sweet, John H. Finley, Commissioner of Education, and Prof. Samuel McCune Lindsay of Columbia. The commission will prepare a compendium of the various State Constitutions, of the projects for revision already before the public, and of the various amendments which have been proposed and rejected since the convention of 1894. Another meeting will be held in Albany a week from Monday.

Justice Dugro Spent $250.05.

Supreme Court Justice P. Henry Dugro, who was a successful candidate for re-election, filed a list of his campaign expenses yesterday with County Clerk Schneider. The Justice spent only $250.05, of which $90 was for 30,000 lithographs, which the Justice described as "containing a picture of myself and some literary matter descriptive of myself." The remainder of the money was mainly consumed in distributing these lithographs.

CANAL MEDALS DESIGNED.

Ship Carries 50,000 on First Ocean-to-Ocean Passage.

When the Panama Railroad steamship Cristobal on Aug. 3 last, made the first ocean-to-ocean passage through the Panama Canal she carried 50,000 medals made to commemorate the occasion by the J. F. Newman Company of New York. The medal was made after designs suggested by Miss Elizabeth Rodman of Hollywood, Cal., a cousin of Capt. Hugh Rodman, U. S. N., Superintendent of Transportation in the Panama Canal Zone.

The obverse represents Columbia uniting the Atlantic and the Pacific. Columbia stands on the prow of a caravel that is moving through the canal, and holds with both hands a scroll. One end of the scroll touches the Atlantic, the other the Pacific—these oceans being shown on two half globes which, together, represent the earth. Rays of light emanating from the head of the figure symbolize Columbia enlightening the world. Above are the words "Prosperity to All Nations."

On the reverse of the medal is the seal of the Canal Zone and the signature of Col. George W. Goethals, Chief Engineer and Chairman of the Isthmian Canal Commission.

TAMMANY CONGRESS AS HILLES SEES IT

Republican Chairman Says the Hall Will Hold Balance of Power.

PRESIDENT AT ITS MERCY

Thinks Twenty New Yorkers Will Block Wilson's Legislation Unless Placated with Patronage.

Charles D. Hilles, Chairman of the Republican National Committee, made an address at the Labor Temple, Fourteenth Street and Second Avenue, last night. After ridiculing statements from the White House and from Democratic leaders to the effect that the recent election was a triumph for the Democracy, he said:

"The truth is that the Democratic majority is so far reduced by this election that if the twenty Tammany Congressmen are aggrieved at the President, they can effectually blockade legislation. This election has placed him at the mercy of Tammany Hall. President Wilson will have a 'Congress on his hands' as certainly as President Cleveland did, unless the Tiger is fed and pampered and patronized. Tammany Hall will hold the balance of power in the next Congress. Whenever there is an alignment on questions at issue between the two great parties—questions involving issues about which they hold diametrically opposite views—the President's party in Congress will be repulsed, unless Tammany is placated. How can a man of President Wilson's mold regard such a result as an unqualified victory?"

Mr. Hilles said the European war saved President Wilson from an overwhelming defeat. He said that the storm brewing, because of business depression, unemployment, and the failure of the Democratic Party to cut the cost of living, was ready to break after President Wilson described the condition as a "psychological" one, but that the threatened outburst of popular disapproval was avoided when the war threw political issues into the background.

The Republican Party proved itself strong enough to carry a national election, he said, by electing its Congressmen in three-cornered fights in States which in the aggregate control the Electoral College.

The Republican victory was the more remarkable, he said, because the press of the country had accorded President Wilson sympathetic treatment, and because since the war the feeling grew that American citizens should forget national issues and support the President as a patriotic duty.

Saying that some one had asserted that no party had ever retained a majority in the off year after revising the tariff, Mr. Hilles said that after revising the tariff in 1897 McKinley in 1898 had carried Congress and had a majority of twelve votes in the Senate and seventy-two in the House.

After his talk Mr. Hilles answered a number of questions from persons in the audience. One man suggested that the Republican Party could make itself more popular than ever if it would support a law making it a crime for a millionaire to spend money abroad.

Another catechised the speaker, and from his answers tried to prove that the election was not so much a repudiation of President Wilson as a return of the Republican Party to its normal strength after the collapse of the Bull Moose Party. Mr. Hilles said he had no fault to find with that theory.

MOTHERS' FUND FESTIVAL.

Throng Attends Opening at Delmonico's—Attractive Booths.

There was a large attendance last night at the opening of the festival and dance given by the Widowed Mothers' Fund Association at Delmonico's. This afternoon Mrs. Jarley's wax works are to be given, with children of prominent people taking part. Dr. S. S. Goldwater, President of the Board of Health, and Robert W. Hebberd, Secretary of the State Board of Charities, were among the visitors.

The large ballroom was lined with attractive booths, and a melting pot in the centre of the room received many donations of gold and silver articles. The dancing, under the direction of Mrs. Harry Kraft and Miss Pauline Untermeyer, was held in the gold room.

The Reception Committee was made up of Mrs. A. N. Cohen, Mrs. Daniel Guggenheim, Mrs. Nelson Henry, Mrs. Samuel Koenig, Mrs. Frederick Nathan, Mrs. Clarence Burns, Mrs. Adolph Lewisohn, Mrs. Stuart Smith, Mrs. William Grant Brown, and Miss May Wilson. Mrs. William Einstein is President of the association.

The session will continue this afternoon and tonight

DOCTOR MUSTN'T SPEED CAR

Physician Who Was Hurrying to Aid Patient Protests Against Fine.

His plea that he was on an errand of mercy did not help Dr. Walter Price, a Brooklyn physician, yesterday, who was fined $25 by Magistrate McGuire, in the Adams Street Court, for violating the speed ordinance. The physician pleaded guilty to the charge that he was speeding his automobile at the rate of thirty-one miles an hour, but he argued that extenuating circumstances of his case exempted him from the penalty of the law.

Dr. Price told the Magistrate that he had attended a child in Forty-sixth Street, Brooklyn, who was suffering from diphtheria. He said he went to three hospitals, and even as far as Queens, in search of antitoxin for the sufferer, and was compelled to speed his machine at a pace not permitted by law. Magistrate McGuire said that the law did not provide for cases similar to his, and there was no other course open for the court than to impose the fine. The physician paid the fine under protest, and announced his intention of making a test of his case in the courts.

Brooklyn, Chicago, and St. Louis Clubs to be Merged with National Teams.

CHICAGO, Nov. 11.—In an interview here today President James A. Gilmore of the Federal League expressed the opinion that peace betwen the outlaw league and organized baseball was near and that the negotiations might be concluded at a conference scheduled for tomorrow in Chicago between President Garry Herrmann of the commission, President Ban Johnson of the American League, and President Charles H. Weeghman of the Chicago Federal League Club.

Gilmore declared that if the plan under consideration goes through, control of the Chicago National team will be acquired by Charles H. Weeghman and his business associates, and that the club will play on the Federal League ground on the North Side, which will be enlarged and improved for its new use. He also said that the new Cubs would be made up of the best players in the present National League team and the Federal League club.

Among other statements made by President Gilmore were that no city would have more than two clubs next season under the reorganization; that the Federal League teams not absorbed by the major league in the reorganization would be incorporated into another league with perhaps a new name; that there would be no International League teams in Baltimore, Buffalo, or Pittsburgh; that Garry Herrmann did not act as a private individual in his recent conferences with President Weeghman at which peace plans were discussed; that the American Association and the International League will receive a higher classification under the new plan.

While President Gilmore declined to go into further details of the proposed peace plan, it is said to provide for the merger of the Chicago, St. Louis, and Brooklyn Federal League Clubs with the National League teams in those cities and the organization of two substitute major leagues, one in the East and one in the Central States, made up of the present American Association and what is left of the Federal League and the International League.

The proposal to combine the Chicago National League Club and the Chicago Federals at the Federal League Park, it was said tonight, would meet with strong opposition from Charles P. Taft and Charles W. Murphy, who own the West Side Grounds, where the Nationals play. It was said tonight on good authority that Murphy still held 52 per cent. of the Cubs' stock as collateral for the payment of $450,000, the sum it is said he was to receive for his interest in the club.

It was authoritatively said that Murphy would not allow any consolidation of the Nationals and Federals in Chicago until he had received in cash all the remuneration he felt to be due him if the West Side Park was to be abandoned. It was said that this complication might deadlock any attempt at settlement at the peace meeting arranged for tomorrow.

NEW SALARY LIMITS.

Minor Leagues Make 20 Per Cent. Reduction for Players.

OMAHA, Nov. 11.—A horizontal reduction of 20 per cent. in the salary limit of minor league clubs was the recommendation of the Committee on Constitutional Revision of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues. It was adopted so far as it concerned Class A and Class B leagues. Leagues in Class AA were permitted to revise their salary lists as fitted their convenience, and leagues in the C and D class were given until tomorrow to agree on a limit.

The recommendation of the committee followed an address by Garry Herrmann, Chairman of the National Commission, in which he declared that organized baseball leagues should have salary limits in keeping with the gate receipts.

President Herrmann reviewed last year's financial results of the baseball business, and declared that immediate and drastic action was necessary for the preservation of organized ball.

"There must be greater economy in the operation of the business department of the national sport," said Mr. Herrmann. "The wild days of the past when Angels can be called upon to support the business. The smallest minor league club is entitled to the same protection that is accorded the greatest club in a major league. The salary limit should be established, not to fit the gate receipts of the biggest club in the league, but rather gauged by the income of the smallest."

Mr. Herrmann told of his conferences with Federal League officials, and declared that all his talks had been in an individual capacity, and not as a representative either of the National Commission or of the Cincinnati Baseball Club.

The schedule of salary limits, presented by Judge Kavanaugh of Little Rock, Chairman of the Committee on Constitutional Revision, suggested the following limits: Class AA, $5,000 per month; Class A, Southern Association, $3,200; Western League, $2,800; Class B, $2,000; Class C, $1,200; Class D, $1,000. These limitations were put on the number of players: Class AA, 18 for the first twenty days and 15 during the season; Class A, 16 and 15; Class B, 14 and 14; Class C, 12 and 12; Class D, 12 and 12.

Because the Federal League had clubs in two American Association cities representatives of that league objected to the salary arrangements being made public, and club owners were permitted to agree privately on what their limit should be.

In the Central League, which, it is proposed to raise from six to eight clubs, it was stated there were several applications for franchises.

"Rabbit" Maranville Married.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Nov. 11.—Walter J. (Rabbit) Maranville, shortstop of the world's champion Boston National baseball team, and Miss Elizabeth Renette Shea were married this morning in the Church of the Sacred Heart by Rev. Patrick F. Doyle. Gifts were received from Manager Stallings, Capt Johnny Evers, and other members of the Braves.

Champion Elmira Club for Sale.

ELMIRA, N. Y., Nov. 11.—Rumor that the Elmira State League Baseball Club, winner of the 1914 pennant, is for sale was confirmed by Secretary of the club Mortimer Sullivan here tonight. The illness of President Lee Breese and Mr. Sullivan's other business interests are given as the reason for placing the club on the market. The franchise will probably be purchased by Elmirans.

Dyker Meadow Golf Champion.

In a match that was carried to the thirty-seventh green, H. O. Parsons won the golf championship of the Dyker Meadow Golf Club yesterday by defeating Dr. W. D. Johnson.

OLDFIELD WINS AUTO RACE.

Breaks Down Twice, but Is Placed First o. Elapsed Time.

PHOENIX, Ariz., Nov. 11.—Barney Oldfield won the Los Angeles to Phoenix road race today. Oldfield finished third, seventeen minutes behind Louis Nikrent, but won the race on elapsed time. Nikrent was second, Beaudet third. Bramlette was beaten out of fourth place by W. C. Durant. The running time from Los Angeles was as follows: Oldfield, 23:01:35 2-5; Nikrent, 23:35: 56 2-5; Beaudet, 25:05:23 4-5; Durant, 26:01; Bramlette, 26:20:40 1-5.

Nikrent was first to finish, at 3:39:21 P. M., Bramlette followed at 3:52:21, and Oldfield was third at 3:56. Beaudet came in a minute later, and Durant trailed in at 4.35.

Oldfield had to drag his car out of the swollen Agua Fria River with a team of horses, and just outside of Glendale, nine miles from the finish, engine trouble stopped him again for a brief period. Bramlette dashed across the finish steering his car with two boards rigged as steering levers in place of the damaged regular gear.

The race was run in three legs, the first from Los Angeles to Needles, Cal., on Monday; the second from Needles to Prescott, Ariz., yesterday, and the last from Prescott control, 134 miles to the finish line, raced today. Eleven of the twenty original starters left Prescott this morning.

BOXING FOR EBBETS FIELD.

Brooklyn Club Plans to Cover Arena with Canvas—No License Yet.

Frank S. O'Neil, Chairman of the State Athletic Commission, yesterday received a decision from Attorney General James A. Parsons advising the Boxing Board that the specifications submitted to him showing the proposed structure that is to be built at Ebbets Field by the Brooklyn Sporting Club for the purpose of holding outdoor boxing contests were within the law. The matter was referred to the legal representative of the commission some weeks ago, after the application of the Brooklyn club had been denied, and then again placed before the Boxing Commissioners. Commissioner O'Neil asserted last night that this ruling does not mean there will be many open-air boxing contests next year, for each individual application for an outdoor club license will be turned over to the Attorney General's office for an opinion as to its legality. The decision does not mean, either, that it is compulsory for the commission to issue a permit to the Brooklyn Sporting Club, but it will undoubtedly facilitate the latter in securing its license. It indicates, however, that the provision of the Frawley law which prohibits boxing contests except when held in buildings can be overcome by outdoor clubs.

Just before the commission first denied the Brooklyn Sporting Club's application for a license Attorney General Carmody ruled against open-air sparring exhibitions. John Weismantle, manager of the Broadway Sporting Club, who represents the Brooklyn Sporting Club, insisted his club would live up to the letter of the law, and made a second request for a license which was tabled and the case was sent to Albany for the Attorney General's opinion.

Only a few weeks ago the license of an Albany club was revoked for conducting bouts in a baseball park. With proposed intention of inclosing the stands with canvas, the Brooklyn club has disposed of the legal obstacles in its way.

Manhattan Bouts at Empire Club.

Because of the ownership controversy which caused the Boxing Commission to temporarily suspend the license of the Manhattan Sporting Club, the McMahon brothers, match-makers of the latter organization, have shifted the locale. Cross-Gilbert Gallant bout to the Empire A. C., of which they are managers, and it will be held on the original date, next Tuesday night, in the New Star Casino. Cross has been preparing for the bout with the assistance of the Gibbons brothers, and is in shape to get revenge for the victory Gallant claims over him.

Fairmont Show Next Week.

Billy Gibson, manager of the Fairmont A. C., will put on a special show at the Bronx club next Wednesday night. Two ten-round bouts will be the feature of the card. White heavyweights will be the principals in one event, while for the other ten-rounder Gibson is endeavoring to arrange a match between two of the leading middleweights. This bout will be arranged today. The "white hopes" who will meet are Tom Kennedy of the west side and Colin Bell, the Englishman who recently arrived here.

Shugrue and Mohr at Broadway.

Young Shugrue of Jersey City, who recently returned from a successful tour of Australia, will box Walter Mohr of Brooklyn at the Broadway Sporting Club next Tuesday night.

Exonerates Broadway Sporting Club

The Broadway Sporting Club has been exonerated by the Athletic Commission of a charge that it had overcharged for a show two weeks ago.

New Six-Day Race Finish Rule.

The European rule for a one-hour finish of the six-day bicycle race in the Garden, instead of the usual mile sprint, was decided upon yesterday at a meeting of the riders. The finish rule has been the cause of much discussion among the riders, the foreigners claiming that in the one-mile sprint at the finish they would not have a fair chance, as the Americans and Australians have proven the best sprinters. They also claimed that they were accustomed to the hour finish in Europe, and if this were used they would have a better chance to get first money.

The European finish is based on a point system in which the riders are awarded points at the end of every fifteen laps, in the last hour at the end of the first fifteen laps, the leading rider receives points equal to the number of men riding, and the rider in second place at the fifteen-lap mark gets one point less than the leader, and this subtraction is continued with each rider until the last man gets only one point. At the end of every fifteen additional laps the same awarding of points is made, and at the end of the hour the team having the largest number of points gets first money. Under this system the rider crossing the finish line first may not be the winner.

Another innovation in this year's six-day race will be the offering of premiums every afternoon and evening for stolen laps and mile sprints, a total of $2,000 will be given in amounts ranging from $20 to $200—this in addition to the main prize money.

Monmouth County Hounds Meet.

The meet of the Monmouth County Hounds was at Red Bank Station yesterday afternoon and the run was over the open country to the north and west of Red Bank, with fifteen hunters taking part. The hounds were led two miles over the roads and lanes and were cast on Henry Grant's farm, crossing his big paddock near the homestead. They were checked at the Crawford farm and took the field over the fine piece of big timber there. The hounds were then thrown in on the Jacob Kelter farm, and the run led to "Mary Ogden's corner." This line of country is well known for the number of falls in hunting, and it maintained its reputation yesterday when six came croppers before checked at the "worry." Among those who rode and finished well up were Acting Master Howard A. Borden, Miss Mary Jones, Charles F. Hart, Herbert Strauss, Walter McClure, Charles F. Hart, Jr., Thomas Fields, M. Ellangie, Jack Borden, E. C. Ellangie, William Stonebridge, huntsman, and Joseph Clancy and Jack Long, whips. Among those who followed in automobiles were Mrs. Howard A. Borden, Mrs. Chapman, Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Halsey, and Mrs. W. Brothers Jones.

PENFIELD PUTS NEW SPIRIT IN TIGERS

Unhampered in His Coaching, He Improves Eleven Wonderfully.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 11.—A squad of coaches stood on the sidelines here today and watched the 'Varsity go through a good afternoon's work. Although powerless to interfere with the work of the squad, they witnessed one of the best exhibitions of real football which the team has thus far given. In the scrimmage with the scrubs, which lasted over an hour, there was so much fight shown that the fray had all the earmarks of a championship game. This may have been due in part to the splendid football weather, but most of the ginger was instilled through the medium of a long talk to the squad by Coach Penfield, Eddie Hart, and Arthur Poe.

During the scrimmage the 'Varsity succeeded in taking the ball across the goal line of the scrubs three times, Tibbott kicking the goal on each occasion. Dickerman made two of the scores by splendid line-bucking. The other came as the result of an intercepted lateral pass, Cahill getting the ball from the scrubs and running forty yards to a touchdown. The second team narrowly averted a fourth touchdown when they held the 'Varsity on their one-yard line after a run of thirty yards by Tibbott and line-bucking by F. Trenkmann and Dickerman had put the ball in this favorable position.

The scrimmage was run according to the regular rules of the game, with the time divided up into quarters, and Emmons, coach of the freshmen, acting as referee. The unity of attack shown, the fierce charging of the linemen, and the good interference afforded by the backs was one of the most encouraging signs seen in a long time.

Working by himself and keeping the other graduate coaches strictly under his orders, Penfield seems to have obtained splendid results in a very short while. He was exceedingly well pleased with the showing that the team made this afternoon.

Early in the practice Freddy Trenkmann sustained a slight injury which caused Penfield to withdraw him at once. Dickerman succeeded him and his showing was very good. Glick was on the field, but did very little, being kept out of the signal practice as well as the scrimmage. His condition is worse than it was first thought to be. Ballin engaged in the work about four minutes. He is in good condition, but is being saved as much as possible. Tibbott substituted for Ames at quarter for a short while.

YALE DRILLS IN BOWL.

Undergraduates March to Field and Cheer Eleven In Last Scrimmage.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 11.—Opening the Yale bowl to scrimmaging for the first time since its construction, the Yale undergraduates gave the football eleven a lusty parting ovation this afternoon. There were 1,500 students who marched to the bowl, cheered and sang enthusiastic war songs, while the regulars and scrubs ran through more than half an hour's scrimmaging, its last before the Princeton game.

Coach Hinkey drove the team through an exceptionally lively final scrimmage drill, and the regulars had on their scoring tops to the extent of five touchdowns, four of which the veteran Tommy Cornell gathered, one being forced over by Billy Easton. Cornell's runs featured the practice. He seemed irresistible when the scrub 20-yard line was reached. Mike Sweeney, the hockey Captain, who has come up fast at half back in the practice of the past three weeks, worked loose for three runs of 20 yards and Effie Waite for 2 of the same distance. Aleck Wilson ran the 'Varsity at top speed. He has not been troubled by the injury that benched him for three weeks since his return to scrimmaging on Monday.

Previous to the scrimmage in the bowl the 'Varsity rush line and scrubs practiced breaking through half an hour on the old Yale field.

The players will visit the gridiron tomorrow for signal rehearsal. They will leave here at 10:30 o'clock Friday to practice that afternoon in Palmer stadium. The Harvard backs have asked for the use of the bowl Thursday afternoon of next week for an hour, and it has been placed at their disposal.

Changes in West Point Line-Up.

Special to The New York Times.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Nov. 11.—There were some startling changes in the line-up of the Army football team this afternoon. The doubtful guard position went to Engeldinger again today. The newest aspirant for a 'Varsity berth played well today, and if he keeps up his work will have to be considered in the final contest. Oliphant at quarter back, in Capt. Prichard's place, was another important shift. The former Purdue star was a busy lad and got his plays away in whirlwind fashion. It was while he was driving the 'Varsity that the only score was made. Mitchell, who was sent back behind the line today, carrying the ball over after a line-smashing attack, he started on the scrubs' 35-yard line. Merrillat's continued absence is due to a thigh bruise received in a cavalry drill yesterday when he was kicked by a horse. Merrillat worked a short while at centre, later giving way to Goodman. Hoge, Coffin, and Benedict made up the 'Varsity backfield until Hoge was injured. He retired in favor of Mitchell. Bringham at end and Fleming at full back on the scrubs played well today. The latter got away for several good runs around the 'Varsity's flanks. Capt. Prichard took a day off.

Navy Tries Out Forward Passes.

Special to The New York Times.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 11.—Realizing that the Navy football team will have to play good football to win against Colby on Saturday, the coaches prolonged the scrimmage this afternoon, using all the regulars and more than a full team of substitutes, and drilling the team both on the attack and defense. The long forward pass plays were tried again and again, and the scrub backs were directed to try the same plays, so that the navy backs could be drilled in a formation that would prove an impregnable defense to them. A big Navy contingent was on hand, and satisfaction was expressed as to the manner in which the team has steadily progressed, as well as the brilliant work of Blodgett, Craig, and Miles in the back field.

The distribution of the Navy's quota of tickets for the Army game has been completed. Some naval officers received only two tickets, and none received over three. The distribution was by lot, and some of the seats were not well situated. Few civilians received tickets from the Navy quota. A great effort is being made to prevent scalping, and means have been taken to secure tickets offered for sale and to trace the person responsible.

Cullum Hall Beats Stevens Scrubs.

Special to The New York Times.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Nov. 11.—The Army's Cullum Hall team defeated Stevens Institute scrubs here today by a score of 41 to 0. Stevens relied upon open plays which were smeared by the cadets in easy fashion. The cadets found no trouble in penetrating Stevens's line for long gains, Lyon and Reaney starring in the West Pointers' attack. Line-up:

Army.	Position.	Stevens Scrubs.
Halsey	Left tackle	Schuyler
Duncan	Left guard	Milburn
Wogan	Centre	Eberle
Woodward	Right guard	Low
S. A. Smith	Right tackle	Searles
Krayenbuhl	Right end	De Brot
Stewart	Left half back	Monroe
Lyon	Right half back	Hopkins
C. C. Smith	Full back	Peters

NEW JOB FOR GLENN WARNER

Carlisle Football Coach Engaged for Ten Years by Pittsburgh.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURGH, Penn., Nov. 11.—The University of Pittsburgh has secured the signature of Glenn S. Warner to a contract calling for him to take charge of the university's football affairs for the next ten years is the report that came out today from a source that is regarded as authoritative.

It is said that Warner will come to Pittsburgh immediately after the close of the present season, which will terminate his contract with the Carlisle Indian School. Official announcement of the signing of Warner has not been made by the university athletic authorities, but it is expected to be made shortly. The contract was signed yesterday.

It develops also that in landing Warner Pittsburgh scored a great victory in a three-cornered contest for his services. Instead of having merely one rival to contend with in the University of Minnesota the Pittsburgh College was forced to outbid Cornell University.

The salary agreed upon is said to be in the neighborhood of $7,000 annually.

Schoolboys Scrimmage with N. Y. U.

With both the Morris High School eleven and its own scrub team to scrimmage with, the New York University team spent a hard afternoon of practice yesterday on Ohio Field. Before giving the Violet squad a taste of scrimmage, however, Coach Reilly gave some attention to punting, passing the leather, and other preliminaries, which was followed by a short, brisk signal drill for the regular eleven. The Morris team was then lined up against the Violet, the latter at first taking the ball and advancing it for large gains into the territory defended by the High School eleven. Some of the new plays were tried against the Morris team, and all appeared to work successfully. Capt. Huntley, in his new position at left half back, was repeatedly called upon to carry the ball, and each time the defending eleven was pushed further back toward its own goal line. Cusack participated in the scrimmage after an absence of five days and played a good game. Following the practice with the High School eleven, the 'Varsity was given an additional dose, when Coach Reilly called the second team men over and lined them up for half an hour's practice.

Fordham's New Quarter Back.

That the Fordham eleven will probably be directed by a new quarter back in the game against Vermont was again evident yesterday when "Billy" Rowan was continued at the position during the signal drill. Morcaldi, who has played quarter back this season, was a serious disappointment against the midshipmen last Saturday, losing a sure chance to score in the first quarter, when, with the ball at the 3-yard mark on the first down, he attempted to pierce the exceptionally strong Navy centre four times in a row. His tackling also proved below the standard. Rowan is much lighter than Morcaldi, weighing only 140 pounds, but against the Navy and Gettysburg elevens he displayed headwork that made a favorable impression on Coach Wymard. "Bud" Wymard surprised the Maroon followers by coming out in uniform, but owing to his crippled condition he was not called upon to do any hard work.

Exeter and Andover Play Saturday.

Phillips Exeter and Andover will play their annual football game on Saturday on the Andover Field. The Exeter boys believe they will be able to repeat their victory of a year ago, when they won, 59 to 0, as the only time they have been scored against this season was in the game of Saturday last, in which Worcester Academy managed to get the ball across the line once, the final score being 15 to 6. Should victory again rest with the Exeters, much of their success will be due to the brilliant playing of John Scott, who is one of the cleverest players in the back field the school has yet produced. Fast, gamy, and a heady player, he alternates with Quarter Back Kempton as the team's punter, his kicks being both long and true, and well placed. The team has a remarkable lot of young players besides the two named, in Edward Casey, Captain and half back; Austin Lake, full back; George Lowe, right end; Charles Commerford, right tackle and Wilbur Kirkpatrick, left tackle. The latter is a Junior from the New Hampshire school. They all look good for college material when they leave Exeter.

Tontine Best Derby Foxhound.

LAGRANGE, Ky., Nov. 11.—Tontine, owned by Gen. Roger Williams of Lexington, Ky., won the first prize at the bench show for Derby foxhounds at the meeting of the National Foxhunters' Association here today. Foster, owned by L. B. Shaw of Lexington, was second, and Hot Point, owned by S. L. Woolridge of Versailles, Ky., was third. In the Derby for females, S. L. Woolridge's Roxie was first, W. K. Bell was second, and S. L. Woolridge's Pride was third. In the all-age stake for dogs, Gen. Williams's Huss was first, and in the female class W. Kanzler's Luck won the decision. For the best dog or female Tontine again was the premier.

In the field trials, which lasted an hour, four foxes were pursued successfully. All but thirteen dogs have been eliminated, and these will start tomorrow in the all-age rake.

NOTES FOR THE ATHLETES.

The gathering of the delegates has already started for the annual meeting of the Amateur Athletic Union. Word was received at A. A. U. headquarters yesterday that John J. McGovern, assistant director of athletics for the Panama-Pacific Exposition, had left San Francisco for New York to attend the A. A. U. conclave at the Waldorf-Astoria next Monday. He is coming to explain to the amateur union the plans and arrangements made thus far for the holding of all the A. A. U. championship events in connection with the exposition, which opens on Feb. 20 next year and continues until Dec. 4. McGovern will also have something to say about the track upon which the A. A. U. and intercollegiate track and field championships will be decided. It has just been completed with a quarter-mile straightaway, and is expected to be the fastest cinder path of its kind in the world.

Word received by President Rubien of the Metropolitan Association from Buffalo, N. Y., indicates that the warring athletic factions of the Sixty-fifth and Seventy-fourth Regiments are once more at peace. The latter organization has accepted with grace the decision of the Registration Committee canceling its sanction of games on Jan. 1, and has applied for another date which will not conflict with the Sixty-fifth's arrangements. Commissioner Ed Reinecke has taken up the reports that reflect on the amateur status of certain unnamed athletes, and will attempt to bring to those who are guilty. He informed President Rubien that, despite the fact that the Sixty-fifth Regiment authorities failed to state the prizes they gave at their games last year, cups and medals were awarded the winners, and placed men in the middle of the armory floor, thereby disposing of an unpleasant feature of the controversy between the two Buffalo regiments. The Sixty-fifth plans to conduct the Western New York title games next April.

Hannes Kolehmainen of the Irish-American A. C. has purchased a half interest in a food store in Brooklyn. "In business before pleasure," says Hannes, and in the future he will not be as active in athletics as he was in the last indoor season.

James McLoughlin of the Irish-American Athletic Club, who left here last June in company with John J. McHugh, Inspector of Athletics of the Board of Education, for a trip through Europe, and had not been heard from since that time, has been in Copenhagen training the athletes of the Denmark Athletic Association. In a letter received at the Amateur Athletic Union headquarters yesterday McLoughlin stated that he would leave Copenhagen for home today, and expected to arrive here next Tuesday. He has a two-year contract with the Danes, but on account of the war it was impossible for him to fulfill it.

Preparations have been made to start the junior metropolitan cross-country championship race at Van Cortlandt Park on Saturday at 3 o'clock, so there will be no danger of the contestants being menaced by trains which cross one part of the course at frequent intervals. Those who are not at the line at 3 o'clock will be eliminated, says President Rubien. The [illegible] says the water jump, one of the stiffest points of the route which was climbed in the Church A. L. run last Saturday, will be included in the championship course, and several scorers will be stationed at this point which is about a mile from the finish line.

HARVARD WORKS OUT YALE ATTACK

Elis' Varied Styles Quite a Problem for Crimson to Solve.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 11.—It has been years since the Harvard team has got down to such hard work preparatory to fitting itself for meeting the attack of a Yale football team as it is doing this year. Last Fall Yale was followed closely all season and Harvard was ready, but this season, with the New Haven team putting on such varied football, and Harvard having to get ready for so many hard games at midseason, the bulk of the work in preparation for Yale has had to come in the last two weeks.

Today the 'Varsity substitutes and the scrubs went out for a long and very hard scrimmage, which the 'Varsity players watched from vantage points high up in the stadium. Later the regulars threw off their blankets and got down to work themselves. The team played even harder than yesterday, and probably engaged in its last hard practice of the week. The regulars are not finding it easy to stop Yale's several schemes of carrying the ball, and the men are not taking hold any too well.

The idea that Harvard has been smothering all the stuff that the scrubs have been putting on under what is understood to be the Yale method should not be believed by those who are following Harvard this Fall. The regular team worked against the scrubs today with the exception that C. Coolidge remained at left end in place of Jeff Coolidge, and Bigelow was back at centre. Jeff Coolidge has a weak knee, while Wallace still lacks condition and will be worked lightly so that he will be ready for the Yale game.

King replaced Bradlee in the back field late in the afternoon. Morgan, the tackle, who was doing so well until he broke his hand, was back in the line for the substitutes today, and he doubtless will do some playing against Brown on Saturday. Brickley was on the field, but did not have on his football clothes.

Next Tuesday the Harvard alumni will held a banquet in honor of the Crimson's winning Henley crew.

DURLAND HORSE SHOW.

Harness and Saddle Classes Judged After Music Ride.

A largely attended combination music ride and horse show opened the evening riding season at Durland's Academy on West Sixty-sixth Street last evening, the addition of the show proving an attractive feature, as it concluded with a jumping exhibition over 4 feet 6 inch fences.

Close to a hundred riders competed in the evolutions to music, the class being under the direction of Charles T. Krauss, and were extremely well mounted.

Among those in the saddle during the ride were Mr. and Mrs. John Gerken, Miss L. Ellinger, Mrs. A. Keys, J. Dreyer, Mr. and Mrs. R. Sauce, Dr. E. Beer, Miss Bennie Mr. L. Reynolds, Miss S. Peck, Miss Murphy, Miss J. Rutter, Miss J. First, Miss E. Trabe, Mrs. J. von Kline, Miss G. E. Reed, A. H. Sherwin, Mr. and Mrs. H. Rose, Mr. and Mrs. A. Klopf, A. Galston, Miss Burns, T. M. Alles, H. A. Wilson, Mrs. Alles, Miss M. Krauss, Miss Reynolds, Miss Krauss, Mr. Diamont, Miss H. Pratel, Mrs. K. A. Cobb, George Crouch, Mrs. J. Morgan, Miss C. Jefferson, and Mr. and Mrs. Leibowitz.

In the horse show which followed Mr. Gerken had no easy task in finding the winner of the class for pairs in harness, for Emil Seelig had three pairs of quality and style about equal in the eight pairs that competed. The blue finally went to Eva and Swave, a show pair of bays with smart action and perfect carriage that rather overtopped the exhibition of Rita and Sir Lipton, who were second.

In the other harness class—horses to runabouts—Flying Jib, a showy, high-stepping bay, had a practical walkover, as he easily outshowed any of the half dozen against him, though some of the spectators fancied the quieter and daintier Little Boy of C. Jutte, to which was awarded the red ribbon.

In the saddle classes there was a more numerous entry and rather sharper competition, though none of the critics seriously disagreed with Major Charles A. Denton, who acted as judge, in placing Monarch first in the class for the large horses, and awarding the blue to Picadilly Percy in the class for those under 15.2 hands. The awards:

Pairs of Harness Horses—Emil Seelig's Eva and Swave, first; same owner's Rita and Sir Lipton, second; same owner's Polonius of Maplewood and Kathleen F., third; Peter Manning's pair of bay geldings, fourth.

Saddle Horses over 15.2—Ambrose Preece's b. g. Monarch, first; Walter Baker's b. g. A. S. L., second; Emil Seelig's b. m. Miss Polea, third; O. J. Gude's b. g. Tommy Dodd, fourth.

Runabout Class—Emil Seelig's b. g. Flying Jib, first; O. J. Gude's b. g. Little Boy, second; Reginald Douglas's bay geldings, third; Emil Seelig's ch. m. Skeesicks, fourth.

Saddle Horses under 15.2—Miss Margaret Tompkin's b. g. Piccadilly Percy, won; Ambrose Preece's b. m. Lady Manners, second; J. Hampton's ch. m. Goldleaf, third; Walter Baker's b. g. Counter Balance, fourth.

Music Ride and Polo at Central.

Fifty riders were in the saddle at the second of the Wednesday night music rides at the Central Park Riding Academy, the class being under the direction of O. W. Coleman. A number of new and novel evolutions were tried with satisfaction to participants and spectators. Following the ride there was a pretty game of polo between teams made up of M. Wilder, O. W. Coleman, and J. E. Maher, wearing the red, who outplayed and easily defeated the team comprising John Breen, Cornelius Curry, and William Kiley, Mr. Coleman doing some clever riding in the first half, in which he succeeded in scoring all three goals earned by his team. A potato race furnished a lot of sport, and was won by Victor Dodd, with F. C. Weeks second and C. E. Judd third, among the seven who competed.

Trinity Club Re-elects Byrne.

Stephen A. Byrne was elected President of the Trinity Club for the third time at the annual meeting at the clubhouse, 167 Montague Street, last night. Edward P. Shields was chosen Vice President; William A. Pophler, secretary and treasurer, and A. I. Lemberg, financial secretary. The Rev. H. Melish, honorary President of the club, in his address to the members, stated that the past year was the most prosperous of the club. The annual dinner of the organization will be held on Nov. 22 at the City Club, Brooklyn, at which the principal speaker [illegible] James T. O'Loughlin, Registrar of Kings County. The Athletic Committee reported that Frank Stephenson, the sprinter, is far in the lead for the trophy to be awarded the athlete scoring the greatest number of points the year.

HORSE SHIPMENTS HELD UP

Dickerman Trotters and Madden Thoroughbreds Quarantined in Ohio.

A good sized shipment of trotting horses by Watson B. Dickerman of this city and the stable of thoroughbreds which John E. Madden has been racing in the East, together with a string of eighteen yearlings which he has been trying out at the Saratoga track, have been placed in quarantine at the Carthage Stock Farm just outside the City of Cincinnati, Ohio. The trotters shipped by Mr. Dickerman all came from Mamaroneck, and so far as known neither had been exposed in any way to the dreaded foot-and-mouth disease. But the Commissioner of Agriculture of Kentucky has declared a quarantine against all horses coming through Ohio, and especially against the feed in the cars in which they are shipped, and has refused to permit their entrance into Kentucky, whither both lots were bound.

A general embargo was issued against all horses from Ohio where the foot-and-mouth disease had shown itself, and this shipment, worth roughly $100,000, reached the Kentucky line just in time to be caught.

Shipments which were to have been made from breeding establishments in and about Poughkeepsie have been held up in consequence of dispatches received here bringing news of the unexpected condition of affairs. One car load has been shipped to Lexington by the Southern route in order to avoid the embargo, but re-routing of others consigned to the sales is not possible, as they are too near their destination.

AMATEURS IN THE RING.

Plenty of Hard Blows, but Little Science In Crescent A. C. Bouts.

No promising pugilistic talent was uncovered at the amateur boxing tournament of the Crescent Athletic Club last night at the clubhouse, Brooklyn. The programme was materially curtailed owing to the absence of many of the entrants in the five classes scheduled. The boys showed a willingness to mix matters, but few of them knew much about the art of self-defense. What they lacked in science they made up in earnestness, and while many of the bouts failed to go the regulation three rounds, there was plenty of action.

Some of the actions of the contestants bordered on the ludicrous, and created considerable amusement among the spectators. The summary:

108-Pound Class.—Preliminary Round—Charles Gillman, unattached, defeated Thomas Geary, Morningside A. C., three rounds, judges' decision; Max Wetsky, Educational Alliance A. C., defeated William Cicero, unattached, three rounds, judges' decision; M. Herbert, West Harlem A. C., defeated Harry McCann, Bronx Church House three rounds, judges' decision; Mike Stomules, Greek-American A. C., defeated Jacob Spiegel, Jimmy Flute Association, three rounds, judges' decision.

115-Pound Class.—Preliminary Round—A. J. Orris, East Side House, defeated J. Fleishman, East Side House, two rounds; C. Trojan, East Side House, defeated J. Kaplen, unattached, two rounds.

125-Pound Class.—Preliminary Round—Joseph Sheehan, West Harlem A. C., defeated John F. Bohan, unattached, two rounds; Willie Nagle, Union Settlement A. C., defeated Michael J. Petro, unattached, two rounds.

135-Pound Class.—Preliminary Round—Jack Tipliz, Educational Alliance A. C., defeated Lewis Wagner, Sackville Field Club, three rounds, referee stopped bout. J. Kaplan, Saxon A. C., defeated Fred Hueber, Pierce A. C., three rounds, judges' decision; Bernard Levine, Educational Alliance A. C., defeated O'Connor, unattached, one round; referee's decision.

108-Pound Class.—Second Round—M. Stanules, Greek-American A. C., defeated D. Rosenberg, East Side House, three rounds, referee stopped bout; Max Wetsky, Educational Alliance A. C., defeated John B. Harrison, unattached, three rounds, judges' decision; Matty Herbert, West Harlem A. C., defeated Charles Rosenberg, unattached, three rounds, judges' decision.

Sophs and Juniors Tie in Polo.

Columbia's sophomores played the juniors to a tie in the interclass water polo tournament yesterday. The final score stood 7 to 7 after two over-time periods had been played. All of the junior's points were made on thrown goals and a foul, while the sophomore team scored a touch goal and a thrown goal. Unless the teams are tied at the close of the tourney the game will not be played off. The most important contest will be played Friday between the freshmen and seniors, the team that has defeated. The winner of this game will win the tourney and the medals offered by L. Mouquin. The line-up:

Juniors.	Position.	Sophomores.
Moeller	Forward	Noble
Severs	Forward	Cooper
Wenstad	Forward	Lorenz
Mandell	Back	Vanderwater
Gibson	Back	Rogers
Levinson	Goal	Hyman

Substitutes—Hirshfield for Cooper. Goal—Hirshfield. Thrown goals—Wensley, (2,) Rogers. Meyers. Foul—Levinson. Time of halves—Eight minutes.

Lehigh Defeated at Soccer.

Special to The New York Times.

BETHLEHEM, Penn., Nov. 11.—Lehigh University's soccer team played a good game today but lost to the Cricket Challenge Association Cup Bethlehem team, 6 goals to 1. Millar starred for the winners, making four goals. Bethlehem used its two new players from Canada. Line-up:

Bethlehem.	Position.	Lehigh.
Scott	Goal	Dinnen
Murray	Right full back	Smith
Tance	Left full back	Sanford
Campbell	Right half back	Hewitt
Clark	Centre half back	Morrison
Phinson	Left half back	Tizard
Fletcher	Outside right	Reynolds
Lewis	Inside right	Schulz
Millar	Centre forward	Henderson
Pepper	Inside left	Magee

Schloss Wins Pocket Billiards.

B. McFarland failed in his attempt to concede 5 points to L. Schloss in the amateur handicap pocket billiards tournament last night at Doyle's Academy, and was defeated 75 to 65 in eleven frames. Schloss was playing for 70 points, while McFarland played at the scratch mark, 75 points.

Pye Victor In English Billiards.

Fred Pye scored another victory in the amateur English billiard tournament for the Dewar Challenge Shield at Doyle's Forty-second Street Academy last night, eliminating John O'Brien by a score of 250 to 176. The match went sixty-one innings, and was marked by indifferent playing by both men.

Bronx Kennel Club Show.

The announcement made at the Boston Terrier Club meeting that the Bronx Kennel Club had decided to postpone its show, set for Nov. 18, was unauthorized, it appears, and the show will be held as originally intended at The Whip, a hall at 1,922 Webster Avenue. Secretary Fensterer announces that already about a hundred entries have been received for the several classes, with promises of a large number of post entries on the evening of the show. The members of the club decided to hold their show in spite of its conflict of dates with that of the Long Island Kennel Club, as it will be a purely local affair intended for the owners and breeders in the Bronx

NEW YORK, THURSDAY, NOV. 12, 1914.

ORGANIZING FOR 1916.

It is announced from Washington that the Republican leaders are planning a careful and elaborate organization of the party forces for the Presidential campaign two years hence. That is a natural impulse, though it might be tempered by the obvious reflection that the substantial gains won this year came with almost no organization and with a minimum of effort. It was another demonstration of the inveterate habit of large numbers of Americans to vote against some one or something and not to be guided by any positive purpose. As we have taken occasion to point out, the result was a distinct warning to the Democratic Party, and should lead to a searching examination of its position, its tendencies, its dangers, and its resources. But the Republicans would make a serious mistake if they interpreted it as a vote of confidence in their policies.

These policies are, indeed, in a very vague and confused condition, a fact that rather helped than hindered this year when the party depended chiefly on discontent with the situation which followed two years of Democratic ascendency. Clearly, however, there will have to be a change in that regard if the Republicans hope to oust the Democrats in 1916. What will it be? What positive line of action do the Republicans expect to offer? The only one that can be inferred from the platforms and speeches of the recent campaign is the revision and raising of the tariff duties. That was the only specific issue raised, and it is noteworthy that the two most conspicuous representatives of the old, extreme, "standpat," "bargain counter" protectionism, PENROSE and CANNON, won the most decisive and unexpected victories. Their success and that of others only a little less extreme make it practically inevitable that the high tariff issue will be forced to the front. Judging by the aims of these leaders and by what the Republicans have done always when they have undertaken tariff revision this is the line that the opposition will take.

We do not think that it is a strong line of action. It is our judgment that the Republicans cannot win on it unless the Democrats aid them by their own mistakes. If the Democrats so conduct the affairs of the nation as to make the high tariff issue clear and controlling, we believe that they may count on success. To do this they must check or reverse the movement of distrust and apprehension shown in the late elections. It will largely be a question of administration of the legislation already enacted, and of extreme care in proceeding further. The measures passed for the regulation of corporate business have undoubtedly disturbed public confidence, and confidence can be restored only by caution, prudence, deliberation, and practical regard for real business considerations. To this policy the President is, we believe, strongly inclined. If his party in the two branches of Congress will be guided and restrained by him, the tariff issue, to which the Republicans are still wedded, will be made again the decisive one, to the great advantage of the party, and will be settled, we are confident, to the general advantage of the country.

PANDERING TO RADICALISM.

Mr. BRYAN is sure of Democratic success at the next national election because the party will draw to it all real Progressives. And the New York State Federation of Labor cannot understand the defeat of Mr. GLYNN, since he received the solid Labor vote. The idea that the Progressive and Labor votes cost more than they are worth does not seem to have occurred to these authoritative exponents of defeat. Yet the elections show, if they show anything, that there is in the community an element larger than either or both the Labor and Progressive votes which will vote against them, whoever the candidates and whatever the issues. The Progressive Party will be a running mate to defeat for any party which associates itself with its fads and empty promises. The Labor vote is an unknown quantity, because so many unionists do not mark their ballots as they talk, or, at least, as their leaders talk.

There never has been any clear proof that the Labor leaders can deliver the Labor vote, under a secret ballot system. The Labor question is important, but it is not all of politics, not even to unionists. Both the Progressives and the Laborites think that they are strong when they are extreme. The fact is that their strength decreases in proportion as they raise their bid to those of their way of thinking. The higher they bid the more they repel that moderate middle class which is the bulk of every electorate and the bulwark of our institutions.

Mr. WILSON is wiser than Mr. BRYAN. He offers no bids to the radicals, but says since the election that his programme is complete, that there will be no new disturbing legislation, and that some unfinished legislation will not be strenuously pressed. Mr. GOMPERS also is wiser than his lieutenants. He allows the little men to emphasize the defeat of their candidate, but himself does not advertise the results of the local or the national elections. It is the wiser way.

FORCING WOMEN TO VOTE.

The sentiment in the Southern States' Women Suffrage Conference against a Federal law extending the vote to women does the conference credit. The campaign conducted by Northern leaders in favor of such a measure is understandable; a short cut is more attractive than a long road, and if you don't get what you want it does no harm to ask. But not only is a Federal law unnecessary, but if the suffragists got it they would find it a source of weakness. Naturally they want to put their best foot forward when they get the vote, and they could not do it if in many of the States the women voters were unwilling and recalcitrant. Everywhere they get the vote they are on trial and are closely watched; if they display indifference and lack of intelligence they are sharply criticised, and their influence as voters and factors in politics becomes inconsequential. We assume that they do not merely want the vote, but desire to vindicate their possession of it and be regarded seriously and respectfully when they exercise it.

If they cram the vote down the throats of a large part of the United States which does not want it and is even hostile to it, the showing made on the first election day after this mistake is committed will be a body blow to the influence and standing of women in politics. The enfranchising of the negroes is a different matter altogether and affords no parallel or lesson except in one thing. That is, that the real friends of the negroes wanted to give the vote only to a minority of them at first and gradually to increase the number, and that had this been done the negroes might still have been voting today.

The strongest argument the suffragists have is to point to the States which have granted it and argue that the new voters have exercised their new right with intelligent interest. Are they prepared to throw that argument away? They will be throwing it away if through a Federal amendment they coerce a population indifferent to the ballot into using it. They may reply that they are after the ballot and not after a favorable opinion of the way it is used; but that reply would evince such an indifference both to the welfare of the nation and to their own true interest that the mere advancing of it would give point to the old argument that women are unfit to have the vote. Besides, we do not believe that any suffrage leader is short-sighted enough to hold such a view.

REGULATING REGULATION.

The proposal of a model Public Service Commission bill by the National Civic Federation shows that we have been "regulating" a long time in a very imperfect manner, and with inconveniences which it may be hoped the model bill may remove. For example, discussing this bill in THE SUNDAY TIMES Magazine, Mr. SETH LOW expressed his belief that only one public service corporation had been formed in New York under the rule of regulation. A more complete destruction of competition and discouragement of enterprise could not be desired. In this aspect regulation is only another way of confirming the monopoly of those existing corporations which possess the field, and are not regulated out of it.

Mr. Low's entry on the other side of the account, to the credit of regulation, is the dual subway system. The dual subway system no doubt is a credit entry, but rather to the credit of the individuals concerned than the system of regulation. If there had been no GEORGE MCANENY the Public Service Commission would hardly have produced the subway, even though Mr. WILLCOX had been its Chairman. But even Mr. Low perceives that the dual subway and the system of regulation together confirmed the monopoly of the Interborough in its own sphere of the subway, and of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit system in its sphere, it may be added.

Mr. Low further deplores a tendency of the system of regulation to deteriorate from a technical to a political composition of its commissions. He declares that > since the time of Gov. Hughes every experienced man has been retired from the commission as his term expired, and his position given to an inexperienced man belonging to the same party as the Governor appointing him.

That of course is not the fault of regulation, but of the methods of regulation. Another fault of method as illustrated in New York is the tendency to promise and undertake too much. The attempt to accomplish the impossible in New York cost the city the growth of ten years, and enormously increased the city debt. The capital would have been furnished by private enterprise, if it had not been contended that it was more to the public interest that the city should bend itself than that a private concern should make profits.

These are not arguments against regulation. They only illustrate that regulation should be more in the manner of what the Civic Federation is attempting. As Mr. Low says, regulation should allow a profit to private capital, and should stimulate rather than prevent private investment. There is a limit to what can be accomplished by taxation, and that limit has been nearly reached in New York for the present.

The city has not grown up to the burden placed upon it by the dual subway, which has not yet had time to take up the burden by its own operation. For the present public construction of further public utilities in New York is impracticable, which is only another way of saying that regulation is more than ever indispensable, and therefore should be improved as far as practicable. But let the new bill be as perfect as it may, will it make its way upon its merits? Will New York adopt it? The federation has made an attempt at a good thing, but the practical results may not be great.

THE DISTRESS OF THE BELGIANS.

The Belgian Legation is well advised in declining to give credence to the report coming by the way of The Hague and London that the German Governor of Brussels has issued a proclamation threatening "to close "all charitable organizations which "now feed the idle populace" unless the people "return immediately and resume their former activities." The threat to take from the mouths of starving Belgians food purchased for the most part with funds contributed by Americans and the unremitting effort to win for Germany the favor and good opinion of the people of the United States could hardly be considered as logical parts of a harmonious German policy. In the horror of its execution such a threat would surpass all the "atrocities" hitherto charged against the Germans and with justified indignation denied by them. It is, of course, out of the question for the Belgians to return to their usual industries and callings in a country occupied by and under the Government of their enemy, where the terribly destructive operations of the war are still going on, and where the lives even of civilians are in constant peril.

But the letter from Ambassador PAGE, which we printed yesterday morning, brings a refutation of this Brussels report. Mr. PAGE says that our Minister, BRAND WHITLOCK, and the Spanish Minister in Brussels "have secured the written promise of "the German military commander "that he will not confiscate food sent "for the relief of the Belgian popula- "tion, and I have a copy of this writ- "ten guarantee." It is safe to say that the various relief committees in this country may continue to send their supplies of food in the confident expectation that they will be used for the relief of the Belgian sufferers.

THE WHITMAN BOOM.

The Western newspapers that are acclaiming Gov.-elect WHITMAN as next Presidential candidate of the Republican Party will do him a favor if they refrain from putting such notions in his head. The less he thinks about the Presidency the more likely he will be to get it; for it is Mr. WHITMAN'S weakness that he makes a good impression until he begins to play politics, that when he does he plays it so as to chill his friends and greatly interest his enemies, and that a very slight temptation is enough to induce him to embark on this dangerous game.

The dearth of Republican candidates is, of course, largely responsible for this agitation. Nobody stands out on that side. There has been talk of BORAH and CUMMINS, but it evokes no enthusiasm; the Republican Party has been vegetating along without any Presidential figure. A man carries New York by a great majority, and the vacancy seems filled. If he can do it in 1914 he can do it in 1916—so runs the reasoning.

It is mistaken reasoning. New York frequently elects a State official for other reasons than his personal popularity, and in none of the comment evoked by the 1914 election, whether Democratic or Republican, has there been any intimation that Mr. WHITMAN'S personal popularity won this election. Murphyism, religious prejudice, the Sulzer frenzy, and other causes have been assigned. The Democratic Party nominated ALTON B. PARKER because he had carried New York in 1897, and therefore must be popular enough to do it again. The election of 1904 was a pretty severe defeat.

Nor, since the time of GROVER CLEVELAND, has the Governorship of New York been a stepping stone to the Presidency, save in the case of Col. ROOSEVELT. It has been, like the Mayoralty of this city, the graveyard of ambition. The enemies he made as Governor stood in HILL'S way; the Governorship discredited ODELL; it was fatal to DIX; it ruined SULZER; it retired FLOWER and HIGGINS from politics; friends of HUGHES and MORTON tried to get them nominated for the Presidency and failed.

If Mr. WHITMAN devotes himself to capturing the Presidency, if he builds up a personal machine over the bodies of ousted Democratic officeholders and organizes a publicity campaign in Albany, he will be playing the political game wrong again, and the mere fact that there is nobody else in sight will not get him the Presidency. It will not avail him to battle with BARNES if he battles only in the interest of the ambitions of WHITMAN. A personal machine is wanted no more than a party machine—not so much. If he forgets about the Presidency and about himself and behaves like CLEVELAND, he may get it.

SINGLE TAX AND DISEASE.

The connection between cattle disease and the single tax is not clear at first thought, but is expounded by the single taxers of New Jersey. It seems that the land which formerly was used for pasturage is now held as building lots. The result is that cattle owners who used to pay $50 an acre now are out of the market at $500 or $1,000 an acre. The result is that the cattle are kept too much in the barns, and that disease results in just the same way that overcrowding produces disease among humans.

It is a little difficult to see what the Equitable Tax League of Essex County thinks it proves by this discovery. The argument that existing methods of taxation make land dear is no less obnoxious than the argument that the single-tax system would make land cheap. The one is an argument to sellers and the other an argument to buyers. Inasmuch as there is a buyer and a seller in every transfer of land the argument does not get very far. A campaign to turn Montclair building lots into pastures would not carry that constituency, whatever the facts about the cattle disease. It would be cheaper and better for Montclair to get its milk somewhere else rather than adopt the single-tax system and then take a chance on the cattle disease. The Essex County League could not guarantee that the single tax would cure the cattle disease or reduce the price of milk.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

A Problem and Its Solution.

Gently, cautiously, and with the needed qualifications, but still clearly, the statement to the public issued by the Executive Committee of the Hospital Saturday and Sunday Association expresses an anxiety that unquestionably exists among those who best know the present and imminent needs of the city's poor. What they fear is that the many appeals now making in behalf of various classes of sufferers from the European war will evoke so many and such lavish responses on account of the peculiar poignancy and unfamiliarity of these appeals that our own charities may suffer a serious diminution of their customary support at a time when the demands upon them are sure to be unusually great.

The danger is real, but one can at least hope that the apprehensions of these experts, just because they are so well-founded, have somewhat exaggerated its importance. There is, for instance, more than a chance that much of the money now going abroad for purposes of relief comes from people whose sympathies could not be effectively stirred by anything less moving than are the excitements and horrors of a huge war. What they give to the foreign funds, therefore, is not drawn from, and does not decrease the amount—by no means a fixed and definite one, by the way—hitherto devoted to our local institutions and organizations.

It may be, too, that some of those who now say that they can give no more because they have already given all they can afford to the Belgians or the Red Cross are only using a new excuse for failing to give at all, not exemplifying a diversion of money from its wonted channel.

However that may be, the true remedy for the situation does not lie in repeating and acting on the sorry phrase, "Charity begins at home," but in heeding the wise suggestion of the committee mentioned above. "The heart-rending appeals from abroad," it says, "must not be ignored, but they must be met by special sacrifice on the part of favored America." In other words, our responsibilities and obligations, as human beings, to the victims of Europe's war are not such as to justify us in forgetting our own poor and unfortunate, or even in decreasing the assistance we have formerly felt able to extend to them. What they do demand is the further sacrifice that in all but exceptional cases is possible.

They Missed a Fine Opportunity.

That the man LOBY, just shot in the Tower of London, was a spy in the full definition of that word as used in military language, there can be no question. His guilt, as such, was proven and he confessed it. The execution of the death sentence passed upon him was therefore justified under the laws of war as they are understood, proclaimed, and accepted by every nation, the civilized as well as the uncivilized. Not one of them has any right to condemn, or even to criticise, the English for their severity in this case.

But, nowadays, the fact that a thing has been done in strict accord with the recognized laws of war does not, as formerly, put the act committed beyond the reach of—well, of uneasy examination. The impulse in that direction is made the stronger, perhaps, by the calm fortitude with which LOBY faced the firing squad.

For the shooting or hanging of spies when caught there are two imaginable excuses—it is necessary and it is deterrent. In the field the first excuse may be valid when facilities are lacking for the safe imprisonment of a man able and eager to carry dangerous information to the enemy. But such facilities were abundant in the case of LOBY, whom detection and exposure had made at least as harmless as any other prisoner of war. As for the deterrent effect of these executions, we all know that it is nil. While men can be found by the millions who are willing to face almost certain death in charging intrenchments and fortresses, the vastly smaller risks of even the most perilous forms of espionage will never create any difficulties for those who seek men, or women either, to perform such work.

Neither the necessity nor the utility of killing, not LOBY in particular, but any spy in like circumstances, is quite obvious. Moreover, it made a martyr to duty and a hero of a German who otherwise would have remained a man of no importance or distinction, and that, from the English point of view, was not notably judicious. Some of us, therefore, will feel that the British would have been better advised had they violated the savage old rule as to the treatment of spies, and that they missed an opportunity to be magnanimous that would have cost them nothing and yet have added not a little to their comparative glory.

Roadmaking Is Not for Amateurs.

This was an unfortunate time for holding a Road Congress, as public attention, which of late years has been slowly turning to such subjects as those discussed by the experts now gathered in Atlanta, has been distracted by the war, and that of the newspapers has gone with it. Even war itself, however, teaches the needed lesson as to the value of good roads, for upon their existence the successful and convenient conduct of that most regrettable of human activities, like so many better ones, is in large measure dependent.

The speakers at the Atlanta meeting have, of course, been unanimous in declaring that the very worst of roadbuilders are the politicians. The latter, no matter of what party, have an irremediable tendency to misuse money appropriated for roads. Of course they do not always steal it outright, but always they do and will seek in spending it to attain incidental objects—to serve private interests of their own that militate seriously against putting the money to its best uses.

None of the orators at this congress, as yet, at least, has ventured to characterize as it deserves the too familiar gubernatorial device of appointing a day on which "everybody," from the Governor down, shall go out and make or improve roads. Of all absurd proceedings that is about the most absurd, since its only effects are two, both bad—the doing of a little poor work by incompetent workers, and the creation in the minds of those workers of the illusion that they have performed a noble public service.

They would be nearly as well employed if they assembled to play fiddles or other instruments with which they were wholly unfamiliar, instead of employing trained specialists to play tunes for them.

Agility of Mind Saved Her.

One cannot help admiring, whether reluctantly or not, the mingled courage and shrewdness with which Mrs. O. H. P. BELMONT, speaking at the Conference of Southern Women Suffragists, answered a question as to what she thought about giving the vote to negro women.

A very delicate and dangerous question, that, in the circumstances, for even the most thoroughgoing of the Southern suffragists let it alone, and their foes are only too glad to raise it in order that they may be driven into obvious inconsistency.

Mrs. BELMONT boldly grasped the nettle. Instead of running away or whispering "Hush!" she said that the problem was one for the South to solve in its own wisdom and knowledge—which was conciliatory—and that for her part she only insisted that the rights of the negro woman should be the same as those of the negro man—which was adroit.

Somebody might have made trouble for her, or at least embarrassment, by telling her that what the South thinks of the evil of an already overextended suffrage was not to be cured by extending the suffrage still further in the same injudicious direction, but nobody seems to have thought of it, and her answer "went."

A DISCLAIMER.

German-American Company's Side of Loss of Its British Workers.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In your valuable paper appeared an article to the effect that the German-American Stoneware Works discharged British workmen. This is untrue, and we would, therefore, kindly request you to publish a denial.

This is an American corporation, truly neutral in accordance with the spirit of the message of our President. As to the matter in question, it is true that in one of our plants making sanitary porcelain we were obliged to reduce wages of the higher paid men, to make the same conform with the sales prices obtainable for the articles, but the wages of the common laborers were maintained, notwithstanding the fact that business is dull in this line. I have placed the matter before the men, asking their cooperation, which is most desirable, especially in these trying times. The men in question decided that their interest, no doubt, was better served by leaving our employ, and as much as we regret this, we, of course, cannot influence them to act against their own interest—if they are convinced that it is to their interest rather to be idle than to cooperate with us, and this is my first knowledge through your paper that these men were British subjects. Whether this is true I do not know.

To disprove the insinuation contained in your article, I might state that the business of this company is managed by gentlemen of various nationalities. For instance, I myself am a born German; our Assistant Secretary and Chief Engineer is an Englishman, and one of our sales managers is an American of old English stock, and another is an American of Scotch and Irish descent. The superintendents of our works are American, English, and German, having obtained their positions through merit, and not through the fact that they are members of one or the other nationality, and we pride ourselves to be a broad-minded, intelligent corporation, of true American spirit.

By giving this matter the publicity it deserves you will confer a favor upon

GERMAN-AMERICAN STONEWARE WORKS, LEWIS ALBRECHT,
Vice President and General Manager.

Culture for the Smaller Nations.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

What is German culture? In reading the panegyrics pronounced upon it by German soldiery and savants, who proclaim their intention of forcing it down the throats of other nations with the sword, I am reminded of nothing so much as of Mrs. Squeers administering brimstone and treacle to the hapless victims of Dotheboys School. I gather from Bernhardi and the rest of his tribe that German culture is something of which the Germans highly approve. If the Germans win will the world be converted into a gigantic Dotheboys School in which doses of brimstone and treacle will be administered daily to the smaller nations? German culture, like Mrs. Squeers's remedy, may be safely recommended to spoil the appetites of its victims for freedom and to reduce their high spirits.

WHAT AMERICA MAY DO.

Lord Channing Asks for a Pronouncement Upon Violations of the Hague International Compact and Unlawful Policy of Terrorism.

By LORD CHANNING OF WELLINGBOROUGH.

Lord Channing, who makes the following suggestion to American statesmen, was born in the United States of the well-known Channings of Boston. His father was the Rev. W. H. Channing, Chaplain of the House of Representatives during the civil war and a close friend of President Lincoln. Lord Channing has been for twenty-five years a member of the British Parliament, and for the last three years a member of the House of Lords, having been created first Baron of Wellingborough in 1912. He is President of the British National Peace Congress.

40, Eaton Place, London, S. W.,
Oct. 29, 1914.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

As a member of the British Legislature for a generation, and a life-long Liberal, and having also the closest ties of blood with America, and a proud reverence for her ideals, I would wish, with the utmost respect, to offer some comments on one specific aspect of present affairs, as they affect America, which does not seem to have been marked off with the distinctness its importance calls for.

This is the greatest crisis in the history of the world, and attention concentrates itself on the attitude of the greatest neutral State.

It is unthinkable that America can divest herself of responsibility for the final outcome. This seems as clearly recognized in America as in Europe.

To us in England this war is a life or death struggle between two principles—Pan-Germanism on the one side, with its avowed purpose to impose its hegemony, and its rigid system of ideas and organization, on the rest of the world, not by consent, but by irresistible military force; on the other side the claim of the other nations, large and small, to maintain inviolate their freedom and individuality, and to think and work out for themselves their own political and economic future in their own way.

The one principle would seem the flat contradiction of all that America stands for, the other principle would seem to be precisely the essential idea of free self-government and democratic evolution, in which are rooted the very life and being of America.

For this reason there is instinctive and profound sympathy on the part of the great majority of native Americans with the cause of England and her allies.

This sympathy is not merely the tie of blood or the unity of ideals. Reason has convinced Americans that the supreme principles and highest interests of America will be best safeguarded if the Allies win.

They dread instinctively what might happen if Pan-Germanism absorbed the smaller nationalities, crushed the great free countries like France and England, and dominated the whole world with the "mailed fist," not only Europe and the Far East, but South America and the Pacific. Perhaps the hint of Count Bernstorff that Canada may be treated like Belgium, and the Monroe doctrine, like other "scraps of paper," may also have thrown some light for Americans on a "Germanized" future! And a cast-iron system of commercial and industrial monopoly dictated by German needs cannot attract.

America Can't Stand Apart.

That is one side that American statesmen have to consider. There is, of course, another.

The United States visibly form the greatest force the world has yet seen to bring together, to unite, to assimilate, in the development of their vast territories, measureless resources, and complicated industries, all that is best from all the other great nations, welding slowly but surely, through free institutions, these new elements into instruments for the fuller realization of the generous and noble ideals for which America stands. Perhaps an eighteenth or even fifteenth part of the population is of German origin, a percentage not far from equal to that contributed by the United Kingdom and Canada.

There is thus not only the broad question of avoiding war with Germany, whose people have so large a share in the life of America, a war doubly unwelcome at all times because of the innumerable links of science, invention, professional training, of commerce, and of personal friendship; but there is also the local question of peace and goodwill in the daily work of America as between huge sections of her population. These visible facts not unnaturally give great weight to the argument for neutrality. No wise man on this side of the Atlantic will try to ignore them, or take exception to the dignity and correctness with which the American Executive has dealt with the grave problem before it.

Neutrality has, of course, its limits and conditions, logical and moral. Those limits and conditions, the possibility of their infringement in such a way as to make some change of policy imperative, are matters solely for the United States.

The point the present writer wishes to press is on a different plane, and is precisely this:

America does not and can not stand wholly apart from supreme European decisions.

America is as responsible as Europe for the great extensions, definitions, the strengthening and modification of international law. America stands forth as the apostle of arbitration, to widen the area within which disputed points may be determined amicably. America stands also as the chief signatory of the great world conventions which have settled new rules for the conduct of war, to mitigate its horrors, especially for non-combatants.

America has taken a noble part in framing machinery for securing peace and justice, and in moving forward the landmarks of civilization as against savagery, and of human mercy as against cruel terrorism.

Can America safely or wisely divest herself of the duty thus placed upon her, logically and morally, by her participation in this, the noblest work of our age?

And is it wise or is it safe to indefinitely postpone the discharge of this duty?

By the events of the past three months the whole of this new charter of humanity has been challenged and is at stake.

Is it not sound policy as well as an imperative duty to take some step here and now to "stop the rot," and to make good here and now as much as we can of what we have won and wish to keep?

Belgium's Wrongs.

Admittedly a "guiltless and unoffending nation,"* whose neutrality and independence had been solemnly guaranteed by treaty, to which the powers concerned in the war were parties, has had her treaty rights violated by one of these powers on the cynical plea that there is no right or wrong as against national interest, that necessity obeys no law, and treaties are "scraps of paper." That is not matter for inquiry or judicial decision at some later date. It has been frankly avowed by the German Government from the outset of this war.

Again, this admitted wrong is not the sudden and unavoidable outcome of events unforseen and uncontrollable. It has been deliberately planned years ahead, with elaborate preparation of railway and other facilities, and with every invention and contrivance, to rush in irresistible forces; to subvert and destroy the independent State that Germany was herself pledged to defend.

Thirdly, this policy of absolute annihilation of Belgium, of its right to live its own life, its right even to preserve those monuments of its noble and beautiful history which had become treasured heirlooms of the whole world, has been carried out with a ruthless barbarity to the people, and especially the non-combatants, for which it is hard to find a parallel in the worst incidents of the Thirty Years War or of the devastation of the Palatinate. To bring the actual guilt home to those who actually did or ordered these deeds to be done in individual cases is one thing. The broad fact that these barbarous deeds were done stands manifest and insistent, and demands such instant action as can be taken by a great and responsible people.

And, lastly, there is the undisputed adoption of the policy of terrorizing non-combatants to submission by such acts as forcing women and children to walk before the advancing enemy, the wholesale burning of houses, shooting of hostages and other non-combatants, and the dropping of bombs from aeroplanes, not on forts or troops, but on places where women and children can be killed or injured.

And all this tragic sweeping away of such good things as had been won with world-wide consent, at the instances of the Czar in initiating The Hague policy, has gone on, so far as it could go on, with equal horror, throughout Northern France. Rheims and Senlis have suffered the fate of Louvain and Termonde and Malines, and Paris has had her quota of women and children wantonly slain by bombs, exactly like Antwerp.

The Threat to England.

And America knows, as we here in England know, from the open menace of the German press, writing of England, as the one supreme enemy, that it is the full intention of Germans, if they can, to carry through England, too, even more ruthlessly, the same policy.

We are fighting here, and are confident that we shall fight with success, not only to protect our English homes and to guard the historic buildings of this land, but to make an end of this Prussian terrorism of the world; to secure no national aggrandisement, but to secure a permanent and solid peace, based on guaranteed liberties, and a rational settlement of the question of armaments.

These questions touch us all the more because many of us have been the most persistent friends of international peace, and have specially labored to promote happy and friendly relations with the German people. The present writer, who was honored by election as President of this year's National Peace Congress, has been associated with the work of men like Lord Brassey, Sir John Lubbock (later Lord Avebury,) as a member of the Anglo-German Friendship League, and has repeatedly in Parliament argued against any hostile or provocative attitude toward Germany. This war is our answer and our reward!

So far as can be judged from authoritative words of President Wilson and ex-President Roosevelt, America does and will claim a right to share in the final settlement of the terms of a permanent and stable peace.

If that claim is sound, if the efforts of America to create better machinery for securing peace and for generously and humanely vindicating the liberties and happiness of nations and of the individuals who make them up do entitle America to a voice, and a potent voice, in the work of mending and remaking the world after this terrific catastrophe, then I would submit with all respect that it is really idle to wait till all the recognized principles of what has been held to be right or wrong as between nations, and what has been held to be right or wrong in the methods of conducting war, have gone overboard, without one word of protest; we must save the world first, if we are to have a real chance of remaking it on lines which are worth having.

A Pronouncement Needed.

Nothing but good could come from immediate action by the American Executive to assert as they, best of all nations, could assert, now and at once in terms uncompromising, unanswerable, that the ground taken up by international consent in the past generation must be held now and hereafter, and accepted as an essential basis of the final settlement.

Such a pronouncement now by America would make a landmark in history—would render a measureless service to the whole world in emancipation from the persistent degradation of the twin doctrines that might makes right, and that necessity knows no law, and would bring to America herself imperishable honor and glory in the fearless assertion and eternal consecration of her own noblest ideals.

I would submit further that such a national declaration by America involves no violation of neutrality, and is in no sense inconsistent with the spirit of official utterances already made.

To take the latter first—we have had notable utterances from the President and from the ex-President.

President Wilson seems to have given a sympathetic hearing to the mission which laid the case of Belgium before him, both as to the violation of Belgium's neutrality and as to the cruel treatment of the non-combatant population and the wanton destruction of towns and villages and of precious historical monuments. He is understood to have promised an investigation, and it is gathered from The Independance Belge this week that this investigation has been, and is being, carried out by American military attachés in Belgium, and also at the London Embassy of the United States.

Again, President Wilson's recent letter to the Kaiser, while confirming neutrality in precise terms, went on to intimate that there must be a "day of settlement" and that "where injustices have found a place results are sure to follow, and all those who have been found at fault will have to answer for them." If the "general settlement" does not sufficiently determine this, there is the ultimate sanction of "the opinion of mankind" which will "in such cases interfere." He would apparently reserve judgment until the end of the war, but in no way disclaims or surrenders American responsibility.

Mr. Roosevelt's Plan.

Mr. Roosevelt is not tied by official responsibility, and can speak with less restraint and more freedom. In The Outlook he has substantially accepted and indorsed all that is material in the Belgian case.

America should help in securing a peace which will not mean the "crushing the liberty and life of just and inoffending peoples or consecrate the rule of militarism," but which "will, by international agreement, minimize the chances of the recurrence of such world-wide disaster," and "will, in the interests of civilization, create conditions which will make such action" as the violation of Belgian treaty rights impossible in the future.

Like President Wilson, he seems to think that the time for judicial pronouncement on acts presumably guilty and wrongful will come at the conclusion of the war. At the same time he surrenders no part of America's responsibility, but reaffirms it with all the force of his trenchant style.

But elsewhere and later he has insisted on the "helplessness"—the "humiliating impotence created by the fact that our neutrality can only be preserved by failure to help to right what is wrong."

And he has gone on to adumbrate his practical remedy—"a world league" with "an amplified Hague Court," made strong by joint agreement of the powers, to secure "peace and righteousness," and to vindicate the just decisions of such a court by "a union of forces to enforce the decree." He adds that this might help to obtain a "limitation of armaments that would be real and effective."

That is happy a plan may be capable of realization would be the hope of all wise men.

But where I take exception with Col. Roosevelt is as to America's present "impotence"—that nothing effectual can be done by America without breaking her own neutrality.

That view I wholly traverse. It might conceivably be felt by America, under certain grave eventualities, that neutrality must be broken.

But it is clear that the articles of The Hague Convention of 1907 amply provide for the type of action here and now by the United States which I have ventured to lay before American statesmen in this paper. And, in my opinion, it is conceivable that more good might be achieved by America taking that action, while maintaining her neutrality.

It goes without saying, it really needs no demonstration, that nearly every international agreement embodied in The Hague Convention has been broken, wholly or in part, in the letter and in the spirit, in the proceedings of this unhappy year.

The violation of the territory of a neutral State by the transit of belligerent troops and other acts of war is forbidden (Articles 1, 2, 3, 4, &c.) It is the duty of the neutral State not to tolerate, (Article 5,) but to resist such acts, and her forcible resistance is not to be regarded as an act of war (Article 10.)

Interference with Neutrals.

That, of course, covers the case of Belgium completely, and establishes absolutely that there is, and need be, no breach of neutrality in resistance thus legally sanctioned to illegal interference with neutral rights.

It is hardly necessary to recapitulate the articles that have been torn up. To refer to the most striking, there is the repeated bombardment of undefended towns, pillage incessant throughout Belgium and Northern France, (Articles 28 and 47;) the levying of illegal contributions, (Articles 49 and 53;) the seizure of cash and securities belonging to private persons, banks, and local authorities, (Articles 52 and 56;) collective penalties for individual acts for which the community as a whole are not responsible, (Article 50.) Articles 50 and 43 should have made impossible the punitive destruction of Visé, Gerschen, Dinant, and Louvain, and numberless villages; Article 56 should have preserved from destruction institutions and buildings dedicated to religion, education, charity, hospitals, &c. All these wrongful acts, committed everywhere, have been prohibited by these articles.

The gradual introduction of the policy of terrorism has been ably traced by perhaps the highest French authority on international law, Prof. Edouard Clunet, formerly President of the Institute of International Law, in a recent address.

"Bombardment par intimidation" was adopted by the Germans in 1870, and used at Strassburg, Paris, Péronne, &c., shells being directed and conflagrations spread in the inhabited parts of towns apart from the fortifications. Germany herself assented to serious mitigations of this practice at the Conference of Brussels in 1874, and at The Hague in 1907.

The worst evolution of the policy of terrorism has been in the throwing from aeroplanes of bombs, explosives or incendiary. M. Clunet lays down that by the most recent decision of the Institute, bomb throwing from aeroplanes must follow the rules of bombardment by artillery. This would prohibit such bombs without formal notice. But in Antwerp bombs were dropped without notice over the Royal Palace to the peril of the Queen and her young children, and the number of peaceable inhabitants killed or injured was 38, three children being mutilated in their beds. In Paris, besides the bombs dropped on Notre Dame, bombs were deliberately dropped in the public streets, and a number of peaceable victims killed or wounded. The dropping of bombs as an act of war on fortresses, ammunition depots, Zeppelin sheds, &c., is, of course legal. But the bomb dropping adopted in Belgium and France, and threatened in England, if the opportunity arises, is undisguised terrorism, and not war.

It is important to note also that at Brussels, in 1874, Antwerp addressed a petition to the Conference praying that any bombardment should be limited to fortifications only. The Commission of the Conference, which included three well known German Generals and two professors, recognized the justice of this plea, and recommended Generals to conform to it.

America's Opportunity.

But one point that should appeal most strongly to the patriotism as well as the idealism of America is the fact that the instructions of 1863 for armies in campaign, drawn up by the United States Government in the height of the civil war, first codified the laws for the conduct of war, and have been the source and starting point of all these later international agreements.

And it should be remembered that both Germany and America signed the Fourth Convention of The Hague with its annexed regulations as to sieges and bombardments (Articles 22 to 25) and the further provision which may even yet be applied punitively to the proceedings of the present war. "The belligerent," who shall have violated the provisions of the said regulation shall be held liable for an indemnity."

And if it be thought that America can render no help in such a position as the present without violating her neutrality, the answer is that by Article 8 of the Convention of The Hague, 1907, neutral powers have the right to offer their suggestions (bons offices) or their mediation, even during the course of hostilities. And further: "The exercise of this right must never be considered by one or other of the parties to the conflict as an unfriendly act."

With all submission, I earnestly urge on the leaders of American thought to support this attempted interpretation of the supreme duty and the noble opportunity the present position places before their country.

One more word. I referred to the possible benefit of neutrality being maintained while this protest against wrong and appeal for right is at the same time advanced.

Is it not more than probable that there is an immense section of moderate, though patriotic, opinion in the great German people which at heart deprecates the extreme doctrines of conquest and world supremacy in pursuit of which the great, the wonderful achievements of the German race in science, in industry, in the extension of commerce, are being rashly risked?

OPERA BOXHOLDERS AT METROPOLITAN

Season Opening Monday Night Promises to be Brilliant Regardless of War.

NEWCOMERS IN PARTERRE

Mrs. John Jacob Astor to Share W. Seward Webb Box — Mrs. W. Watts Sherman an Attendant.

Society will be interested in the authoritative list of boxholders at the Metropolitan Opera House for the season of 1914-1915, which was issued yesterday. The season begins next Monday night. There are several interesting newcomers among the occupants of the parterre and mourning has effected a few changes. The season socially promises to be even more brilliant this year than last, regardless of the European war.

The occupancy of the boxes as usual has been much cut up and divided into leases and sub-leases.

Mrs. John Jacob Astor, widow of Col. Astor, will share the W. Seward Webb box, No. 22, this season on odd Mondays. This box is between Box 20, owned by Ogden Mills and Mrs. Whitelaw Reid, and Box 24, owned by Robert W. Goelet, who is sharing it this year with Henry M. Tilford, Mrs. F. F. Thompson, Egerton Winthrop, and Mrs. Henry B. Hyde. E. H. Gary is to have Box 22 for the opening night.

Mrs. W. Watts Sherman is also to make her appearance at the opera after a period of mourning, and will be in Box 5 on even Mondays, and she also has Box 7, owned by Vincent Astor, for odd matinees. Mr. Astor and his bride will be regular attendants at the opera this season, having recently leased a house on Park Avenue.

Mrs. Harold Brown is a newcomer in Box 5, sharing it alternately with George Peabody Wetmore. Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr., has it for the opening night. Mrs. J. Sergeant Cram has it for odd Fridays, Mrs. Frank S. Witherbee for even Fridays, Gen. Howard Carroll for odd Wednesdays, J. B. Cobb has it for even Wednesdays, and Mrs. Clarence M. Hyde will occupy it at odd matinees.

Mrs. E. H. Harriman in Box 9.

Mrs E H. Harriman and Mrs. Willard D. Straight are to share Box 9 alternately, and Mrs. Daniel S. Lamont has it for Wednesdays. Mr. and Mrs. F'nley J. Shepard have retained Box 25 for Thursdays. Mrs. Vanderbilt will share her place in the golden horseshoe this season. Box 31, with Charles E. Sampson and John M. Bowers.

Mrs. James Henry Smith is a newcomer in the boxes with even numbers, having Box 18 for even Mondays, owned by Charles B. Alexander. Miss Helen Grice, Mrs. Fritz Achelis, and Mrs. Burke Roche are among the other occupants.

Mrs. Charles H. Senf is another newcomer, having Box 28, owned by Will'am Ross Proctor, for matinée. Clarence H. Mackay has Box 29, owned by W. Bayard Cutting, for Mondays. Mrs. Pembroke Jones has Box 32 for the opening night, and Percy R. Pyne is a newcomer in the sub-division of this box, sharing even matinées with George B. Post.

Mrs Philip M. Lydig, after an extended absence abroad, will be seen in Box 2, which Mr. Lydig has leased for even Mondays. Edmund L. Baylies also retains Box 53 in the grand tier for Mondays.

The occupancy of Box 34, owned by the late James B. Haggin, has been affected by mourning. M. Taylor Pyne has the box for Mondays, ex-Governor Whitman, Chauncey Depew, Charles M. MacNeill Thursdays; John D. Ryan Fridays and Mrs. Hamilton Fish, who is a newcomer, has it for even matinées.

In the Parterre.

1—Mrs. Ogden Goelet.

3—Mr. Orme Wilson, Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, alternately; E. Reeve-Merritt, Wednesdays.

5—George Peabody Wetmore, Mrs. Harold Brown, alternately; Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt Jr., opening night; George Peabody Wetmore odd Mondays; matinées, Mrs. W. Watts Sherman, even Mondays; Gen. Howard Carroll, odd Wednesdays; J. B. Cobb, even Wednesdays; J. Sergeant Cram, odd Fridays; F. S. Witherbee, even Fridays; Mrs. Clarence M. Hyde odd matinees.

7—Vincent Astor. Mrs. W. Watts Sherman odd matinees.

9—Mrs. E. H. Harriman, Mrs. Willard D. Straight, alternately; Mrs. D. S. Lamont, Wednesdays.

11—Arthur Curtiss James, Archer M. Huntington, Mrs H F Shoemaker, even Wednesdays; Joseph Bastman, odd Thursdays; Charles M Pratt, Wednesdays; Stuart Duncan, Fridays.

13—Mrs. Lloyd S. Brice, H. A. C. Taylor, E. S. Harkness even Wednesdays.

19—Henry C. Frick.

23—Elbridge T. Gerry, Mondays, matinees; Mrs. Louis T. Hoyt, Wednesdays; J. Stuart Blackton Thursdays; Edward J. Berwind, Fridays.

25—Mrs. C. G. Haven, John E. Parsons, Finley J. Shepard, Thursdays.

27—Mrs. Rowland B. Mahony, Fulton Cutting, Clarence M Bowen, even Mondays.

29—Mrs. Richard Gambrill odd Mondays, even Fridays; Mrs. J. Stewart Barney even Mondays odd Fridays; Mrs George D. Pratt Wednesdays; Mrs. Murray Young, odd matinees; Mrs. E. S. Ludlow, even matinees.

H—Jonathan Bulkley, Mondays; Kenneth Van Riper, Wednesdays; Mrs. Robert Benson Davis, Saturday matinees.

J—Mrs. George Claussan, Mondays; J. Burling Lawrence, Fridays.

V—John W. Herbert, Mondays; Albert Plaut, Wednesdays; Mrs. Axel Oppenheim, Fridays; J. Van Vleck, Jr., Saturday matinees.

W—Jacob Langeloth, Mondays; Mrs. Albert Barnes Boardman, odd Wednesdays; Vincent S. Mulford and J. M. Greenfield, even Wednesdays.

The stall boxholders also include many newcomers.

MISS CALHOUN'S WEDDING.

The wedding of Miss Julia J. Calhoun, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John C. Calhoun of 667 Madison Avenue, and the Baron Egbert de Nagell, son of the Baron and Baroness William de Nagell of Holland, will take place at 4 o'clock on Tuesday, Dec. 8, in St. Thomas's Church, and the Rev. Dr. Ernest M. Stires is to officiate. There is a bit of sentiment associated with the date, which is the forty-fourth anniversary of the marriage of the Baron de Nagell's parents. The Baron will wear the uniform of the Order of St. John of Jerusalem, and Henry Hughes, a son of Admiral Hughes and a member of the Century Opera Company, will sing during the ceremony.

Miss Calhoun will have two matrons of honor, Mrs. Newell W Tilton, (Miss Mildred Bigelow), and Mrs. Eugene E. du Pont of Wilmington, Del. A nephew of the bride, John C. Calhoun, 3d, will be the page. The ushers are to be John C. Calhoun, Jr., James E. Calhoun, and D. Adams Calhoun, brothers of the bride; Count de Rechteren Limburg, Jonkheer W. H. de Beaufort, Secretary of the Netherlands Legation at Washington, will be the Baron's best man.

MOORE-WIGGINS WEDDING.

Daughter of Mrs. James Wiggins the Bride of Lewis B. Moore.

The wedding of Miss Lorraine Wiggins, daughter of Mrs. James Wiggins, to Lewis Bassett Moore, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harrison S. Moore of Flushing, L. I., took place at 4:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon at the home of the bride's mother, 321 West Seventy-sixth Street. The Rev. Dr. Henry Evertson Cobb performed the ceremony in the presence of the relatives and a few intimate friends. A reception followed.

The bride, whose brother, J. Clifford Wiggins, gave her in marriage, wore a gown of white faille silk trimmed with rose point lace. Her point lace veil, worn by her mother at her wedding, was held in place with sprays of orange blossoms, and she carried a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley.

Miss Alma Bennet acted as maid of honor and the bridesmaids were Miss Mollie Kilner and Miss Marjorie Arlsenburgh, a cousin of the bride. An aisle was formed by ribbons held by Miss Pauline Moore, Mrs. Ralph Runyon, Mrs. H. F. Funke, Miss Mary Brinckerhoff, and Miss Vivien Maxwell.

Elmer Williams Moore was his brother's best man. The ushers included Clinton B. Smith and J. Chester Johnson.

MISS GRACE CABLE A BRIDE.

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Cable Married to L. J. Harding.

The marriage of Lawrence Jenckes Harding, a son of Mr and Mrs. Louis Brauch Harding of Chestnut Hill, Mass., and Miss Grace Laurie Cable, a daughter of Mr and Mrs. Robert Cable, took p'ace at 8:30 last evening at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Cable, 80 West Eighty-ninth Street, which was decorated with Autumn leaves and white and pink chrysanthemums. The Rev. Arthur H. Judge performed the ceremony.

The bride's sister, Miss Grace Cable, was her only attendant. She was gowned in palest pink and satin trimmed with lace. She carried pink roses. There were no ushers. Louis B. Harding, Jr., was his brother's best man. None except relatives were invited to the ceremony, and there was no reception.

Mr. and Mrs. Harding will make their home at Brookline, Mass., after their honeymoon trip.

MISS AUGUSTA BOYD WEDS.

The Bride of Harold L. Flint—Her Sister Maid of Honor.

The wedding of Harold Lusk Flint, a son of Mrs. Frederick W. Flint of Larchmont Manor, N. Y., and Miss Augusta Leontine Boyd, a daughter of William A. Boyd, was solemnized at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon at the town house of Mr. Boyd, 24 East Seventy-eighth Street. The Rev. Dr. Richard Cobden, rector of St. John's Episcopal Church at Larchmont Manor, officiated.

Miss Rohe Weds Leopold Sommer.

Miss Gertrude Rohe, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Rohe of 17 West Eighty-seventh Street, was married to Leopold Sommer at 8 o'clock last evening in the Church of the Advent, Broadway and Ninety-third Street. The Rev. William M. Horn, minister of the church, officiated.

Miss Elsa Dohse was maid of honor. The bridesmaids were the Misses Vivienne Kranich, Loretta Kuser, Olga Moore, and Francis Paine.

Mr Sommer had as best man his brother, Charles W. Sommer. The ushers were John Dohse, John Sommer, William Frammer, and Charles Rohe, Jr. The ceremony was followed by a reception at the Hotel Savoy.

WHITE—SAPINSKY.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel White of Brookline, Mass., announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Frances White, to Lee Welvin Sapinsky of New Albany, Ind. Mr. Sapinsky was graduated from Harvard, class of 1912. No date has been mentioned for the wedding.

Goldlust-Morgan Engagement.

The engagement is announced of Matthew R. Morgan, a painter and a son of the late Matt Morgan, cartoonist, to Miss Lillian Goldlust, a cousin of Mr. Morgan's first wife, the latter having died more than a year ago. Miss Goldlust is a pianist and spends most of her time at Nutley, N. J., but when in New York she lives with her brother, Dr. James Goldlust at 138 East Ninetieth Street. The marriage will take place in New York early next week.

WAR IS CHANGING STAGE, SAYS JEROME

Still More Uncertain Than Ever Before, Declares English Dramatist.

PUBLIC DEMANDS NOVELTY

But Hard to Tell What Play Will Satisfy—Literature, Too, is Changing Its Style.

Jerome K. Jerome, the English author and playwright, who has been on a lecture tour in the West, returned to New York yesterday. He is to sail for home Saturday morning. Mr. Jerome is of the opinion that English and American publishers and dramatic producers must give the public something new if they are to have success. Literature, he says, is changing its style.

"The war in Europe is changing everything," said Mr. Jerome at the Prince George Hotel last night, "and when I say everything I, of course, mean to include the stage which is still more uncertain than it ever was before. It is a really great producer who can beg'n to tell when a play is to satisfy a present-day audience.

"Take Bernard Shaw, for instance he has recently had three failures on the stage and only one pronounced success—'Pygmalion.' Sir Arthur Pinero has made several failures and Henry Arthur Jones is by no means infallible. As for myself I don't know when the fickle public will applaud or deride.

"There is, of course, at no time a recipe for dramatic success. One play of great merit fails; another of comparatively little importance makes a great hit. A short time ago the simple country play was in the ascendancy. Mr. Moffat with his 'Bunty Pulls the Strings' hit the popular fancy, consequently a dozen similar plays dealing with the rural life of Scotland, of Ireland, or of England, north, south or west, were produced with unanimous failure. 'Peg o' My Heart,' a play similar in character at least in its simplicity, has lived solely through the personal popularity of Miss Laurette Taylor. Just now it seems that the melodrama, particularly the American melodrama, with the all-conquering hero, a revolver in each hand, bencing and blazing his way to success and matrimonial happiness, is the large figure of the stage. But its flamboyant conqueror will doubtless go the way of the others, his predecessors.

"So it may seem that the rôle of dramatist in England is even less desirable than that of his fellow in America and just at present, with war closing most of the theatres and distracting the whole English people from the theatre, the playwright is indeed in a sorry situation.

"The strangest thing about the British theatre public is its total disregard for names. Where in America a Barrie play or a Shaw play is rapidly sure of a large following, in England no one is saved from the displeasure of the crowd. Barrie, Shaw, and Pinero are just as susceptible and just as open to condemnation as any of the younger and more inexperienced of the playwrights. Even Edward Knoblauch and Harold Bennett in collaboration seem to have been the most uniformly successful of the present-day writers.

"The novelist has a much more happy lot than the playwright, for the work of an established novelist is sure of a steady sale. Literature is, at this time save the present, when the British world, at least is turned topsy-turvy.

"Of conditions in England generally the American cannot conjecture. The factories are closed; every family has at least one representative in the army; business is at a standstill, and the City of London is not to be recognized.

"The attitude of the United States is much appreciated by the British people, and in consequence Americans are far more popular than ever before. Even those who have left "Over There" are cheered and Mr. Reid have in days gone by quite won the hearts of England, the conduct of Mr. Page, your Ambassador, has been splendid, and it is a pity that some disgruntled Americans have seen fit to deplore his actions simply because he declined to be a glorified errand boy to satisfy their personal and perhaps selfish demands.

"Perhaps the only one of my plays which has achieved any conspicuous success in England since 'The Passing of the Third Floor Back,' I mentioned, Mr. Jerome, "is the play which will probably be presented in New York in the near future. This play is called 'Castaways' and deals with the subject of child labor in New York.

"The heroine of the play has gone through the factory mill of New York, and it is around her experience that the play revolves. One scene of this drama I shall read at my lecture tomorrow afternoon before the League for Political Education in the Cort Theatre."

SOCIAL NOTES.

Mrs. Stephen Olin, Mrs. William Earl Dodge, Mrs. Oliver Harriman, Mrs. Henry Clews, Mrs. Amory Carhart, Mrs. Robert Bacon, Mrs. Arthur Curtiss James, Miss Mathilde Schiff, Mrs. Osborn, and Mrs. Pembroke Jones are among the dinner hostesses of Tuesday evening, Dec. 1, who will take their guests to the Russian festival, at the Biltmore, which is being arranged by Miss Barbara Rutherfurd, daughter of Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, jr., for the Russian war sufferers. Tickets for the festival may be had from Miss Rutherfurd at the Biltmore.

Mr. and Mrs. James Harvey Williams of 565 Park Avenue are being congratulated on the birth of a son on Tuesday at their home. Mrs. Williams was formerly Miss Jennet D. Blackwell.

The St. Christopher League will give its annual play on Friday evening, Dec. 11, at the Plaza. The proceeds will be divided between the Red Cross and the two beds the league maintains in the Nursery and Childs' Hospital. The play selected is "The Gray Mask."

The wedding of Miss Marjorie Gould Brownlee and George Stebbins Dickinson will take place this afternoon in St Barnabas's Church at Irvington-on-Hudson. The reception will be held at Gracemere, the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry King Browning. A special train for the New York guests will leave the Grand Central Station at 2:10 and will return soon after the reception.

The Southern Society of New York will give a cotton ball tonight at the Waldorf-Astoria. Mrs. J. Snowden Marshall and Mrs. Lewis B. Woodruff in 1860 costumes attended by colored mammies will receive.

A calico ball for the benefit of the Committee of Mercy will be held tonight at the Persian Garden. Mrs. E. Francis Hyde will entertain this afternoon with a reception at the Colony Club.

Mayor and Mrs. Mitchel at Dance.

Mayor and Mrs. John Purroy Mitchel were among the guests at the first of the series of dances organized by Mrs. Knight Wade and Mrs. Lindsley Tappin, which were held at the Hotel Biltmore last night. The series will be held weekly on Wednesday evenings and Friday afternoons during the season. Among others present were Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Harriman, Mr. and Mrs. Edward A. Manice, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Gallatin, Mr. and Mrs. Augustus F. Kountze, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Fdey, Mr. and Mrs. Donn Barber, Mr. and Mrs. Percy G. Trevor, Mr. and Mrs. W. Scott Cameron, Mr. and Mrs. Waldron Williams, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Wagstaff, and Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Sloan.

MME. GADSKI'S RECITAL.

Aeolian Hall Filled to Hear Singing of German Lieder.

Mme. Johanna Gadski's song recitals are anticipated with eagerness and high expectation by her admirers, who are numerous in New York. They were numerous enough at her recital yesterday to fill Aeolian Hall, not only floor and gallery, but stage as well, where seats were ranged for those who could not be provided for elsewhere. The audience was interested and cordially enthusiastic, making the singer repeat several songs and add others to her programme; and at the proper point in the proceedings overwhelming her, almost, with offerings of flowers.

Mme. Gadski's choice of songs at her recitals is often, and very properly, devoted principally, or wholly, to the inexhaustible treasury of German Lieder. It was wholly so devoted yesterday; it signifies much that a dramatic singer's ambition is to be a specialist in this difficult fie d of art. The choice was such as to bring forward some of the most delightful, as well as most familiar, songs of the Lieder literature. Mme. Gadski is, in truth, not an adventurous explorer in the byways of song; nor is it necessary that all should be such explorers, however interesting their results may be when they are fortunate. Mme. Gadski's groups were of Schumann, Schubert, Franz and Brahms, Wolf, Mendelssohn and Strauss.

Mme. Gadski's voice and style are most familiar to New York, and she gave no new exemplifications of them in her recital yesterday. The most admirable things she did were the songs that required an evenly sustained mezzoforte; such songs have often been found to be especially adapted to her. Thus, Schubert's "Nachtstück"—one of the less familiar in the group of his compositions—and Franz's "Für Musik" could be especially enjoyed on account of the quality and evenness of the tone, the breadth of phrasing, and the simplicity of the expression.

Simplicity of expression was not always a characteristic of her singing yesterday, however, and there was at times something too much of obvious effort to convey the obvious significance of a song. Mme. Gadski's dramatic training, however, often stands her in good stead in working for dramatic effects in this kind of music—if it does not carry her too far and too near the surface. Likewise the breadth of her phrasing was sometimes interrupted by the apparent necessity for a breath where the melodic line did not well suffer it. Nor was the quality of her voice always at its best; there were occasions when there was the suggestion of the throat that was producing it; and there were others when her intonation was not of the certainty for which her admirers so confidently rely upon her. But of the sage-ness and the delight with which much of her singing was received by her listeners there could be no manner of doubt.

The arch expression with which she sang Schumann's "Wenn ich früh in den Garten geh," so pleased her hearers that they induced her to repeat it; and when at the end of the Schubert group she returned to sing his "E-likönig" there was manifest evidence of pleasure. Mr. Walter G. Charmbury played her accompaniments skillfully; but there might have been something more of life and individuality in the introductions and ritornellos.

"COL." FRANCIS FERARI DIES

Trainer of Wild Animals and Former Circus Proprietor.

"Col." Francis Ferari, the well-known carnival showman and former circus proprietor, died yesterday at his home at 156 West Eighty-fourth Street from a complication of diseases. During the twenty years he spent in this country "Col." Ferari exhibited animal shows and animal vaudeville acts in every State of the Union. He was born in England in 1862, the son of an English showman, and married Miss Emma Warwick, daughter of Walter who managed shows at many of the English fair grounds before coming to America in 1864.

Until 1907 "Col." Ferari was in partnership with the late Frank C. Bostock the circus man. After that time he devoted himself to training wild animals and supplying attractions for carnival expositions and country fairs, and kept between 300 and 400 wild animals at his establishment near Trenton, N. J.

Ferari animal shows were familiar to patrons of Coney Island. One of his largest animal shows was exhibiting at Dreamland at the time of the Dreamland fire and many valuable animals were burned to death.

"Col." Ferari is survived by his widow and a brother, Joseph G. Ferari, an animal trainer.

DR. JOHN SHRADY DEAD.

Old New York Physician Was Brother of Late Dr. G. M. Shrady.

Dr. John Shrady, a member of one of the oldest New York families, a former President of the New York County Medical Society, and a brother of the late Dr. George M. Shrady, died yesterday at his home in Shrady, near Stamford, Conn., in his eighty-fifth year. Like his grandfather and great-grandfather, he was born in the old downtown fashionable residence section.

Dr. Shrady was graduated from Columbia University, and then completed the medical course at the Columbia College of Physicians and Surgeons. Shortly after graduating the civil war began, and he went to the front as a surgeon of the Second East Tennessee Volunteers, and served through the entire war. He was captured while helping the wounded on the field of battle, and spent several months in Libby Prison, later being exchanged. After the war he went into general practice in this city, and retired a few years ago.

Dr. Shrady was a member of the Loyal Legion and the Sons of the Revolution, and was at one time editor of The Medical Register. He is survived by two sons, Drs. John Eliot Shrady and Arthur M. Shrady, and two daughters, Mrs. Lorimer Graham and Mrs. Walter G. Buxton.

HENRY C. TINKER DIES.

First President of Liberty National Bank and Prominent Yachtsman.

Henry C. Tinker, the first President of the Liberty aNtional Bank and a Director in a number of corporations, died yesterday at his home, 48 East Fifty-seventh Street, in his sixty-sixth year. He had recently undergone an operation and succumbed to the shock. Mr. Tinker was born in Lyme, Conn., and was educated abroad. He was formerly a member of the New York Stock Exchange and retired from active business ten years ago. He was one of the foremost yachtsmen of this city and owned the schooner Palestine.

Mr. Tinker was Director of the Liberty National Bank, the Fidelity Phoenix Insurance Company, and the Kentucky Coal Lands Company. He was a member of the Riding and Driving, the Downtown, the Metropolitan, and the New York Yacht Clubs. Mr. Tinker is survived by his widow, a son, and daughter.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

At a meeting of the stockholders of the theatrical firm of Moss & Brill yesterday the name of the firm was changed to the B. S. Moss Theatrical Enterprises. A theatre on Broadway in the Times Square section on the order of the Strand is among the projects of the new organization. Sol Brill still retains his interests in the company.

"Kick In," now playing at the Longacre Theatre, will move to the Republic next Monday night, and on Thursday night H. H. Frazee will present "What It Means to a Woman," a new play in four acts, at the Longacre.

Marie Tempest gave a luncheon at the Hotel Knickerbocker yesterday in honor of Henry Arthur Jones, author of Miss Tempest's play, "Mary Goes First."

WOMEN ARE TO VOTE ON CHURCH AFFAIRS

New York Episcopal Diocese Recognizes Their Efforts in Parish Work.

AN EFFICIENCY CONVENTION

New Pension System Urged—Three More Dioceses In New York Proposed.

Women are to be admitted to parish meetings and allowed to speak and vote on parochial affairs of Episcopal churches in New York hereafter. The New York Diocesan Convention held its first day session in synod hall of the cathedral yesterday, and the temper of the 500 delegates was most emphatic for the women. A committee reported unanimously in favor of the innovation, and it was about to be passed when a Poughkeepsie delegate proposed another measure, saying the state law must be changed.

The committee favoring it included the Rev. Dr. T. Henshaw of Rye, the Rev. Dr. Bellinger of Trinity Parish, Francis Lynde Stetson of Incarnation Parish, and William H. Sage of St. Andrew's Parish. The change may result in women delegates to diocesan conventions, always heretofore composed exclusively of men. It was said that women do the larger part of the Church's work and ought to have voice in official affairs.

The convention was dominated yesterday by efficiency. Hardly a speaker omitted the word, from Bishop Greer in his formal annual address to the final hours when canons were revised.

The Rev. Dr. F. F. German of Maroneck was chosen Secretary. Bishop Lawrence of Massachusetts urged the Episcopal Church in New York to adopt a new clergy pension plan which is in advance, it is said, beyond any system yet adopted. The one proposed has been tentatively aproved by the General Convention, but is under scrut.ny and study. The chief feature is not large endowment funds, as proposed recently by Methodists, but the payment of annual sums by parishes based on the salaries of their rectors.

There is a plan on foot to change the lines of Episcopal dioceses in New York. It started with Central New York Diocese, and the New York Diocese named a committee yesterday to take it up. At present there are five dioceses. The desire is to make at least three more, and efficiency was given as the reason.

MOURN LUDINGTON'S DEATH

President Wilson Expresses His Sorrow—Memorial from Friends

President Wilson has written a letter to Robert S. Binkerd of the City Club expressing his sorrow at the death of Arthur C. Ludington of the city, who died in London on Nov. 4. Mr. Ludington was an assistant of the President when he was President of Princeton University. The letter is as follows:

THE WHITE HOUSE.
Washington, Nov. 8, 1914.

My Dear Mr. Binkerd: I have heard with the greatest distress of Arthur Ludington's death. It shocked me very much. I had learned to have a very warm feeling for him, and I had been intimately enough associated with him to feel that I knew him very well. I join with you and his other friends in mourning his death most sincerely.

Cordially and sincerely yours,
WOODROW WILSON.

A number of Mr. Ludington's friends and associates have joined in a memorial to him in which they express their regret at his untimely death and pay a high tribute to him and to the work he did for this city and State. They state that he devoted his whole abilities and energy to public service and that in the struggle for the direct election, direct primaries, the Massachusetts ballot, the short ballot, and legislative reform he played a part that was intensely useful and rarely conspicuous.

They say that he rendered important service to the City Club, the Citizen's Union, the Honest Ballot Association, the Direct Primary Association, the Short Ballot Association, the Legislative Committee of the Progressive Party, the Congestion Committee, and to Governors, Mayors, and members of the Legislature, and that by his untimely death by accident in London his later life would have been of greater value and eminence.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Some Trading Restrictions Lifted and Further Steps in This Direction Expected.

Trading in unlisted stocks plays no such important part in the financial situation as do transactions in listed issues, but the fact that the Curb market was freed yesterday of all price restrictions by the committee which has been supervising the dealings in that market supplied tangible evidence of the rapid improvement which of late has been under way in the financial situation as a whole. It is true that the committee in disbanding recommended that the policy of non-publicity in respect to quotations and transactions should be continued in the interest of the public welfare, but that injunction is hardly binding. It is difficult, moreover, to see how the public welfare will be much longer served by adherence to this policy in respect to securities which the committee in charge has felt warranted in reopening to free trading. But whatever view be taken of that question the lifting of restrictions from this market is proof of the more comfortable and more confident atmosphere which has come to prevail in Wall Street.

The first public auction of securities since the outbreak of the war was held yesterday and events were moving rapidly in the arrangements under way for the reopening of the Cotton Exchange. All of these steps and still other moves in the direction of the resumption of normal commercial and financial activities have for some time past been presaged by what has been going on in the money market, where ease is steadily increasing. It is now possible to obtain loans on securities quite freely even for the purpose of paying off loans elsewhere, and in view of the changed conditions certain out-of-town lenders who were anxious a little while back to obtain repayment of their loans feel now entirely content to allow them to run. That is a very practical acknowledgment that conditions have changed for the better.

The lifting of restrictions from the bond market and the surrender of such control as has been exercised over that department by the Committee of Seven has come to be looked upon as one of the next logical steps in the movement toward natural market conditions. Another step which it would seem entirely safe and reasonable to take would be the daily publication of the transactions which are passing through the clearing house of the New York Stock Exchange. These transactions have so far been carefully guarded, though just why it has been deemed necessary to do this has not been made very clear. There is here no question of any impairment of the situation through the quotation of securities at depressed prices, for, as is well known, the only transactions permitted through the Stock Exchange clearing house are made at or above the closing prices of July 30, less an adjustment of the first dividends which become payable after the closing of the Exchange.

It is stated that dealings through the Clearing House are increasing and the publication of the transactions in that quarter would be much more likely to stimulate than to lessen the current demand for stocks. There is little doubt that the investing public would welcome such information, and the Stock Exchange, if it is to perform fully its proper function, should acquiesce wherever possible in the reasonable wishes of investors in such matters. It would seem that to the extent of publishing these Clearing House transactions the Stock Exchange could without further delay resume the normal procedure.

Arrangements proceeded smoothly for turning over to the Federal Reserve Bank next Monday the reserves which the member banks are called upon to set up with the central institutions. Inquiries made among the banks indicate that the up-State members will in nearly all cases draw on their own cash holdings for the purpose of making these payments instead of drawing on their bank balances. It is expected that the rate at which discounts will be made at the outset will be announced tomorrow after the rates suggested by the several reserve banks have been reviewed by the Reserve Board. No doubt the reduction in reserve requirements and the establishment of rediscount facilities will serve to increase money market ease, but no sudden expansion is desirable and the Federal Reserve Bank can no doubt be relied on not to encourage anything like overexpansion.

MORGAN BANK IN NEW HOME

All-Day Stream of Congratulations Pours Into Broad and Wall.

J. P. Morgan & Co. were at home for the first time yesterday in their new offices at Wall and Broad Streets. The great bronze doors were thrown open at 9 o'clock and the first visitor arrived soon after. There were many during the day, including the heads of practically all the banks in the city who came to extend congratulations.

J. P. Morgan was busy receiving callers all day. His office was banked with roses sent by friends, and there was a life-size painting of the late J. P. Morgan.

The new building is four stories high, and gives 15,000 square feet of banking space, besides a dining room and kitchen, baths and private rooms for the partners. In the basement are the vaults, with the heaviest doors ever built. The foundation walls are seven feet thick and laid so as to permit the addition of additional stories if the need should arise.

The building fronts 132 feet on Wall Street and 90 feet on Broad, and the plot on which it stands is valued at $4,000,000. The building cost $1,200,000.

City of Rochester Notes Sold.

The city of Rochester has sold $200,000 of four months' notes to be dated Nov. 16. They were alloted as follows: $25,000 to George R. Granby & Son, on a 4.59 per cent. basis; $100,000 to Alexandre & Burnet on a 4.85 per cent. basis, and $75,000 to Salomon Bros. & Hutzler on a 4.95 per cent. basis. There were eleven other bidders for the entire issue. The results of this Rochester note sale were cited as offering tangible proof of the rapid improvement which has taken place in the market for securities of this class.

FINANCIAL NOTES.

The Iron Steamboat Company of New Jersey reports gross receipts of $328,085 in the year ended Oct. 31 and a balance of $75,552 after meeting all costs, interest charges, and dividend disbursements. At a meeting of Directors yesterday a dividend of 5 per cent. was declared.

Willard V. King, Chairman of the committee looking after the interests of holders of the 5 per cent. first mortgage bonds of the Buffalo City Gas Company, announced yesterday that a majority of the bonds had been deposited with the Columbia Trust Company. Further deposits will be received until Dec. 1.

Governors of the Stock Exchange at their semi-annual meeting yesterday admitted to the official trading list $18,000,000 general and refunding 4½ per cent. bonds of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Company, $9,906,000 external debt 5 per cent. bonds of the Republic of Cuba, and $7,356,500 United Cigar Manufacturers Company's common stock.

CURB MARKET OPENS AND PRICES ADVANCE

Brisk Buying Demand Pushes Standard Oil Stocks Up from 5 to 20 Points.

GOOD CALL FOR WHOLE LIST

"Over Counter" Sales Gain Strength from the Activity in the Street.

The Curb market was suddenly resurrected yesterday, and throughout the afternoon Broad Street heard again the brokers' voices as in the days before the war.

Standard Oil, United Cigar Stores, Riker-Hegeman, United Profit Sharing, and mining stocks received the most attention after the ban was removed. Brokers reported a good demand for nearly all of the list and prices made substantial gains. Standard Oil advances extended from 5 to 20 points, the largest increase being in Prairie. The impetus of the Curb was imparted to "over the counter" transactions, and when the day ended all brokers were satisfied with the interest displayed by buyers.

The awakening was the first open demonstration the Street has had that trading in stocks and bonds had broken the bounds set on July 30. There had been a gradual widening of trading in recent weeks, but until Curb members gathered in force and began to shout their offerings dealing had been done quietly between buyer and seller.

The Curb got permission from the Committee of Five, which has looked after the Stock Exchange recently, after the Committee on Unlisted Securities had reported that there was no reason for further restriction. This brief statement was issued at noon:

The Special Committee of Five, being of the opinion that the market for unlisted stocks has arrived at a condition that makes supervision of dealings no longer necessary, hereby approves the act of the Committee on Unlisted Stocks in dissolving their organization.

The Unlisted Security Committee ceased to supervise dealings after the statement had been issued from the Stock Exchange. It consisted of H. B. Smithers, A. C. Gwynne, Frederic H. Hatch, A. H. Lockett, and E. R. McCormick, the last named being President of the Curb Association.

In its recommendation to the Stock Exchange committee the Unlisted Committee said the improvement in the financial situation had removed the need for supervision. Previously the members had sought to bring buyers and sellers of stocks together and had suggested proper prices where quotations differed from the last quotation on July 30. The communication to the Exchange said that the committee "wished to impress upon dealers and brokers the importance of continuing its policy of non-publicity of quotations and transactions in the interest of the public welfare."

The Committee of Five did not include this provision in its announcement. Many brokers interested in outside quotings interpreted this omission as a hint that the publication of quotations would not be frowned upon, and in the late afternoon printed lists of bid and asked prices for leading unlisted stocks were to be had at a number of brokerage houses.

When the news of the reopening came there was a round of cheers from the Curb, and in a few minutes Broad Street was full of brokers. The attendance during the remainder of the session was three times as large as on any day in two months.

The market really had been open in a way for some weeks, ever since the authorities ruled that open trading in stocks with a par of $10 or less a share might be conducted if no prices were made public.

A factor in the reopening decision was the recently improved business through the Stock Exchange Clearing House in listed securities. Buying orders at prices established on July 30 have increased steadily and quotations for a number of stocks have advanced. Investment buying of bonds at the July 30 prices or better has been much greater this week than in previous weeks of the Stock Exchange's inertia.

While there is no direct connection between the renewal of unrestricted business in unlisted securities and the reopening of the Exchange, Governors of the board predicted that the widened market would have a favorable effect on Stock Exchange affairs. If it was proved that the demand could more than absorb the supply of stocks offered, it was said, the reopening of the Exchange probably would be hastened by developments in the unlisted share market.

FIRST OPEN STOCK AUCTION.

Phelps-Dodge Co. Shows Gain Over Exchange Closing Price.

The first open auction of securities since the Stock Exchange closed on July 30 was held yesterday at the Exchange salesrooms on Vesey Street. In the list were fifteen shares of Phelps-Dodge Company stock, which, at $200 a share, showed a gain over the price last established on the Stock Exchange, that of $195.50 on July 2, 1913. As compared with quotations for the stock made in private transactions a few months ago, yesterday's figures indicated a decline of not more than $10 a share. This was the roster of securities disposed of:

No. shs.		Par Value.	Per Share.
15	Phelps-Dodge Co.	$100	$200
10	Manhattan Rubber Co.	100	125

$3,000	St. L. Mer. Bridge Co. 1st mtg. 6% bonds, 1919.	Par	& interest

In addition 200 shares of Montgomery Shoshone Company stock, of a par value of $5, brought $3 for the lot, and 1,500 shares of Palisades Printerie, of $10 par, brought $6 for all.

CONSOLIDATED SELLS WHEAT.

One Hundred Brokers Deal in the May Option.

The Consolidated Stock Exchange inaugurated trading in wheat yesterday with an attendance of about 100 brokers. Transactions were confined to the May option with an opening price of $1.31¼ a bushel. Thereafter prices fluctuated withi na range of ⅜ of a cent of the initial figure, and members reported themselves at the end of the day as satisfied with the beginning of business.

The rules followed were different from those employed on the Produce Exchange in that delivery was not limited to New York. Sellers had the privilege of delivering their grain in Buffalo, Chicago, Minneapolis, or Duluth, subject to an allowance for transportation and handling equal to the cost of shipping wheat from these interior markets to New York.

COMMODITIES MARKETS

WHEAT.

The wheat market showed firmness during the first part of the day on reports that Tuesday's export business had been much larger than reported, and values advanced ½@¾c. Commission houses were fair buyers, but before the day closed prices experienced a drop of about 2c a bushel, and while there was a partial rally on covering, final quotations were ⅝@⅞c below the previous close. In the local cash market No. 2 red Winter wheat was quoted at $1.15⅝; No. 2 hard, $1.15⅝; No. 1 Northern, Duluth, $1.18½, and No. 1 Northern, Manitoba, $1.21⅝, all nominal, cost, insurance, and freight, Buffalo.

CORN.

The corn market was firm early on reports of export sales of about twenty-five loads, and on predictions of unsettled weather in the West, but the decline in wheat had a sympathetic influence on values, and late in the day the market gave way and closed ⅛ net lower. In the local cash market No. 2 yellow corn was quoted at 84c cost, insurance, and freight, to arrive, and prime Argentine at 78c nominal delivered.

OATS.

The oats market was moderately active and prices advanced ⅝c to ⅓c early in the day on export sales of about 500,000 bushels, but lost the gain and closed net unchanged for the day. The local cash market was steady; standard quote at 54c to 54½c; No. 2 white, 54½c to 55c; No. 3 white, 53½c to 54c; No. 4 white, 53c to 53¾c; fancy clipped white, 55½c to 56½c; ordinary clipped white, 53½c to 54½c, all elevator.

PROVISIONS.

The provision market was only moderately active, but prices were firmer, with buying by commission houses prompted by firmness in the cash market and steady hog market. Western packers are said to be getting all the hogs they can handle through points not affected by the quarantine, and it was predicted that when the Chicago yards open on next Monday night prices will be at a reasonable level. Receipts of hogs at Kansas City were 12,000; Omaha received 7,000 and St. Joseph 14,000.

COTTONSEED OIL.

The cottonseed oil market was active, but rather feverish, and price changes were irregular. During the first part of the day leading commission houses were active buyers, and the market showed a very strong undertone. Crude oil was firm, at 32 to 32½c, but the consuming demand was not aggressive, and prices lost part of the early gain under what appeared to be selling for outside account. Final prices were 5 points net lower to 4 points higher.

COTTON.

All developments in local cotton trade circles yesterday were in the direction of an early resumption of futures trading, and a prominent officer of the Exchange was authority for a statement that an official notice of reopening would probably be issued within twenty-four hours. With an official market expected within the next few days there was less business in old December contracts on the Curb here yesterday, and the price was a shade easier at 7.50 to 7.55. May futures in Liverpool was also easier, closing at a decline of 3 points from the previous day, but the English spot market was well maintained on a fair volume of business and Southern spot markets were unchanged to ⅛c higher.

COFFEE.

Liquidation through the Voluntary Committee in the coffee market was more active yesterday, sales amounting to 47,750 bags, and it was generally expected that December liquidation will increase in volume until first notice day for December contracts, after which, it is believed, there will be no further obstacle in the way of opening the Exchange for business. Prices in the committee room were slightly lower at the close, December being quoted at 5.55 and July at 6.75 to 6.80. The Voluntary Committee issued a notice to the trade requesting that all those with open contrac

NEW BANK SYSTEM LIMITED AT FIRST

Scope of Deposits and Discounts Outlined by Reserve Board in Official Circular.

CAUTION AGAINST INFLATION

Banks Warned Lower Interest Rates Would Invite Foreign Liquidation —Commercial Paper Defined.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—The Federal Reserve Board today issued instructions governing the discounting operations of the reserve banks at the beginning of business under the new system next Monday. The board lays emphasis on the need of special caution to prevent credit inflation while the European disturbance continues in order to protect this country's gold holdings and the banks are warned that an early lowering of interest rates might invite widespread liquidation of American securities held abroad. The rediscount rates will not be fixed until the end of this week, as the board is waiting for suggestions from the Governors of the regional banks before taking action.

The definition of commercial paper eligible for rediscount with the reserve banks is made general to meet the unusual requirements of the situation now prevailing, and both single-name and two-name paper will be accepted. The board insists, however, that paper offered for rediscount must not include bills covering funds advanced for permanent investment; that maturities must be well scattered, with none running beyond three months, except in unusual cases, and that bills should be essentially self-liquidating. As to the inauguration of the discount facilities the board says:

"While the most acute stage of the recent financial emergency appears to have passed, the conditions in other countries make it necessary that the United States should, to the utmost degree of efficiency, organize and make available its own resources in order that it may provide for its own needs and replace the facilities suddenly destroyed by the closing of so many of the accustomed channels of credit and trade.

"The Directors and Governors of the Federal Reserve Banks at a conference in Washington on Oct. 20 and 21 recommended that the banks be opened without attempting at the outset to perform all the functions and duties contemplated in the act, but that they be prepared to accept deposits of reserves payable in lawful money, to discount bills of exchange and commercial paper, and to accept the deposit for clearing purposes (and have been made) of checks drawn by member banks on any Federal Reserve Bank or member bank in the reserve and central reserve cities within their respective districts. It was the opinion of the conference that arrangements for the exercise of the additional powers granted by the act by the Federal reserve banks be completed as rapidly as the establishment of safe and efficient organizations would permit. The Federal Reserve Board is in accord with these suggestions.

Large Amount Owed to Europe.

"It should be borne in mind that, although our exports are showing a gratifying increase, there is still a large cash balance due to European countries for which gold may be demanded, and that a large quantity of American securities held abroad may be returned to the United States, while on the other hand more than $300,000,000 of emergency currency must be gradually retired. No one can estimate the duration of the war or predict what will be the financial and commercial conditions when peace shall be restored. Our own industrial development has been greatly facilitated by foreign capital, and we have been accustomed to borrow large sums annually in Europe and to sell American securities there, which attracted foreigners because of their higher rate of return, as compared with European investments.

It is probable that at the end of the war interest rates in Europe will be higher than they have been in the past and greater investment returns will be yielded. The tremendous destruction of property and waste of capital will not only check the flow of European savings to the United States, but may dispose foreign investors to return us the securities they now hold. Lower money rates in this country would be likely to accentuate this tendency, while, on the other hand, higher interest rates and larger investment returns on our side would check it.

"The function of the Federal Reserve Banks is, therefore, of a twofold character. They should extend credit facilities, particularly where abnormal conditions now prevailing have created emergencies demanding prompt accommodations and, on the other hand, they must protect the gold holdings of this country in order that such holdings may remain adequate to meet demands that may be made upon them. While credit facilities should be liberally extended in some parts of the country, it would appear advisable to proceed with caution in districts not in need of immediate relief and to await the effect of the release of reserves and of the changes which the credit mechanism of the country is about to experience before establishing a definite discount policy."

Acting under its authority, conferred by Sec. 13 of the Federal Reserve act, which gives the board the right to determine the character of paper eligible for discount, to wit, "notes, drafts, and bills of exchange arising out of actual commercial transactions; that is, issued or drawn for agricultural, industrial, or commercial purposes, or the proceeds of which have been used or are to be used for such purposes," the board lays down these rules:

Narrow Interpretation Unwise.

"Bearing in mind the requirements of the present situation, the board believes that it would be inadvisable at this time to issue regulations placing a narrow or restricted interpretation upon the section defining the character of paper eligible for discount. It has, therefore, been decided not at this time to enter upon the discussion of the question of the single or double name paper, but to admit both forms of bills to rediscount with the Federal Reserve Banks.

"The Federal Reserve Board proposes, however, to prescribe the following basic principles for the guidance of the Federal Reserve Banks and member banks:

"No bill shall be admitted to rediscount by Federal Reserve Banks the proceeds of which have been or are to be applied to permanent investment.

"Maturities of discounted bills should be well distributed. It is the well-established practice of European reserve banks to invest only in obligations maturing within a short time. It is a general rule not to purchase paper having more than ninety days to run. The maturities of these notes and bills are so well distributed as to enable those banks within a short time to strengthen their hold on the general money market by collecting at maturity or by reinvesting at a higher rate a very substantial proportion of their assets. Acting on this principle, the Federal Reserve Banks should be in position to liquidate, whenever such a course is necessary, substantially one-third of all their investments within a period of thirty days. Departure from this principle will endanger the safety of the system. It is observance of this principle that affords justification for permitting member banks to count balances with Federal Reserve Banks as the equivalent of cash reserves.

"Bills should be essentially self-liquidating.

"Safety requires not only that bills held by the Federal Reserve Banks should be of short and well-distributed maturities, but, in addition, should be of such character that it is reasonably certain that they can be collected when they mature. They ought to be essentially 'self-liquidating,' or, in other words, should represent in every case some distinct step or stage in the productive or distributive process—the progression of goods from producer to consumer. The more nearly these steps approach the final consumer the smaller will be the amount involved in each transaction as represented by the bill, and the more automatically self-liquidating will be its character.

"Double-name paper drawn on a purchaser against an actual sale of goods affords, from the economic point of view, prima facie evidence of the character of the transaction from which it arose. Single-name notes, now so freely used in the United States, may represent the same kind of transactions as those bearing two names. Inasmuch, however, as the single-name paper does not show on its face the character of the transaction out of which it arose—an admitted weakness of this form of paper—it is incumbent upon each Federal Reserve Bank to insist that the character of the business and the general status of the concern supplying such paper should be carefully examined in order that the discounting bank may be certain that no such single-name paper has been issued for purposes excluded by the act, such as investments of a permanent or speculative nature. Only careful inquiry on these points will render it safe and proper for a Federal Reserve Bank to consider such paper a 'self-liquidating' investment at maturity.

Statement of Condition Waved.

"Turning now to the question of procedure, it is not thought necessary to impose upon the banks the observance of methods which would involve needless difficulty or delay. It is, therefore, not deemed essential that a statement of condition be attached to each bill when sold to a Federal Reserve Bank. It is, however, thought advisable by the board to require that on and after Jan. 15, 1915, no paper shall be discounted or purchased by Federal Reserve banks that does not bear on its face the evidence that it is eligible for rediscount under the principles and definitions above outlined, and that the seller of the paper has given a statement to the member-bank. A rubber stamp stating in substance:

> Eligible for rediscount with Federal Reserve Bank,
> Under regulations of Federal Reserve Board Circular No. 13.
> Credit File No. .....
> District No. .....
> (Name of member bank.)

is considered sufficient evidence to that effect at this time. It would be understood that the Federal Reserve Bank could at any time call for the appropriate credit file, and it may well be expected that the data thus gathered—particularly the files of more important firms and of those rediscounting in larger amounts—will be so catalogued as to furnish the nucleus of an effective credit bureau which, in turn, may eventually develop into a central credit bureau for the benefit of all the Federal Reserve banks of the system.

"For the time being, certified accountants' statements will not be required. This matter is reserved for regulation at a later date. The required statement as outlined above should be signed under oath and should contain a short general description of the character of the business, the balance sheet and the profit and loss account.

"Assets should be divided into permanent or fixed investments, slow assets and quick assets. On the liability side should be shown capital, long-term loans and short-term loans. Short-term loans should be in proper proportion to quick assets, and the statement should contain satisfactory evidence that short-term paper is not being sold against permanent or slow investments. The statement should, furthermore, show the maximum aggregate amount up to which the concern supplying this paper expects to borrow on short credit or sale of its paper, and the concern giving the statement should obligate itself to obtain the member-bank's consent before exceeding the agreed limit.

"The affixing of the stamp stating such paper to be eligible for rediscount will be considered a solemn and binding declaration by the member-bank that the statement has been examined from this point of view, and that the paper bought complies with all the requirements of the law and the regulations hereby imposed

Limit of Six Months' Paper.

"Six Months' Paper—The law provides that the Federal Reserve Board shall fix the percentage of its capital, (by which is understood that portion of the capital paid in,) up to which a Federal Reserve bank may discount 'notes, drafts, and bills drawn or issued for agricultural purposes, or based on live stock, and having a maturity not exceeding six months.' The law permits the Federal Reserve Board to deal with each Federal Reserve bank individually in fixing this limit.

"The Federal Reserve Board has determined to fix this limit generally and until further notice at 25 per cent. of the capital that shall have been paid in from time to time. For those districts in which, during certain seasons, six months' paper is particularly required to carry through agricultural operations, the limit will be increased from time to time upon requests made by Federal Reserve banks to the Federal Reserve Board."

A supplementary regulation covers the kind of paper which will be admitted to rediscount. All such paper must conform to the following requirements:

First—It must be indorsed by a national or State bank or trust company which is a member of the Federal Reserve Bank to which it is offered for rediscount.

Second—Such bank must make its indorsement, waive demanded notice and protest.

Third—Paper so offered shall be in the form of notes, drafts, or bills of exchange arising out of commercial transactions; that is, notes, drafts, and bills of exchange issued or drawn for agricultural, industrial, or commercial purposes, or the proceeds of which have been used or are to be used for such purposes.

Fourth—Paper in the form of acceptances they must be based on transactions involving the importation or exportation of goods, and must have a maturity at the time of discount of not more than three months to run. They must, furthermore, be indorsed by at least one member bank, and the total amount offered shall in no event exceed one-half the paid-up capital stock and surplus of the bank offering same.

Fifth—The aggregate of notes and bills bearing the signatures or indorsement of any one person, company, firm, or corporation rediscounted for any one bank shall at no time exceed 10 per cent. of the unimpaired capital and surplus of said bank, but this restriction shall not apply to the discount of bills of exchange drawn in good faith against actually existing values.

Eligible for Rediscount.

"Subject to these limitations," says the board, "it devolves upon the Federal Reserve Board to determine or define for the several reserve banks: (1) notes, drafts, and bills of exchange eligible for rediscount; (2) bank acceptances eligible for rediscount.

"The limitations relating to rediscount operations, contained in Section 13 of the act, may be divided into two classes: First, those positive limitations under which such notes, drafts, and bills of exchange may be accepted for rediscount; and, second, those limitations specifically stating what paper shall be excluded.

"If we begin with the latter, we find the very clear provision excluding all notes, drafts, and bills of exchange which are 'issued or drawn for the purpose of carrying or trading in stocks, bonds, or other investment securities, (except bonds and notes of the Government of the United States.') This clause does not require comment.

"The act further excludes notes, drafts, and bills of exchange covering 'merely investments.'

"Any funds employed in agriculture, commerce, or industry are quasi-investments, and the emphasis is, therefore, to be laid on the word 'merely' in this connection.

"From this point of view are to be excluded all bills whose proceeds have been or are to be used in permanent or fixed investments of any kind. 'Agricultural, industrial, or commercial purposes' cannot, therefore, be held to include investments in land, plant, machinery, permanent improvements, or transactions of a similar nature.

"The purchase of commodities for purposes which are merely speculative, and not connected with an ultimate process of manufacturing or distribution, would constitute a 'mere' investment, and bills covering such investments are accordingly not eligible for rediscount.

"In order to be eligible for rediscount bills must 'arise out of actual commercial transactions,' and 'the proceeds must have been used or they are to be used for agricultural, industrial, or commercial purposes.'

"In like manner 'notes, drafts, and bills of exchange secured by staple agricultural products or other goods, wares or merchandise' are eligible for rediscount, provided they arise out of 'actual commercial transactions' covering some particular stage in the process of production and distribution. They are not eligible when drawn to cover merely speculative investments."

Trouble with German Names.

At the recent meeting of the Lace and Embroidery Association one of the matters discussed was the difficulty which certain members are having in getting their cables delivered to their offices in the war area. The difficulty arises from the fact that German names are signed and frequently appear in the messages which must pass through the countries at war with Germany. There was no way of determining on this side whether the cablegrams had been delivered or not, and interference by the censors in some cases resulted in money losses. It was suggested, as a way of remedying this condition, that importers substitute English names for the firm ones and use code names for cities in Germany.

Call Attention to Joker.

An association of women's wear manufacturers, which has been especially active in calling to the attention of its members various ways adopted by retailers to defraud the houses with which they do business, has written a general letter suggesting that the terms on order blanks and receipts be carefully scrutinized before merchandise is shipped. A recent instance of the unfair advantage which the retailer may take of the manufacturer is given in a statement appearing on a receipt issued by a department store for goods delivered for inspection. Once the manufacturer signed this receipt, he could have no grounds for damages, as it was plainly stipulated on the blank that he "waived all claim for loss or damage" after the goods had left his hands.

Buying Fleeced Underwear Now.

Having exhausted stocks of woolen underwear that were available for immediate delivery, representatives of the Governments now at war are snapping up cotton fleeced goods wherever they can be found for prompt shipment. Mills represented here by a prominent agent have just completed the shipment of 40,000 dozen fleeced cotton undergarments from stock, the value of the merchandise being about $150,000. These goods were bought through a middle man, and the receiving country is not known to the seller. The price paid for them ranged between $3.12½ and $3.62½ a dozen. Beside their being taken from stock wherever possible, orders have been placed in this country lately for many thousand dozen of fleeced cotton underwear, deliveries to be made as soon as possible.

Serges Sold Well Yesterday.

There was a pretty fair business in Fall dress goods yesterday in local jobbing circles, one feature of which was a heavy run on serges in one of the larger houses. The bulk of this business came in the shape of duplicate orders from stores in the Middle West and New England, though there was some buying by local and nearby retailers, and was attributed to the cooler weather. There was also a good run on mackinaw cloths and other heavy coatings for retail selling, most of which came from the same sections of the country which supplied the serge orders, and for the same reason. Advance Spring business continues to come in well from the road, and reports from the salesmen indicate a better feeling all around. Reports from the South are visibly brighter.

Comes for Wool.

Selling agents in the piece goods market are having a hard time trying to convince buyers that the wool embargo may mean a shortage of fabric. There are cases that come up every day, however, that seem to bear out what the agents have to say regarding a scarcity of the raw product. One mill representative reports that there is an Italian manufacturer of woolens in this market now who is endeavoring to buy wool here in order to keep his looms busy at home. The agents believe that until it is possible for England to feel assured that no wools will be transshipped from this country to Germany, there will be no lifting of the embargo. The supply of stock on hand is said to be low and any revival in the domestic demand for piece goods will send prices upward.

Dutiable Silk Imports Drop.

Figures compiled by the Silk Association of America show a notable falling off in imports of dutiable silks at this port in the five weeks ended Oct. 31, as compared with a similar period last year. The respective totals were $2,983,381 and $3,323,563, of which fabrics woven in the piece made up $781,936 and $947,514, respectively. The principal declines in value here shown in silk ribbons, artificial silk yarns, silk laces, embroideries and other trimmings, and unlisted manufactures of silk. The falling off in the last-named articles was especially sharp, their value declining from $412,878 in October, 1913, to $5,940 last month. The biggest gains were in velvets and velvet ribbons, and thrown silks. Raw silk imports during the month were valued at $824,151, against $1,159,222 in October last year.

Printcloth Sales Pick Up.

There was a little better business in printcloths here yesterday. Several large orders were placed on wide goods for delivery during the first half of next year, but details of these transactions were not given out. On 39-inch 68-72s some good sales for 1915 delivery were made at 4½ cents, while some odd lots of these goods were disposed of at 4 7-16 cents. A good spot and nearby business was also done on several other constructions, but the inability of some of the mills to cover themselves on cotton limited future business, more or less. There was a much heavier call for sheetings for 1916 delivery yesterday than has been the case of late, some good business having been put through on 48-square, four-yard goods for January-June shipment at 4¼ cents. Sales of the same goods for this year's delivery were made at 4 cents. Closing printcloth prices follow:

Foreign Tariffs Hurt Business.

The tariffs of the various South and Central American countries are doing a good deal in holding back American business there. According to a man well posted on this point, German and English textile manufacturers have made their goods especially to comply with the various regulations, but this has not been done to any extent here. Some of the tariff differences are trivial, but even at that, the addition of an inch to the width of a certain cloth or the addition of two or three picks to the inch in another is enough to make these fabrics pay a higher duty than is required of German and English goods. As a result, many of the Latin-American buyers are holding off until their stocks of German and English goods are cleaned up before coming into this market to replenish their holdings, or, in other words, they are trying to put off as long as possible the higher duties that are often incurred by American-made goods. The exporter in question expects, however, to see a record business from the Latin-American republics soon after the turn of the year.

Receiver for Jarmulowsky.

Judge Learned Hand appointed yesterday in the Federal District Court Eugene Lamb Richards, Superintendent of Banks, receiver for Meyer Jarmulowsky, who traded as M. & L. Jarmulowsky, private bankers at 105 Broadway, and for Adolph Mandel of 158 Rivington Street. The liabilities were set down at about $3,000,000 in each case, and the tangible assets at $200,000 and $250,000, respectively, including the bond given to the State Controller. The rest of the assets consists of real estate, which is considerably encumbered with mortgages.

WOOL MARKET QUIET.

Trading in Past Week Almost Entirely for Domestic Consumption.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Nov. 11.—The American Wool and Cotton Reporter will say tomorrow:

The wool market is rather quiet, manufacturers for the most part buying in small quantities simply to cover requirements for the immediate future. Sales for the week have aggregated 4,500,000 pounds. Trading has been almost entirely for domestic consumption, the type of wools desired for export purposes being pretty well cleaned up.

The embargo on exports from Great Britain and her colonies, together with the high prices being paid in South America for the new wools, and the lack of shipping facilities from the latter country, effectually prohibit the increase of supplies in this market, and is, to a large degree, responsible for the maintenance of prices at their present level. A removal of the embargo would probably have no adverse effect upon prices here, as English factors, without competition from this side, are such keen competitors for the new wools that prices are much higher in the primary markets than a year ago.

The woolen goods market is far from being in a satisfactory condition, though a much better feeling is prevalent. Retailers have increased their business considerably, but there is a decided tendency toward cleaning up old stocks before placing contracts for new merchandise. The greater amount of activity during the past week has been overcoatings, particularly balmacaan cloths.

The women's-wear market shows a slight improvement, due to the colder weather. Fabrics of certain types are selling freely, white chinchillas and novelty cloakings particularly. Importers are receiving fair quantities of goods from Germany, with every indication that further shipments will come forward in the near future. In dress goods, French serges, gabardines, and poplins are selling quite freely.

Sales of cotton goods for the present week have exceeded expectations. The worsted yarn market is improving. Orders are small and scattering, but none the less steady. A slight increase in demand would steady the market and put prices on a firm basis.

ACCIDENT RESERVE PLEA.

New York Railways Directors Argue Against Bondholders' Demand.

Directors representing income bondholders of the New York Railways Company replied yesterday to criticisms made by a committee that is seeking proxies for the annual meeting on Dec. 7 with a view to ousting them. The Directors are Alexander J. Hemphill, Edwin S. Marston, Harry Bronner, and Guy E. Tripp. The committee seeking proxies consists of Darwin P. Kingsley of the New York Life, William A. Day of the Equitable, Haley Fiske of the Metropolitan Life, and Allan Forbes of Boston.

The point at issue is the reserve maintained against accident liability. The insurance interests say this money should be used to pay more interest on the bonds. The Directors, in their circular sent to bondholders yesterday, say they have been charged with bad faith because they have refused to pay out as interest every dollar of income, thus leaving the company with no reserve to meet liability for accidents."

This, they say, "would be a repetition of the operations which were a large factor in the downfall of the Metropolitan Street Railway Company," and add:

> When the new company took possession, the books of the receivers kept under the supervision of the United States Courts showed an accident reserve equal to 8 per cent. of the gross passenger revenue. It was deemed prudent to continue this percentage until experience might demonstrate whether a smaller amount would be adequate.
>
> Later, after an independent examination, Ford, Bacon & Davis, public utility experts, reported that at least 7½ per cent. was necessary without leaving any margin as a factor of safety. Thereupon, at the request of your Directors, the reserve for 1914 was reduced to 7½ per cent.

The Directors say that they believe that to dispense with adequate reserves for accidents will weaken the financial strength of the company.

More Emergency Notes Retired.

Emergency currency retired yesterday amounted to $1,480,000, making a total to date of $44,091,370 out of about $133,000,000 issued to New York banks.

RESORTS. | RESORTS.

Special Announcement
The Marlborough-Blenheim,
ATLANTIC CITY, N. J.,

in order to accommodate its increasing regular Fall and Winter patronage, and also those Americans and Canadians who are prevented by the European war from being abroad, will keep both the Marlborough side and the Blenheim side of the house open this winter, instead of closing one side during November and December, as heretofore.

This will enable the supplying of a PRIVATE BATHROOM with hot and cold salt and fresh water with every room, and for these bathrooms no extra charge will be made during the Fall and Winter Season. The house occupies two blocks of ocean front, and its heated parlor-solariums overlooking the Boardwalk and the sunny south ocean exposure are most attractive.

Exquisite music every evening throughout the year.

White service in both the a la Carte and the American plan dining rooms.

ATLANTIC CITY,

with its invigorating, bright Fall climate, is particularly attractive over week-ends at this season. Golf, roller chairs, theatres, and countless recreations and amusements.

FORECLOSURE SALES.

NOTICE OF FORECLOSURE SALE.—IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE United States for the Southern District of New York.—CENTRAL TRUST COMPANY OF NEW YORK, Complainant, against CHICAGO, ROCK ISLAND AND PACIFIC RAILROAD COMPANY, Defendant.—Notice is hereby given that in pursuance of a decree of the District Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York, made and entered October 10, 1914, in the above entitled suit, the undersigned Special Master will offer for sale, without valuation, appraisement, redemption or extension, at the north entrance of the County Court House, County of New York, Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, Southern District of New York, on the 24th day of November, 1914, at eleven o'clock in the forenoon, 718,535 shares of stock of the par value of $100 each of The Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railway Company. Said shares of stock will be offered for sale in one block or parcel. The undersigned will receive no bid from any one offering to bid who shall not first deposit with the undersigned as a pledge that he will make good his bid in case of its acceptance, the sum of $350,000 cash or by certified check on some national bank or trust company of the City of New York, made or endorsed payable to the order of the undersigned as Special Master, or in lieu thereof $5,000 000 face value of the Four Per Cent. Gold Bonds of the defendant Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railroad Company issued under the Trust Agreement dated August 1, 1902, between said Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railroad Company and Central Trust Company of New York as Trustee, if the coupon form accompanied by the coupon maturing May 1st, 1914, and all subsequent coupons, and if registered accompanied by sufficient transfers; such deposit, however, may be made partly in cash and partly in bonds and in the above relative proportions. The undersigned will accept the highest and best bid received when offered as aforesaid, and will knock down the property sold to such bidder, subject to confirmation of the sale by the Court. On the acceptance of any bid by the undersigned, the bidder whose bid shall have been accepted must forthwith deposit with the undersigned, in addition to the cash or bonds deposited in order to qualify him to bid, the additional sum of $1,000,000 in cash or by certified check on some national bank or trust company of the City of New York, made or endorsed payable to the order of the undersigned, as Special Master, or in lieu thereof, $10,000 000 face amount of the Four Per Cent. Gold Bonds of the defendant, Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railroad Company, secured by the trust agreement dated August 1, 1902, if in coupon form accompanied by the coupon maturing May 1, 1914, and all subsequent coupons, and if registered accompanied by sufficient transfers; such additional deposit, however, may be made partly in cash and partly in bonds and in the above relative proportions. The deposit received from any unsuccessful bidder will be returned to him when the property shall be struck off. The deposit received from the successful bidder will be applied on account of the purchase price. In lieu of any deposit of Four Per Cent. Gold Bonds as aforesaid with the undersigned, he may accept the certificate of any national bank or trust company having its principal office in the Southern District of New York that it holds, subject to his order and direction, the amount specified in such certificate of said bonds with coupons or transfers thereof as aforesaid. Any owner or holder of any of the Four Per Cent. Gold Bonds issued under said trust agreement may bid and purchase at said sale. The right is reserved to the Court to reject any or all bids received and to confirm and direct the consummation of any sale in accordance with the provisions of said decree. In case any bidder shall fail to make good his bid upon its acceptance, or shall fail after such acceptance to comply with any order of the Court relating to the payment thereof or the completion of the purchase, then the sums deposited by such accepted bidder as hereinbefore provided, whether in cash or by check or by Four Per Cent. Gold Bonds, will be forfeited as a penalty for such failure and will be applied towards the payment of the expenses of a resale and toward making good any deficiency or loss in case the property shall be sold at a less price on any such resale and to such other purposes as the Court may direct. If the Court shall not confirm the sale the deposits made by the accepted bidder will forthwith be returned to such bidder. The purchaser must on confirmation of the sale by the Court make such further payment or payments in cash on account of the purchase price as the court may from time to time direct. No more of the purchase price as may not be required by the Court to be paid in cash may either be paid in cash, or the purchaser may satisfy and make good such residue of his bid, in whole or in part, by turning over to be cancelled or credited, as hereinafter provided, Four Per Cent. Gold Bonds of the defendant, Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railroad Company, secured by the trust agreement dated August 1, 1902, and matured and unpaid coupons. The said purchaser will be credited on account of the purchase price for Four Per Cent. Gold Bonds and coupons turned in as aforesaid with such sums as would be paid in cash upon such Four Per Cent. Gold Bonds and coupons out of the proceeds of sale if the whole amount of the purchase price had been paid in cash. The right is reserved to the Court to retake and resell the property upon such notice as it may direct, at the risk and cost of the purchaser, in case the purchaser shall fail or omit to make any payment on account of the purchase price within ten days after the entry of the order requiring such payment. The purchaser or his successors and assigns will not be required to see to the application of the purchase money and shall have the right to enter his or their appearance in the District Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York and to become a party to this cause.

For a more detailed statement of the terms and conditions under which said sale will be made, reference is hereby made to the above-mentioned decree, the original of which is on file in the office of the Clerk of the District Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York, and copies of which may be obtained from the undersigned upon application to him at his office, 52 Liberty Street, New York City.

Dated New York, October 22, 1914.

WAR TAX EXPECTED TO OFFSET DEFICIT

Treasury Officials Reassured by Steadily Increasing Imports, Some Even from Germany.

NEW TARIFF LOSS SMALL

Probably Only $30,000,000 in Normal Times—Income Tax This Year About $40,000,000.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—Treasury Department officials are confident that revenues from the recently imposed war taxes, some of which took effect on the first of this month, will offset the losses in customs duties, and that the deficit from the latter source will not exceed the estimate of $100,000,000 made when the new revenue measure was decided upon. Information which has come to the Treasury Department is that products destined for this county are leaving Europe in steadily increasing volume, and that many shipments of German goods, which were stopped with the outbreak of the war, are now finding their way here.

Normal losses in revenue under the new Underwood tariff law have been less than expected, and but for the disturbance caused by the war the total receipts would not have been greatly reduced. The Underwood schedules went into effect on Oct. 4, 1913, and in the year ended with Oct 3, 1914, duties paid amounted to $264,409,415. In the corresponding year ended Oct. 3, 1913, the duties under the Payne law were $316,711,730, a difference of $52,302,315 in favor of the Republican tariff.

It is pointed out that the showing would be much less unfavorable for the new tariff if accounts should be taken of the losses suffered in August and September by reason of the war. It is estimated that customs were reduced more than $20,000,000 in those months by the war's interference with trade, so that under normal conditions the loss in the first full year under the new tariff probably would not have exceeded $30,000,000. This is almost exactly the amount realized from the tax on incomes, which was designed to meet the reductions in duties.

Income Tax Possibly $45,000,000.

The Government has realized more than $75,000,000 from the corporation and income tax, of which $45,000,000 has been paid by the corporations. The income tax applied only to ten months of the calendar year 1913, and took no toll on the big interest and dividend payments made in January and February. More income is paid on Jan. 1 than on any other day of the year, many business houses distributing their yearly profits at the close of the calendar year. One of the wealthiest men in the country has explained that almost all of his earnings are paid to him in January. A conservative estimate makes the amount of the income tax which will be received for the current year between $40,000,000 and $45,000,000, the lower amount taking account of reduced dividends and interest payments as a result of the depression.

The Department of Commerce issued today its monthly summary of foreign commerce of the United States for September, showing total imports for that month of $140,089,000, a decrease of $31,000,000. For the first nine months of the calendar year imports led those for the corresponding period of 1913 by $83,000,000, while customs receipts were off $44,000,000.

The duties collected in September were $12,225,000, a decrease of $9,539,000. Up to the close of business on Nov. 7 the customs receipts for the current fiscal year were $79,275,000, a decrease of $11,304,000 from the corresponding period of last year. Disbursements have exceeded all receipts from customs, internal revenue and corporation taxes by $62,707,000 for the first four months of this fiscal year.

One Week's Foreign Trade.

The following table, prepared by the Department of Commerce today, shows imports, duties collected and exports for the week ending Nov. 7, 1914, at the ten principal customs districts:

District.	Imports.	Duties Collected.	Exports.
Mass. (Boston)	$1,296,829	$161,957	$2,477,461
New York	16,627,215	2,573,427	17,971,935
Philadelphia	934,412	182,087	1,809,165
Maryland (Balt.)	628,630	128,913	2,751,189
New Orleans	1,649,529	29,321	1,456,047
Galveston	192,159	2,641	4,641,210
San Francisco	1,944,443	76,535	1,310,046
Wash. (Seattle)	1,928,607	15,309	925,555
Buffalo	273,081	27,681	1,246,249
Michigan (Det.)	888,048	31,726	2,035,560
Total	26,129,895	3,125,587	38,645,767

In a note attached to the table the Department of Commerce said:

"The week for which statistics are given above was a five-day week, election day, Nov. 3, being out. It shows a favorable balance on merchandise transactions in the ten customs districts named of $10,515,872. The ten districts cited ordinarily do about 85 per cent. of the import business, and approximately 80 per cent. of the export business of the country."

AUBURN PRISONER ESCAPES

Erie County Convict Scales Forty-Foot Wall and Gets Away.

AUBURN, N. Y., Nov. 11.—John Griffiths, a convict, received here from Erie County, escaped from Auburn Prison last night. Griffiths was a trusty, employed as driver of the prison truck.

He enjoyed the freedom of the front yard, and after putting up his wagon last night he made his way to the stable roof, reaching the forty-foot prison wall, and letting himself down on the outside by means of a rope that he took with him from his wagon.

Prison guards and police of surrounding towns are seeking him.

DYESTUFFS SHIP DUE.

Matanzas, to Dock Today, Has Nearly 3,000 Tons of Colors.

The steamer Matanzas of the New York and Porto Rico Steamship Company, which was chartered to bring over a cargo of German dyestuffs, failed to arrive yesterday, but is expected to dock some time today. The vessel left Rotterdam Oct. 28 and under normal conditions should have docked yesterday.

Herman A. Metz, President of the Farbwerke-Hoechst Company, who chartered the ship in behalf of dyestuffs importers, said yesterday that the Matanzas was bringing between 2,700 and 3,000 tons of colors. Contrary to the earlier understanding, the vessel will bring no chemicals or sugar beet seed, but these latter products were said yesterday to be coming over on the steamer Sun now en route. According to Mr. Metz, the Matanzas's cargo is consigned to seventeen of the principal dyestuff handlers with only one lot purchased direct by a textile manufacturing concern.

Firms having consignments on the ship declined to say what proportion of the shipment is intended for their houses.

Among those receiving consignments on the dyestuffs ship are the Farbwerke-Hoechst Company, A. Klipstein & Co., Geigy ter Meer, Berlin Anal ne Works, Walter F. Sykes & Co., the Keller & Mers Company, Geisenheimer & Co., the Roessler & Hasslacher Chemical Company, B. F. Drakenfeld & Co., Read, Holliday & Sons, Sieman & Elting, the Cassella Color Company, the S. Vila Color Company, the Commonwealth Color Company, F. E. Atteaux, M. Reed, F. Bredt, and Geo. Kohnstamm & Co. While the cargo is valued at several hundred thousand dollars, the exact figure was refused by those in a position to know.

NO MORE FRENCH SPRATS.

And Holland Herring and Irish Mackerel to be Scarcer.

Importers of canned fish are finding increasing difficulty in getting many lines of goods from Europe. The fishing fleets of practically all European nations have been so interfered with by naval operations and mines that work has been more and more curtailed owing to the risk entailed by the fishermen in pursuing their usual vocation.

The threatened closing of the North Sea by the British Admiralty even to neutral navigation, while not effective as yet, adds to the fears of wholesalers in this city that before long fishing operations there may come to a complete standstill. Cabled advices received here yesterday by the Strohmeyer & Arpe Company from packers in France report that the French Government has taken all their supplies of sprats, and that as long as the war lasts there will be no possibility of packing any of these goods for shipment to the United States. There is no catch of this fish at the present time and will not be until the beginning of next year. The Belgian supply usually available cannot be had on account of the war.

Stocks here are almost exhausted, such goods as are on hand being held by jobbers at high figures.

LATEST CUSTOMS RULINGS.

Button Blanks Declared Not Imitation Precious Stones.

Button blanks made of celluloid are not imitation precious stones, according to a ruling made yesterday by the Board of General Appraisers in the protest case of R. F. Lang. The merchandise under review consisted of small shapes of celluloid of various colors, rounded and smoothed on one side and slightly flattened on the other, with a hole in the flattened side. Duty was assessed on the goods according to line-measure as provided for in the Tariff act of 1909. The importers claimed the articles to be dutiable at 10 per cent. ad valorem as imitation precious stones. In overruling the protest Judge Waite remarks that if these celluloid pieces can be said to be articles in imitation of precious stones within the meaning of the law then, in the board's judgment, papier maché, or even wood or clay, or any such substance, could be so used by simply coloring them to represent in color some particular stone.

John Wanamaker and Remy, Schmidt & Pleisener were sustained in protests on the classification of gloves imported under the Tariff act of 1897. The Collector assessed accumulative duty on the goods as ornamented or embroidered with more than three single stands or cords. After reposing for about two years on the files of the board, the customs tribunal finds that the extra assessment was unwarranted and reversed the Collector. Refunds will now be made to the protestants.

Cohn & Rosenberger won lower duty on a great variety of ornaments. The merchandise was imported under the act of 1909 and included lavallieres, long chains, lockets, and other articles, all of which were taxed 55 per cent. ad valorem under the provisions of the law for "articles of personal adornment." The claim was for 60 per cent duty as jewelry.

F. Blumenthal & Co. and others were overruled in protests on the classification of buds, flowers, and leaves, composed of various materials, bound together in the form of pacquets or picquets. They were assessed at 50 per cent. under the act of 1897 as millinery ornaments, and were claimed properly dutiable at 45 per cent. as manufactures of metal, or under other paragraphs of the Dingley law carrying lower rates than assessed.

GREAT POST OFFICE FOR WAR PRISONERS

SEEKS NEWS OF MISSING MEN

Has Staff of 250 Voluntary Workers—Pathetic Appeals from Parents and Wives of Soldiers.

The International Committee for the Red Cross, whose headquarters are at Geneva, Switzerland, has inaugurated its second half century of activity by the creation of a service of which the very development indicates its absolute necessity.

The Central Committee of the Red Cross has become an official mediator between the prisoners of the different belligerent nations and their families. Whether they be of French, German, Belgian, British, Russian, Austrian, or Servian nationality, there are everywhere families who are anxious for their dear ones, and to them all must be extended a helping hand.

The international bureau was started modestly in the Rue d'Athenée with a voluntary staff of six persons. As soon as its existence became known the incoming mail increased in appalling fashion and the committee saw itself obliged to ask the administration of the City of Geneva to place more spacious premises at its disposal. On Oct. 12 the recently renovated Museum Rath was consequently turned over to the committee whose staff of voluntary workers has actually been increased to 250 persons.

Even this army of helpers cannot keep pace with the inpouring work, which includes now daily from 250 to 300 verbal inquiries, 10,000 to 15,000 letters, and 2,000 to 3,000 telegrams. The bureau sends every day 400 to 500 letters with information to the families of the prisoners, also 400 to 800 money orders. It forwards from 2,000 to 3,000 letters and 200 to 300 money orders, with a total of about 4,000 francs to 5,000 francs.

All inquiries for information are entered and classified in alphabetical order. An official request for particulars is then sent to the country which detains the prisoner, and as soon as the answer arrives the same is forwarded to the families concerned.

Gustave Ador, one of the most distinguished politicians and orators in Switzerland, is the President of the International Committee of the Red Cross.

An official of the International Red Cross who arrived yesterday from Europe, where he had an official position in the management of the great Geneva Bureau of Information, said that scores of letters from the highest personages in Germany were received asking information as to the fate of Duke Ernst of Saxe-Meiningen, who investigation proved to be among the slain. Another letter was from Théophile Delcassé, the French Minister of Foreign Affairs, anxiously inquiring for news of his soldier son. Sir Edward Grey, the British Foreign Minister, wrote to ask information of his nephew, who was fighting with the British forces in France.

This official of the International Red Cross, who requested that his name be not used, brought with him copies of letters that had been received in Geneva from the sorrowing relatives of men in the ranks. The letters tell their own pathetic story. Here is one from the young wife of a French territorial:

Factory of Little Bronzes and of Fancy Jewelry.
Paris, Oct. 2, 1914.

Sir: I address myself to your generosity if you can send me some news of my husband whose last letter is dated the 22nd of August. Since then I am indeed desolate, and do not know what has become of him.

This is how I have addressed my letters since that time: M. Leon ——, soldier of the Bicycle Squad, Third Territorials, near Maubeuge, Depot Cambrai.

Thank you for your trouble, Monsieur, and in hope of having your reply, accept with all my thanks my respectful salutations. If you can send him any news, tell him that his little son John, who is 9 months old, is always good, and does his maths. He prays for his father and sends him a big kiss.

(Signed) ——.

This letter is from the father of a French soldier.

Paris, 30 Sept., 1914.

Monsieur is President. Under the circumstances through which we are passing, so painful for all, I come to ask you from your goodness to give me the following information:

My dear child was wounded at the same time and at the side of his Captain. This is the only information I can furnish you, which came to us from a comrade. It is now thirty-nine days that we are without news. In the name of pity and of humanity I pray you let me know the truth, painful as it may be.

My dear child was of the 150th of the line, Ninth Company, Fortieth Division, last garrison St. Mihiel.

The deepest thanks from the heart, from his mother, his brothers, and his sister.

Accept, monsieur, with all my respect, the deep debt of gratitude from a father who weeps. Signed ——.

At the present time the Bureau of Information is receiving about 10,000 letters of inquiry each day. Among the letters are many containing money to be sent to prisoners of war. Likewise there are a great number of letters from soldiers in hospitals and in foreign prisons with requests that they be sent to their families.

Dress Business Spotted.

While the ready-to-wear season is now "between hay and grass" and trade is none too active on the whole, there are some houses that are doing a steady business in dresses. This business is being won, however, only by the constant showing of new things for Fall and Winter, some of which have an early Spring flavor. Many of the skirts of the new models are extremely full, and the whole garments are most liberally trimmed with fur. One of the most novel effects in this kind of trimming, on a street dress, showed a wide band of fur around the bottom of the skirt, fur at the neck, fur at the sleeve ends, and two fur bands around the waistline, about eight inches apart, between which the basic material was freely shirred. It was more truly an adapted Petrograd model than a tempered Paris model. Velveta, particularly black and peacock blue, and faille taffeta, in the leading shades, are well up among the most popular fabrics now being shown, the latter being especially adaptable for use in full-skirt creations.

TO HOLD IMPORTERS' SHOW.

War Will Not Stop Annual Auto Salon at Hotel Astor.

In spite of the conditions in Europe the annual Importers' Automobile Salon is to be held this year as usual. The impression had obtained in motoring circles that because of the shutting down of many of the foreign factories by the war there would be no exhibition this year.

The salon, which will be the ninth annual event of the kind, will be held in the ballroom of the Hotel Astor from Jan. 2 to 9. Difficulties in the way of obtaining cars of Italian and British manufacture have been overcome, and the agents for cars of French, German, Belgian, and Austrian make have decided to put in some of the chassis and especial bodies that they have been able to obtain.

It is expected that nearly all of the members of the Importers' Automobile Alliance, under the auspices of which the salon is held each year, will be represented in the coming exhibition.

ARGENTINA MARKETS OPEN.

Americans Can Occupy Them by Extending Credit, Government Says

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—Dr. R. S. Naon, Ambassador of Argentina, has received a cablegram from the Argentine Minister of Foreign Relations dealing with the present opportunity for American exporters to secure extensive trade advantages in that Republic. The message reads:

"There is at present no congestion of merchandise in our ports. Wheat and flour are not exported at present because of the embargo established by the executive power on those products. Corn, meat, and wool are exported without great difficulty, but we fear the scarcity of the means of transportation for our production in the near future.

"A very effective outlet would be the arrival of steamers from the United States with usual cargoes—that is to say, impure naphtha, wood, iron, agricultural machines and implements, petroleum, furniture, lubricating oils, &c. Those boats would return with our products—that is to say, meat, wool, hides, quebracho, livestock, &c.

"American manufacturers can occupy the place left vacant by European industry in all the branches that have been served by it. The present moment offers to American manufacturers very appreciable advantages for occupying positions, profiting by the present European inability. In order to get these advantages they must take the initiative themselves, sending, at least, small cargoes, and also agents, and especially adapting themselves to the custom of not demanding cash payment, as has been practiced by others with very well-known success."

In view of the opening of a branch of the National City Bank of New York in Buenos Aires the suggestions of the Argentine Government are considered of exceptional importance.

KNITTING TRADE IMPROVES.

Reports to Mills Show Consumers Are Responding to Better Conditions

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 11.—The Philadelphia knitting trade is responding to the uplift in business generally. The improvement is due to domestic consumption aided by some little export business growing out of the European war. The consumer is buying more freely. This is shown in reports from catalogue houses all over the United States to mills here from which

THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

The sale of a new apartment house in the upper Manhattan district, the purchase for improvement of a large Morris Avenue corner in the Bronx and the transfer of a vacant block front on upper Fifth Avenue were among the features which lent a fair degree of activity to the realty market yesterday.

The upper Manhattan deal involved the sale by the Aduls Construction Company of which Jacob S. Kahn is President, of the six-story apartment house on the southwest corner of St. Nicholas Avenue and 186th Street, covering a plot 100 by 100. It has been purchased by an investor. The house is one of two structures lately finished by the selling company, the other being a five-story house on a fifty-seven-foot frontage on the avenue.

Fifth Avenue Vacant Block Transferred.

The transfers yesterday showed that Benjamin Stern has purchased from the Sutherland Realty Company, (L. S. and A. M. Bing,) the block front on the east side of Fifth Avenue between 104th and 105th Streets, fronting 201.10 on the avenue by 100 on each street. It has been transferred subject to a mortgage of $273,000 and the record indicates that Mr. Stern acquired the property in March last year. It is one of the vacant upper Fifth Avenue blocks. The Sutherland Realty Company still owns several lots in the rear including a frontage of 100 feet on the south side of 105th Street.

Builder Buys Big Bronx Plot.

Another interesting deal showing the activity of apartment house improvement in the Borough of the Bronx was announced yesterday in the sale by F. Ashton de Peyster of a vacant plot containing nineteen lots on the northeast corner of Morris Avenue and 168th Street, 475 by 100 feet in dimensions. W. E. and W. I. Brown were the brokers in the transaction. The buyer is a builder who intends to improve the property by erecting twelve five-story apartment houses.

West Side Residence Sold.

A west side residence deal was made by Pease & Elliman, who sold the four-story dwelling at 39 West Eighty-seventh Street, between Central Park West and Columbus Avenue, for Mrs. H. Westheimer to a client for occupancy. The plot is 20 by 100.

Buys Dwelling for Clubhouse.

The Russian Jewish association known as the Agudath Achim M'Block Society, of which Herman Tillat is President, has purchased for its new home the three-story dwelling at 51 East 104th Street, on lot 25 by 100.11, between Madison and Park Avenues. It was bought from the Lawyers' Mortgage Company, which acquired it at foreclosure sale over a year ago for $16,000.

Sale in Harrison Street.

George H. Stege of Brooklyn has purchased from the estate of Morris Goldstein the five-story business building located at 64 Harrison Street. Frederick Southack and Alwyn Ball, Jr., in conjuction with J. N. Kalley & Son, were the brokers.

Twelfth Street Loft at Auction.

The Germania Life Insurance Company acquired the eleven-story loft structure at 24 and 26 East Twelfth Street, with an extension at 88 University Place, on a bid of $200,000 yesterday in the Vesey Street Salesroom. It was sold at foreclosure by Joseph P. Day on an action brought by the Germania Company against the Borough Investing Company. The liens, including taxes, aggregated about $222,000.

Bronx Borough.

The two five-story apartment houses lately completed at 1,033 to 1,043 Boston Road, near 165th Street, have been purchased by an investor from the Mason Construction Company, Hyman Glick, President. They cover a plot 140 by 140.

Long Island.

At Bayside, L. I., the McKnight Realty Company has sold to E. C. Rice of Manhattan Harnden house 1, situated on Chambers Street, on a plot 40 by 100 feet, for $8,000; to J. J. Nevins of Manhattan house known as Harnden house 2, situated on Chambers Street, Bayside, on a plot 60 by 100 feet, for $7,500.

Reeve & Bartlett have sold for Henry Evans to William Gillette twenty-five acres on Peconic Bay, at East Marion, known as the Chauncey farm. Mr. Gillette will improve the property with a residence.

Westchester County.

W. D. Welsh of Manhattan has purchased a large plot in the Greenacres section of the Scarsdale estates. Plans are being prepared for a Colonial dwelling to be erected on the site.

The Westchester Land Exchange has sold at Nepperhan Heights, Yonkers, a lot to Charles H. Wiley, and to William Rassmus of Peekskill two lots on Morningside Road.

Commercial Leases.

The commission clothing house of Wilmerding & Hisset, which has been at 78 Leonard Street for thirty years, will soon move to the uptown wholesale section, having leased for its new quarters the store and basement, 29 by 100, in the twelve-story building at 170 Fifth Avenue, southwest corner of Twenty-second Street. The lease has been made for a term of years through Daniel Birdsall & Co. for the Charles H. Welling Company.

Porter & Co. have leased for D. & J. M. Tonjes to Irvine Murphy the motion-picture theatre at the northwest corner of Eighth Avenue and 124th Street.

Leon H. Slawson has leased the store at 2,279 Broadway to C. Saji Kazukawa, and for Albert B. Ashforth the store at 29 West Thirty-second Street to Hugh Lyons & Co.

The Charles F. Noyes Company has leased the ground floor at 931 Eighth Avenue to M. H. Finkelstein.

Private Dwellings Leased.

Porter & Co. have leased for Sarah Bishop to Annie Robinson the three-story brownstone dwelling located at 151 West 123d Street.

Fish & Marvin have leased for a term the property of H. M. Brinckerhoff at Scarborough, consisting of ten acres, residence, and outbuildings, to Morgan R. Howe of New York City; also, for the Briarcliff Realty Company the Thornton cottage at Briarcliff Manor for a term to Charles H. Riegel of New York City.

William J. Gabel has leased for John A. Baldwin to Dr. Theodore A. Clifton the three-story house 2,081 Ryer Avenue, corner of 180th Street.

$60,000 Washington Heights Mortgage.

Tod M. Morgenthal, Jr., Company has placed a first mortgage of $60,000 for a term of years on the property at the southwest corner of Fort Washington Avenue and 169th Street, running through to Haven Avenue. This comprises the block fronting on the south side of 169th Street from Fort Washington Avenue to Haven Avenue, with a frontage of about 217.8 feet on the street, 145 feet on Fort Washington Avenue, and 162.6 feet on Haven Avenue, being about twelve and one-half lots. It is opposite the new Twenty-second Regiment Armory.

New Officers for Realty Owners.

Stewart Browne was elected President of the United Real Estate Owners' Association at its annual meeting, held on Tuesday evening at the Hotel Astor. He succeeds Henry Bloch, who declined re-election. The other officers chosen for the year were: Charles W. Eidt, First Vice President Henry F. O. Wolf, Second Vice President; Robert E. Dowling, Third Vice President; Winfred Watson, Corresponding Secretary; A. J. Muhlker, Financial Secretary, and John Becker, Treasurer.

Lower Fifth Avenue Hotel.

Plans were filed yesterday for the construction of a twelve-story fireproof hotel on the southwest corner of Fifth Avenue and Eleventh Street. It will have a frontage of 50 feet and a depth of 100 feet, with a façade of brick and limestone, and will be known as the Janvier. The cost has been placed at $165,000. John W. T. Nichols of Oyster Bay is the owner. James C. McGuire & Co. are the architects.

Real Estate Notes.

A meeting of the Harlem Property Owners' Association has been called for this evening at 147 East 125th Street.

The Real Estate Board of New York will give a dinner on Nov. 24 at the New York Athletic Club in honor of Laurence M. D. McGuire, re-elected President, and the retiring Governors, Warren Cruikshank, E. A. Tredwell, and W. J. Van Pelt.

The Bankers Trust Company has taken a mortgage of $100,000 from the James McCreery Realty Company on the property on the north side of Twenty-second Street, 118.3 feet east of Sixth Avenue, a plot 69.9 by 98.9.

CHLOROFORM BAND ROBS SIX HOMES

Climb from Fire Escape to Window Ledges of Two Harlem Buildings.

FINGER PRINTS AS EVIDENCE

Perfect Sets Show Five or More Men Were in Gang—Jewelry and Money Taken.

It was almost dawn when Irving Goldsmith, returning from a late celebration, arrived at his home in the Marconi Apartments, 141st Street and Seventh Avenue, where he lives with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Goldsmith. At the door of the building he discovered that in changing his clothes to go out he had forgotten his keys.

Goldsmith hurried to the nearest telephone booth and called his apartment. For ten or fifteen minutes he tried in vain to arouse some one, and when he could not get a response he was puzzled. He called up several of the other apartments where friends dwelt, but with no better success. Again he called his mother, and this time after five minutes he got an answer.

When Mrs. Goldsmith opened the door he smelled chloroform and observed that his mother was dazed.

"I have a feeling of nausea, and everything looks queer," she said.

The elder Goldsmith, when aroused, was in a similar condition. The father began to dress and at once missed his trousers which he had placed on a chair near his bed. It was discovered then that the apartment had been robbed and the thieves had chloroformed both Mr. and Mrs. Goldsmith. This was on Tuesday morning.

A two-day police inquiry disclosed that not only had another apartment in the building been robbed, but the thieves had broken into four apartments in the Clarissa, which adjoins the Marconi and extends to 140th Street on Seventh Avenue. Apparently all the victims had been chloroformed as they slept.

From the apartment of Louis Bimberg, on the fourth floor of the Marconi, jewels valued at $875 were missing. Bethold Weis, on the second floor of the Clarissa, found that $1,500 worth of jewels had been taken. Michael Dreyspool, also a second-floor tenant, missed a gold chain and diamond cuff links valued at $175. Charles Marx, on the fourth floor, lost personal effects worth $125, and Max Mandel of the fifth was robbed of $47 and a gold watch. Mr. Goldsmith lost his trousers, which contained $15.

Nearly all of the loot had been left by the owners in the bedrooms. All of them had remarked a strange feeling when they awoke, and all of the bedrooms reeked with chloroform.

In every apartment that was robbed the bathroom windows showed finger marks as perfect as those taken at Headquarters. The robbers had evidently stretched one foot across from a fire escape to the window ledges and found an easy entrance there. The fire escapes were reached through the service entrance.

Every indication, the detectives said, pointed to the participation of five or more men in the robbery. With a perfect set of finger-prints in their possession the police were confident of catching some of the thieves quickly.

MASKED MEN ROB BANKERS.

James Speyer's Apartment House Entered Twice by Burglars.

Armed burglars have committed two robberies within a week in the bachelor apartment house of James Speyer, the banker, at 15 East Forty-eighth Street, near Fifth Avenue, and escaped by threatening their victims with revolvers before the police could be notified. Henry Ruhlender, partner in the banking firm of James Speyer & Co., was held up at the muzzle of two revolvers and robbed on the second visit of the thieves to the house, last Friday morning at 3 o'clock.

The first robbery occurred at 2:30 o'clock on the morning of Oct. 31, in the apartment of Edward W. Jewett, a banker, on the second floor. When Jewett was awakened by a noise in his room a man stepped to his beside and, pointing a revolver, warned him not to press the button of the electric light. He went through Mr. Jewett's pockets, and left by way of the fire escape, saying he would return and kill his victim if any alarm was given. Yesterday Jewett went to the Yorkville Prison and identified as the invader of his rooms Joseph Doono, alias Dunoff, of Sixteenth Street, Brooklyn.

A week after the first robbery, Ruhlender, aroused from sleep, saw three masked men in his room. Two of the intruders pointed revolvers at him and ordered him to extinguish the light, while the third man took $170 in cash from a wallet.

William Michaels, 22, an electrician, of 388 First Avenue, and James Brown, 20, of Bridgehampton, L. I., are held on suspicion of being the men who robbed the Speyer building.

The Speyer apartment house is chiefly occupied by wealthy bachelors. Some of the occupants include Justice M. Warley Platzek of the Supreme Court and his brother, William M. Platzek; Dr. Julian A. Gehrung, Carroll Baldwin, Dr. Melvin Whitlock, and Arthur Floyd-Jones.

TO FREE FIREBUG STEIN.

Quick Pardon Expected for Man Who Set 300 Fires.

Isidor Stein, the firebug now serving a prison sentence, who turned State's evidence and gave testimony which resulted in the conviction in 1913 of Henry G. Freeman, George Grutz, Robert J. Rubin, and other insurance adjusters and brokers who profited by the activities of the "arson trust," will probably be pardoned or paroled by Gov. Glynn before the end of his term. In any event, he is not likely to remain in Sing Sing much longer than the New Year, as District Attorney Whitman last June recommended him for executive clemency. Stein may be released from prison within the next few days.

He was sentenced to from twelve and one-half to twenty-five years in Sing Sing for setting fire to an apartment on the upper east side. He began to serve his sentence in April, 1912, but after about eight months another indictment was found against him and George Grutz, an insurance broker. Thereupon Stein went over to the side of the law and gave evidence which resulted in the conviction or confession of most of the other leaders of the band which made a business of setting fire to houses and apartments for the sake of the insurance. Stein said that he himself had set more than 300 fires and that his employers, who numbered nine or more, had started at least 500 others. The upper east side was his principal field of activity, but he set a number of fires in the Bronx.

LOOKING FOR WAR FIREBUG.

Commissioner Adamson Orders Inquiry Into Two Blazes in Brooklyn.

Fire Commissioner Adamson has ordered Fire Marshal Brophy of Brooklyn to investigate two recent fires in that borough which he believes were due to incendiarism, and might have been due to war sympathies.

The first fire occurred on Nov. 3, when Pier 22, Pacific Street, was destroyed. This pier is leased by the Sicula Americano Steamship Company, and the damage amounted to $200,000. The second fire was in a large grain elevator owned by the New York Dock Company, adjacent to Pier 22. This fire, on Monday, caused a loss of $75,000.

The Commissioner refused to tell what information regarding the cause of the fires he had received, but he pointed out that most of the grain sent to neutral ports at the present time was shipped from Pier 22.

PREDICTS A GREAT BOOM.

United States on Verge of It, Says Investment Bankers' President.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 11.—"The United States is on the verge of the greatest prosperity the country has ever known. We have reached the bottom after a period of decline, and things are now getting better every day," said George B. Caldwell of Chicago, President of the Investment Bankers' Association of America, on arriving in Philadelphia today to attend the annual convention of that organization, which will open here tomorrow morning. About 350 bankers from all parts of the United States are expected to attend.

"I do not want to mix in politics, but I think all will agree that we have had about ten years now of agitation, and agitation is not good for business," Mr. Caldwell continued. "It was started by President Roosevelt, continued by President Taft, and seems to be winding up under President Wilson. Many of the new laws on our statute books are untried tools, but the opposition which was born of fear has now given way to a feeling that it is only fair to try them out and a belief that they may prove much more beneficial than at first anticipated.

"Investment bankers are not opposed to the proper supervision of corporations or business. We have opposed most of the so-called 'blue sky laws' because we sought to have a distinction drawn in such legislation between the legitimate banker and the irresponsible promoter."

Asked as to the possibility of an early opening of the Stock Exchanges, Mr. Caldwell said:

"We are not ready for that. There is a very great deal still to be done before it will be safe to reopen the Stock Exchanges. The most important thing is the re-establishfent of credit on a normal basis. It will be necessary for uniform action to be taken by bankers throughout the country to pave the way for reopening the Stock Exchanges, as we will not be in a normal market until they are open."

JILTED, SHE ASKS $50,000.

Miss Bergman Sues Albert Kaufherr, Newark Tanner.

Albert Kaufherr, a Newark tanner, was made the defendant in the Supreme Court yesterday in a breach of promise suit for $50,000, begun by Gladys Bergman, who is 18 years old, and who was employed as a salesgirl in a Fifth Avenue jewelry shop. Mr. Kaufherr lives at 43 Lincoln Park, and became well known in the tanning industry by going to Washington and representing the interests of that industry by trying to keep up the tariff on hides.

Miss Bergman said in her complaint that Mr. Kaufherr paid her marked attention, sent her many boxes of candy and flowers, and frequently entertained her at dinner in the big Broadway restaurants. She also said that he sent her many affectionate letters, which will appear at the trial of the case. Miss Bergman said that Mr. Kaufherr made a distinct offer of marriage, and that she as distinctly accepted it.

INDIANS TRY NEW DANCES.

Modern and Tribal Steps Compared at Tercentenary Show.

A novelty was introduced at the Commercial Tercentenary at the Grand Central Palace yesterday, when Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Castle gave a demonstration of modern dancing as compared with the primitive dancing of the Indians who are one of the features of the exposition. The lame duck dance as they showed it found a counterpart in the wild duck steps of the redskins, and the movements of the Indians showed but slight variations. The same applied to the fox and turkey trot and the tango. The Indians tried the new dances with some success.

The success of the Municipal Band of Havana has been one of the features of the exposition, and as a compliment to the Cuban musicians today has been designated Cuban Day and a special programme of national and patriotic American and Cuban selections will be played by the band.

COPPELLS ADMIT SISTER.

Police Fail to Bar Mr. and Mrs. Connors from Tenafly Homestead.

Mrs. Robert D. Connors, who was Miss Elizabeth D. Coppell, returned yesterday to The Towers, the Coppell home at Tenafly, N. J., with her husband, who was formerly manager of the estate and afterward Miss Coppell's chauffeur. Despite the fact that Arthur and Howard Coppell, brothers of the bride, had set policemen on guard at the place, Mr. and Mrs. Connors were permitted to enter, and presently Arthur Coppell called on his sister.

They parted pleasantly, according to G. Z. Demarest, Mrs. Connors's counsel, but Connors and Coppell did not meet, the former not appearing at the interview between brother and sister.

Connors, it became known yesterday, had a wife when he first went to work for his present wife, but they were divorced a year ago last September.

CITY BREVITIES.

Hugh Mooney of 251 West Thirty-fourth Street, a blind man being guided home from the Charities Department Pier at the foot of East Twenty-sixth Street, was thrown to the pavement, but not seriously hurt yesterday, in a collision of two automobiles at Fourth Avenue and Twenty-seventh Street.

Mrs. Catherine McCullough, 70 years, was burned to death in trying to light a gas jet at her home, 371 Third Street, Brooklyn, yesterday.

Pasquale Gilleberto of 152 Columbia Street, Brooklyn, and Paulo Piersapino of 30 Union Street, Brooklyn, were shot last night by an unknown assailant at Piersapino's home.

Policeman Schmitt rescued yesterday from the East River at the foot of Eighteenth Street Miss Irene Frank, 21 years, of 235 East Seventy-ninth Street, a substitute teacher, who had fallen into the water during an attack of vertigo.

Charged with conducting a lottery, Harry Conover of 503 West 175th Street and Thomas Trangeley of Bloomfield, N. J., were held in $500 bail each in the Tombs Court yesterday for trial in Special Sessions.

Escaping through lack of witnesses from a charge of impersonating an officer, Eugene Oppel, a chauffeur, was rearrested and held in the Court of Domestic Relations yesterday on a charge of failing to provide for his wife.

The new building of the Young Women's Hebrew Association at 31 West 110th Street will be dedicated on Sunday afternoon, Nov. 22.

GIRL BITTEN BY CAT A YEAR AGO IS DYING

Hydrophobia Suddenly Manifests Itself in 13-Year-Old Brooklyn Child.

THOUGHT CURED LONG AGO

Although Wound Was Cauterized and Pasteur Treatment Given, Germs Lingered.

Thirteen-year-old Grace Polhemus, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur A. Polhemus of 372 Monroe Street, Brooklyn, is dying of hydrophobia. She was bitten by a stray cat on Nov. 19 of last year, and, until last Saturday, never was ill. Then she complained of a sore throat, and the disease ran rapidly through its course, until today she is paralyzed from the waist down, and specialists have declared there is no hope for her.

The little girl's case is the more remarkable, say the doctors, because her wound was cauterized within five minutes after the cat bit her, and little more than twelve hours later she had begun the Pasteur treatment, which was continued through all its phases. The only explanation of the physicians is that the child was otherwise in such perfect health that the germs of hydrophobia were unable to make themselves felt until the little girl's general condition fell to below normal.

The child was playing in the front yard of her home when the cat, a stray animal, passed, and she stooped to pet it. It nipped her on the right wrist, and her mother ran with her to the home of Dr. Theodore L. Vosseler, a few doors away at 290A Monroe Street. He cauterized the wound. The cat was found, and the Health Department officials pronounced it a victim of hydrophobia. It was killed, and no precaution was neglected to insure the child against the disease.

Dr. Vosseler was summoned again last Sunday when Grace began to have convulsions, and on his advice Prof. Frederick Tilney of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, a specialist on nervous disorders; Dr. Frank Fielder, head of the Research Laboratory of the Health Department, and Dr. L. Albert Thunig of 1,069 Bergen Street, pathologist of St. John's Hospital, were called in consultation. They remained in the Polhemus home most of Sunday night, and when they left they had decided positively that it was hydrophobia with which the child was suffering.

Then began a treatment consisting of injections of a preparation of quinine. The convulsions, more frequent and more severe on Monday, subsided Tuesday and disappeared yesterday except for one, but the doctors confessed this was not a good sign. They said it showed the disease was following its usual course and convinced them that there was no hope for the little girl.

HAMMERSTEIN LOSES SUIT.

Opera Director Gets $4,150 Judgment on Contract.

A jury in the Federal District Court, before Judge Thomas yesterday, awarded $4,150, with interest, to Simon J. H. de la Fuente, at one time director of French opera at the Manhattan Opera House, who sued Oscar Hammerstein for $5,700 and interest for breach of contract.

Mr. Hammerstein contested the claim on the ground that the renewal of Mr. de la Fuente's contract at $275 a week had been obtained by false representations. He asserted that the director had appeared before him at rehearsal in gorgeous apparel and had explained that he was going to see Mr. Gatti-Casazza to complete a contract with him for the production of "Electra" at the Metropolitan Opera House, which was not true.

Mr. Hammerstein will ask for the setting aside of the verdict on the ground that it is against the weight of evidence. Judge Thomas set Nov. 23 for the argument on the motion.

WILLS $20,000 TO ACADEMY.

Phillips Exeter, Bowdoin, and Yale Share in Dr. Lynde's Estate.

The will of Dr. George S. Lynde, diagnostician in the Health Department when he died on Nov. 5, was filed for probate yesterday. The amount of the estate is not given. Dr. Frederick H. Dillingham is named as executor, and $3,000 with all wearing apparel, jewelry, and furniture are left to him.

Dr. Lynde inherited the entire estate of his mother, Mrs. Mary F. Lynde, and from this he bequeathed to his niece, Mary Lillian Lynde of Worcester, Mass., an annuity of $300. The Bangor, Me., public library gets $5,000 subject to an annuity of $200 to John Lynde Spaulding for life. Bowdoin College gets $10,000 and Phillips Exeter Academy gets $20,000, subject to annuity of $900, both of which are in favor of Mary Lillian Lynde. The residuary estate goes to Yale University.

ROAD CONGRESS A WINNER.

Not Surpassed by Great Foreign Exhibits, Says President Fletcher.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTA, Ga., Nov. 11.—The Atlanta session of the American Road Congress is proving remarkably successful. Austin Fletcher, President of the congress, believes it has set a world's record.

"It is the greatest exhibit of the kind ever assembled," he said today. "Even the big foreign road congresses do not surpass it."

The exhibits, made by more than 100 manufacturers of road and building materials are drawing thousands of visitors.

The Rochester delegation is making a good fight for the 1915 meeting of the congress. New York State is cooperating. The New York State exhibit adjoins the Rochester booth, and consists of a model of Storm King Mountain and the road which is to be built around it.

Today's meeting of the congress was given over to practical and specific questions in road-building, the general topic being "Construction and Maintenance."

Col. Edward M. Bogelow, State Highway Commissioner of Pennsylvania, presided at the morning session. Addresses were made by Austin Fletcher, President of the congress and State Highway Engineer of California; W. E. Atkinson, State Highway Engineer of Louisiana; A. D. Williams, State Highway Engineer of West Virginia, and S. Percy Hooker, State Highway Engineer of New Hampshire.

Discussing light traffic roads, Mr. Hooker said that with the immense mileage of roads in the United States it seems to me perfectly clear that even in the wealthier States a larger proportion of the roads will never be improved under the types which are now considered necessary for their improvement, and that 90 per cent. of the entire mileage will be unimproved if it is necessary to provide them with the higher types of construction. "My impression is that there must be a revulsion of feeling which will compel more mileage and less cost. You must use the material which is comparatively local, and the treatment of each section will be governed by its own peculiar conditions."

At the afternoon session President Fairfax Harrison of the Southern Railway was the first speaker, taking as his subject "The Selection of Roads for Improvement." President Harrison's view is that roads leading from the towns to the farms are most important when a limited amount of money for the purpose is available.

Henry G. Shirley, Chief Engineer of the Good Roads Committee of Maryland, made a strong plea for adequate laws to regulate the heavy loads that have to be borne by the roads.

George W. Cooley, State Highway Engineer of Minnesota, in a paper on "Maintenance of Earth Roads," recommended the use of the road drag.

W. M. Acheson of Buffalo, Division Engineer for the New York Highway Commission, told of the road work being done in his State. He stated there was a popular belief that concrete roads were hard, but such was not the case. He said the roads in his State had been built on a grade up to 8 per cent., and that the horses' feet were found to hold perfectly on a grade of that percentage.

A. N. Johnson of the Bureau of Municipal Research of New York City, who is a road expert, today inspected a concrete road in the suburbs of Atlanta, built by convict labor. Mr. Johnson was greatly surprised at the thorough construction.

HEARINGS ON THE BUDGET.

Aldermen Will Begin a Scrutiny to Last Several Days.

The Aldermen will begin public hearings today on the 1915 budget in the Aldermanic Chamber. It is not likely, however, that the items of salary increases for George Terrill and Tilden Adamson of the Bureau of Standards and Contract Supervision of the Board of Estimate will be reached for several days.

The appropriation for the Board of Estimate is $635,438. Last year it was $385,851. The estimates for all departments were tabulated in time to be printed for the benefit of taxpayers except for the Finance Department and the Board of Estimate. These were not tabulated until Nov. 3, three days after the budget was passed by the Board of Estimate.

Timely

At this time of economy—when efficiency and concentration of effort are the order of the day—it is fortunate for newspaper advertisers that The New York Times now embraces in its 275,000 circulation—both daily and Sunday—a mass of newspaper readers that a few years ago could be reached only by the use of four high-class newspapers.

GENERALS LINE UP FOR MEXICAN WAR

Struggle of Large Forces Now Seems Certain—Carranza Declared a Rebel.

VILLA MOVING SOUTHWARD

Both Sides Claim Some of the Strong Leaders — Big Battle May Be Fought Near Queretaro.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—Civil war, perhaps with larger armies in the field than Mexican civil wars have ever seen before, has broken out close to Mexico City, according to information given out tonight by R. Zubaran Capmany, head of the local Constitutionalist Agency. According to Mr. Zubaran's information, which is supported by personal telegrams from Gen. Carranza, the Generals who had asked Gen. Carranza to resign in favor of Gen. Gutierrez as an act of patriotism, had changed their attitude since the appointment by the convention at Aguascallentes of Gen. Villa as Commander in Chief of the armies opposed to Gen. Carranza and had now determined to support the First Chief to the end.

While the view of official Washington is undoubtedly that Gen. Carranza will not be able to make headway long against the forces at Gen. Villa's disposal, Mr. Zubaran said tonight that the Generals who had declared for the First Chief commanded all the Constitutionalist troops under arms except those in the Division of the North, personally commanded by Gen. Villa. The indications are that the opposing commands will come to grips before long, as Gen. Villa is reported marching on Queretaro, about 150 miles from the capital.

One of the telegrams from Mexico City made public tonight by Mr. Zubaran says:

"Yesterday morning an important group of Generals, headed by Pablo Gonzales, asked the First Chief to retire. The Chief answered them, stating his reasons for not complying, and requested to know if they intended to remain loyal to him.

"In the afternoon the convention declared the First Chief to be a rebel and named Villa as Chief of the Army to lead the attack on him. This appointment unveiled the insincerity of Villa's resignation and the fact that it had been used as a subterfuge to trick the Carranza delegates at the convention.

"On the receipt of this information the Chiefs who in the morning asked Carranza's resignation withdrew their request and informed him that they would resolutely support him and ignore the actions of the convention. These men were Gens. Gonzales, Obregon, Villareal, Hay, Blanco, de la Garza, Saucedo, Marial, Menchaca, and Campos."
